SPICY SCANDAL.

PEER IS INVOLVED

Duke of Westminster a Witness.

England's Richest Noble to Testify in Breach of Promise Suit.

Mrs. Atherton Makes Trouble for the Hon. John Yarde-Buller.

Defendant Was Co-respondent in Her Divorce Suit Last Year.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Smart society is looking eagerly forward to the most highly-spiced feast of scandal which the law courts have spread before it for a long time.

Mrs. Atherton's breach of promise suit against the Hon. John Reginald Yarde-Buller, which is scheduled for an early trial, abounds in elements as odoriferous as a haunch of venison that has been hung up for a month.

Both the plaintiff and defendant have reached the advanced stage of social decomposition when they have no longer any reputations left to lose. It is the fact that the young Duke of Westminster, the richest peer in the United Kingdom, is to be brought into the case as a witness, which imparts such a rare seasoning to the carrion banquet. For the Duke is to be put on the rack to draw from him the story of his relations with the beautiful siren who now claims $100,000 for the damage done to her tender affections by the Hon. John.

KEY TO MYSTERY.

Mrs. Atherton is the divorced wife of Col. Thomas James Atherton. He obtained a divorce from her last year. The evidence was brief and conclusive. There was no defense.

The Hon. John, who is the son and heir of Lord Churston, was the co-respondent. Not long ago, it will be remembered, public announcement was made of his marriage to Miss Denise Orme, a pretty actress. It had been previously kept secret for nearly six months. People wondered why. Mrs. Atherton's breach of promise suit furnishes the key to that mystery.

The story of how the Duke became mixed up with Mrs. Atherton goes back much further. In 1900, when he had barely attained his majority, the Duke, with many other plucky scions of aristocracy, went to South Africa to help fight the Boers. At that time Col. Atherton was there. With him was his wife. Her intrigues and "affaires" were even then notorious and were much discussed in army circles.

CAPTURES THE DUKE.

As soon as the richest peer in the United Kingdom came within range of her she spread her snares to capture him. She was an experienced woman of the world, who, to rare personal charm, added extraordinary skill in the art of fascination. He was—well, what most lads are at one and twenty.

He had a sweetheart at home, Miss Shelagh Cornwallis West, a very pretty and charming girl. They had been playmates in childhood and lovers before they entered their teens.

Had Shelagh been there she might have saved him from the machinations of the older woman. Mrs. Atherton knew of the engagement. That knowledge merely prompted her to take the fullest possible advantage of the clear field which the girl's absence afforded her. She broke with all her other admirers and devoted herself exclusively to the young Duke. He lost his head completely and threw discretion to the winds.

ELOPE BEFORE BATTLE.

One night they eloped, notwithstanding that there was a battle to be fought next day. Had he not been a Duke his neglect to obtain leave of absence might have entailed serious consequences. He returned to his post soon afterward. Meanwhile Mrs. Atherton had extorted a promise from him that as soon as her husband had divorced her he would marry her.

But Col. Atherton didn't sue for a divorce then. He was very much in love with his wife. He forgave her. Though he may have had scriptural warranty for pursuing that course, society considered his conduct rather more scandalous than Mrs. Atherton's.

Meanwhile, Miss Shelagh at home was having a bad time of it, for, of course, there were kind friends who told her all about the Duke's entanglement with Mrs. Atherton. She declared she would never speak to him again; and as for ever marrying him, that was impossible. He had broken her heart, and she would never marry anybody. Her mother took a different view of the matter. Dukes, especially rich Dukes, were not to be picked up every day. She set herself to spoil Mrs. Atherton's game.

INTERVIEWS WALES.

Her first move was to seek an interview with the King, who at that time was still Prince of Wales. Being an old friend of his, that was easily arranged. As a result the Duke was summoned from South Africa.

As soon as his ship reached Southampton, one of the Prince's equerries seized upon him and escorted him to Marlborough House, London, the residence of the Prince of Wales. There the Prince talked to him as an elderly man of the world, wise and kindly, and not without experience in the ways of the Mrs. Atherton type of sirens might be expected to talk to

The Hon. John Yarde-Buller (lower right-hand corner,) son and heir-apparent of Lord Churston and husband of Miss Denise Orme (upper lefthand corner,) the actress, whom he married only a few weeks ago, will be the defendant in an interesting action for breach of promise which has been brought against him by Mrs. Atherton, and which will be heard during the approaching Michaelmas term. Mrs. Atherton, whose portrait is the large one printed above, was divorced from her husband last year, Captain the Hon. J. Yarde-Buller being the co-respondent. She now claims £20,000 from Capt. Yarde-Buller for breach of promise of marriage.

EXTRA SESSION.

GOVERNOR INTIMATES HE MAY ACT SHORTLY.

Is Expected to Call Extra Session of the Legislature by Thursday or Friday of This Week—Hears from Los Angeles Bankers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gov. Gillett left town this afternoon, and is probably on his way to Sacramento; but before going, it is understood, he indicated that he would call an extra session Thursday or Friday of next week. Hence the Legislature will probably be in session by the 18th.

At the conclusion of the conference yesterday the only point which is believed to have restrained the Governor from announcing a decision to call an extra session was his uncertainty as to the attitude of interior bankers. He sent last evening for expressions of opinion on the question, and already telegrams from Los Angeles, Sacramento, Redding, San José, Stockton and other cities have been received, expressing the sentiment that an extra session is a necessity. From this, it seems a certainty that the Governor will yield to the pressure and issue the call.

When the call is issued, the legislators will be limited to the consideration of four propositions: First, there will be the proposition of authorizing the Governor to extend the time for the payment of taxes; next, the ratification of the San Francisco charter amendment adopted at last Tuesday's election; then, the repassage of the water-front bond-issue law will be taken up, the bill as originally passed having been invalidated by a printer's error; lastly, there will be considered the Islais Creek bill, upon which the progress of much-needed improvements depend.

The favorable attitude of the Governor toward the extra session has tended to relieve the bankers, who would have found the task of raising $8,000,000 for the payment of taxes a Herculean job, under present conditions.

BUILDING NEARLY READY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 9.—"If it becomes necessary to hold an extra session of the Legislature, it will meet in the Capitol building," said E. F. Cooper, secretary of the State Capitol Commission, today. "The work of remodeling the chambers has advanced to a stage where they can be made comfortable in the ten days' notice which must be given before an extra session can be convened."

Secretary of State Curry agreed with Mr. Cooper, and if an extra session becomes necessary, it will be held in the Capitol building.

MONDAY A HOLIDAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Upon his return to this city this morning, Gov. Gillett said that nothing had been done in the matter of calling an extra session of the Legislature, and that nothing would be done until the middle of next week. He left San Francisco early yesterday morning and spent the day in his temporary office at the mansion. Gov. Gillett said:

"There is nothing definite as to whether an extra session of the Legislature will or will not be called. If the session is called at all, it will not be until the middle or last of next week. I have not heard anything new from San Francisco today, as I left the city on an early train. The extra session will not be called unless it can be shown to be an absolute necessity."

A proclamation was issued today making Monday a legal holiday.

"MARKING TIME."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—In anticipation of a special session of the Legislature, which bankers and city officials confidently expect Gov. Gillett to call, the election commission will begin early Monday morning the canvas of ballots on the charter amendments and the official certification of the majorities given them by the voters will be ready in a fortnight if the General Assembly is summoned for November 20.

"We are all marking time, waiting on the Governor," said I. W. Hellman, Jr., president of the Wells-Fargo Nevada National Bank. "We believe there will be an extra session of the Legislature."

The issuance of clearinghouse certificates was the only thing of interest done today in banking circles. These certificates, unlike those of the $5, $10 and $20 denominations, do not require the signatures of the bankers, as they are lithographed. Ninety thousand of the $1 issue were put out by the clearinghouse today and all the banks received their allotments. In every bank the larger denominations of the new issue, done in two colors, were signed numerously.

The United States sub-treasury transferred $550,000 from New York to San Francisco banks today, $30,000 of which was transferred to a bank in Nevada.

TELLS OF FINDING SKELETON.

Deputy Sheriff on Witness Stand in Trial of Steve Adams at Rathdrum.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

RATHDRUM (Idaho) Nov. 9.—At the trial of Steve Adams this morning, for the alleged murder of Fred Tyler, C. H. Williams, a deputy sheriff, took the stand.

Williams said he had taken a trip into the Marble Creek country for the purpose of looking up a skeleton reported to have been found there. He met Mr. Simpson on the trail that led to the place where the body was found. When he arrived at the place described, he found the skeleton. The body was badly decomposed and was mostly dry bones. There was a hole in the skull. The skull was exhibited and identified.

Dr. E. D. Keys, Coroner of Shoshone county, was the only important witness called at the forenoon session. He testified that he accompanied Deputy Williams when the latter brought the body out of the Marble Creek country. The fractured skull and broken jawbone, according to Dr. Keys, were caused by some act of violence.

Bruce Worstell, a Wallace undertaker, who buried the body, testified that after Adams had confessed and the preliminary examination had been called, he and Dr. Keys caused the body to be exhumed.

TOLSTOI TO ROCKEFELLER.

Russian Savant Replies to the American Croesus by Quoting Scripture.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Le Matin publishes a letter from Count Tolstoi, answering a question which, it is alleged, John D. Rockefeller asked in a letter to Tolstoi.

Rockefeller asked Tolstoi his views on the best way to employ wealth for the greatest good of humanity, and Tolstoi's answer is as follows:

"The question you address to me is to know in what measure wealth is compatible with the Christian doctrine which you profess. I make this answer: Apart altogether from the teaching of the Gospel, plain common sense tells us that wealth in itself is incompatible with an absolutely good life. In conversation with the rich young man in the Gospel, the truth is expressed with such precision that it is impossible to misunderstand it. There it is said:

"'If thou wilt be perfect, sell all thou hast and give to the poor and follow Me.'"

IS IT POSSIBLE!

GOULD DOUBTS WEDDING STORY.

IS "SHOCKED" AT REPORT THAT SISTER IS MARRIED.

Declares He Will Make Further Inquiries Into News That Divorced Wife of Count Boni de Castellane Has Become a Bride Once More.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When a copy of a cable announcing the marriage of his [illegible]

"This report is news to me. If there has been a wedding I am as much surprised as any one. Indeed, I am shocked at it. I do not credit the information but I shall make further inquiries."

One year ago, all but a few days, the Paris court granted Mme. Gould the divorce for which she sued when further life with the Count became unbearable. The decision of the court provided that she should have the custody of their three children, but also that they could not be taken from France without the consent of their father. This was the only concession granted the Count, his demand for an annuity of $50,000 being rejected by the court.

Details of the causes which led to the divorcing of the de Castellanes are of too recent happening to require any extended review. The complaint alleged everything from squandering his wife's fortune and striking her to infidelity.

The case attracted world wide attention, the Count's novel pleas for reinstatement and his promises to cut loose from his old associations forming an interesting part of the proceedings.

Several times since the de Castellanes separated it was reported that members of both families were endeavoring to arrange a reconciliation between the pair for the sake of their three children. There was never any question of the Count's affection for his children, and following the separation he has never missed the opportunity to see them twice a week as provided in his wife's decree. This was one of the strong reasons for believing that a reconciliation was under way.

Mme. Gould and Count Boni de Castellane were married in this city on March 4, 1895. No marriage that has ever taken place in this country was so much discussed. For weeks preceding the ceremony the papers carried columns daily. Two marriage ceremonies were performed, Archbishop Corrigan officiating at the first, which took place at noon in George Gould's home on Fifth avenue. Later the same day Judge Andrews performed a civil ceremony.

Society from all parts of the country was present and the rush of crowds on New York's most fashionable thoroughfares prior to and after the nuptials nearly exhausted the resources of the police department.

SUES TO FORECLOSE MORTGAGE.

National Trust Company Begins Action Against Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—An action of foreclosure of a mortgage which it held as trustee against the property of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, has been begun by the National Trust Company in the United States Circuit Court.

The mortgage was given to secure an issue of bonds that should at no time exceed $65,000,000.

The action was recently commenced by the Morton Trust Company against the receivers of the Metropolitan, asking that the profits and earnings of the road be applied to the payment of interest for lease and rentals and be provided for in the mortgage.

The receivers by order of the court are made parties to the action.

POLITICAL CRISIS.

THIRD TERM CRUSADE.

To Urge President to Run Again.

Politicians of New York Will Make Uninvited Visit to Washington.

Seek to Force Hand of Chief Executive on Question of Renomination.

Belief Is Expressed That He Is Giving Issue Serious Thought.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the announced determination of New York Republican leaders to come to Washington next week, uninvited, to confer with the President, politicians in Washington see a crisis before the Executive on the third-term question.

Incidentally, it may be noted that the general current of opinion in Washington at the present time is that since he returned to Washington from his western trip the President is a changed man on the third-term question, and the belief is openly expressed that President Roosevelt is now giving this issue some thought, whereas, a few weeks ago, he was irrevocably and tenaciously clinging to his original pronouncement of three years ago that he would not submit to a renomination under any circumstances.

TO FORCE PRESIDENT'S HAND.

It is believed here that the New York politicians are coming to Washington prepared to force the hand of the President on the third term question. The situation in New York as between the friends of the President and the friends of Gov. Hughes demands the definition of the issue in that State at an early date, if the friends of the administration hope to [illegible] Republican leader in New York, for the reason that the politicians are on the fence, watching the President with one eye and the Governor with the other. To date neither the President nor the Governor has signified his intention of taking hold of the helm, either personally or through a designated agency.

There are quarrels in the party that must be settled by a predominating force if harmony is to be had next year.

HUGHES'S POPULARITY GROWS.

Gov. Hughes, personally, is giving no satisfactory answer to the politicians who would sound him as to his future, but he is growing so steadily in popularity among all classes that the organization leaders placed in control by the President's friends fear that a call to arms in his behalf by any Republican political leader might produce a stampede.

It is the belief in Washington that upon the return of Secretary Taft from abroad the President will be compelled to make a new statement of his position. It is known that the pressure upon him from Senators, Representatives in Congress and other public men active in politics, all of whom are occupying precarious political positions, by reason of the prevailing uncertainty concerning the attitude of the President, is becoming so insistent that a crisis cannot long be avoided.

PAY LONG DEFERRED.

Bryan and Other Officers Third Nebraska Regiment Have Not Furnished Necessary Data.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Officers of the Third Nebraska Regiment in the Spanish-American War, headed by Col. W. J. Bryan, must furnish proofs of the dates of their services before the government will pay them for the time that elapsed between the actual date of enrollment in the State organization and the time they were formally mustered into the service of the United States.

The unpaid officers are apparently not worrying nearly as much as the attorneys who have the matter in hand and who will get 20 per cent. commission when the money is paid over by the War Department.

Some of the officers, notably Col. Bryan and Gov. Sheldon, who was company captain, appear to have no recollection as to when they were elected officers in the Third Nebraska.

A year or so ago, when Bryan was questioned about it by Adjt.-Gen. Culver, he told Culver to fix up any sort of report that suited, so long as it was honest, but Culver declined to do it, and he left the matter as a legacy unsolved to his successor.

INCUBATOR BABY CASE.

United States Court Takes Charge of Matter and Orders Infant Produced.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Nov. 9.—The United States Circuit Court here today took charge of the famous incubator baby, the possession of which has been bitterly fought in many courts of the country during the past two years. On application of James and Stella Barclay, the foster parents of the baby, a writ of habeas corpus was issued and after a long search the officers found the child in Topeka, near Washburn College.

The court's order is that the child be produced in court on November 12.

FINANCIAL.

BANKERS IN PERIL.

Investigation May Show Guilt.

Experts Will Know Today or Tomorrow If Laws Were Violated.

Conduct of Five Institutions Has Been Under Close Scrutiny.

Report of Examiners Will Determine Course Before Grand Jury.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An expert examination of five national banks which has been in progress since the beginning of the panic, will be finished tomorrow or Monday. Upon the report of the examiners will depend whether or not United States Dist.-Atty. Stimson will go before the grand jury. The question resolves itself into the extent, if any, to which the officers and directors of the banks in question have overstepped the restrictions placed by the United States banking laws around the capital stock and surplus of national banks. If the officers of a bank borrow more than 10 per cent. of the combined capital stock and unimpaired surplus of their bank on their own paper they make themselves liable to punishment.

Officers and directors of the Mercantile National Bank, the National Bank of North America, the Consolidated National Bank, the New Amsterdam National Bank and the Garfield National Bank have borrowed money from these institutions. The investigation, which has been conducted by National Bank Examiners George T. Cutts and C. A. Hanna and a corps of experts, into the affairs of these institutions has been directed toward ascertaining what percentage the loans bore to the capital stock and unimpaired surplus of the banks in question.

DIRECTORS' LIABILITIES.

Among the officers and directors of the banks mentioned were, previous to the shake-up ordered by the Clearinghouse Committee, F. Heinze, E. R. Thomas, Charles W. Morse and Orlando F. Thomas. The interests of these men were interwoven in the various banks. The law is particular in stating that the officers of a national bank in loaning money to themselves must not exceed 10 per cent. of the capital stock and the unimpaired surplus. It has required a searching investigation to discover whether or not the surplus of any or all of these banks was unimpaired and, if the surplus was impaired in any instance, to what extent.

Under the direction of United States Dist.-Atty. Stimson there has been another investigation to determine the exact liability of directors of national banks in connection with loans made to officers and directors. The liability of the officers and of the Executive Committees of directors is clearly established, but the plain directors have not been so unmistakably labeled by the statutes as to their culpability in case of infringement of the law.

In this investigation Mr. Stimson has been aided by the best talent in the Department of Justice at Washington. The bank examiners have held frequent consultations with the Clearinghouse Committee. If prosecutions result they will be backed by the Department of Justice and the clearinghouse.

MANY DANGERS REMOVED.

Outside of J. P. Morgan and other bankers who were engaged in rescue work, few people in Wall street had any idea how bad the situation really was a week ago today. Eliminating the $18,000,000 bank deficit and the Trust Company of America, Tennessee Coal and Iron situation, a number of unusual events occurred, any one of which would, in ordinary times, have caused a shock to the stock market. For example, few people know today that a bank absolutely declined to redeem in gold Pennsylvania Railroad gold notes maturing November 1, thus for the time being placing the Pennsylvania Railroad in a state of technical insolvency. Nor was it generally known that the State Bank Examiner had found the situation at several trust companies where runs were taking place such that, unless their dilatory tactics of paying of depositors ceased at once, their doors would have to be closed. But since last Saturday a number of dangerous elements have been removed, and $21,000,000 of the $51,000,000 new gold has actually arrived.

In discussing the situation, Judge E. H. Gary, who has been J. P. Morgan's right-hand man, expressed the belief that the anchors thrown out during the storm had at last ceased to drag on the bottom and that the outlook was decidedly hopeful.

What had more influence than anything else in turning the current of events this week was the successful bids by our bankers for $51,216,000 European gold. That means that the banks can increase their loans by $176,000,000. When a new account, say for $1,000,000, is started with a bank, the bank must hold $250,000 of it for a reserve. The $51,000,000 new gold to be received by our banks, therefore, will form the legal basis for $176,000,000 new loans just as $250,000 forms the basis of a $1,000,000 loan.

ACCUSE BANKERS OF REPORTING FALSELY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] No decision has been reached by officials of the Department of Justice and the Treasury as to when evidence in the case against the two former New York bankers charged with making false reports to the Comptroller of the Currency regarding the bank will be placed before the grand jury. This matter will be left largely to the judgment of United States Dist.-Atty. Stimson, who is working with the bank examiners in the investigation now being made.

A partial report has been made to the Treasury and Department of Justice regarding the investigation now in progress, but it will be some days before the inquiry is completed. When this is done, Dist.-Atty. Stimson will come here and consult with Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte regarding exactly what steps will be taken.

It is the opinion of the officials that a strong case will be made out against the bankers, and the procedure will be to lay the evidence before the grand jury, which will be asked to return indictments.

A vigorous prosecution will be made if the government officials believe they are reasonably sure of securing convictions.

CERTIFICATES.

SCRIP PROBLEM BEING SOLVED.

CERTIFICATES IN SAN FRANCISCO LOOK LIKE MONEY.

They Have the Appearance of Genuine Greenbacks and Meet With Popular Favor—St. Louis Bankers Express Belief That Use of Clearinghouse Paper Will Soon Cease.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One-dollar certificates which look like $1 greenbacks were issued today, and were received with far more favor than were the first clearinghouse certificates, probably because they look more like real money.

They are very well executed, and will be much more difficult to counterfeit than others. Eighty thousand dollars were issued today. No one made any objection to receiving them, and probably far more of this small denomination will be called for. The original $5, $10 and $20 certificates are not popular, and they will be recalled.

Storekeepers do not like to give out silver in change for the larger bills, as it depletes their stocks. With the small bills there will not be this constant drain of silver.

IMPROVING IN ST. LOUIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bankers said Saturday that if financial conditions continue to improve in other cities as rapidly as they have in St. Louis, the clearinghouse certificates and check system will be discontinued within ten days.

A traffic in money has sprung up since the flurry. Brokers and money lenders are buying money. Then they hold it for higher prices or use it for cashing checks at a discount.

As to the representation of the Treasurer of the United States that he is dealing fairly and impartially with the West, the president of a banking institution said tonight that it does not conform with the fact that Mr. Cortelyou has poured $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 into the New York banks, and has ignored the needs and rights of the people and the banks of the West.

Mr. Treat explained, the banker said, that in helping New York, the treasury helped the whole country. He sees fit to suppress or overlook the fact that while New York banks got the people's money without charge, the St. Louis and other western banks have been unable to get a dollar, thus generously placed in the hands of favored ones, except on payment of 3 per cent. to New York banks. As a matter of fact, there has been no financial flurry in St. Louis, the city having taken merely precautionary measures to prevent the East from draining the prosperous West. St. Louis financiers and business men have taken the so-called "panic" more as a joke than seriously. There has been no difficulty experienced here in cashing the clearinghouse certificates or checks payable to bearer.

SCRIP USED IN PITTSBURGH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Of Pittsburgh's immense pay roll of $1,000,000 a day, 75 per cent. is now being paid in notes on the Pittsburgh clearinghouse.

The stringency in currency has made this possible, and few of the employés of the large concerns who were paid off today received cash. There was some grumbling, but this was principally among foreigners, who did not understand the system under which the notes are given.

Among thousands of trainmen on the Pennsylvania road in the Pittsburgh district only sixty-five refused to accept the paper. They demanded cash and got it. They were immediately discharged.

Shoppers today had little currency, but women went to the department stores and shops as blithely as ever and bought quite as frugally. They paid for their purchases with the notes, which were generally accepted, and they received change in amounts of less than $5 in cash. At the Pittsburgh Orchestra concert many seats were paid for in paper. The theaters accept the notes freely. Small dealers have no difficulty in getting currency at the banks, and thus small change is easily acquired. Gold coin and silver dollars were never popular here and are not missed. However, paper currency of large denominations is rapidly going out of circulation.

SCRIP READILY ACCEPTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cashiers' checks, or clearinghouse scrip, were put into circulation to the extent of about $250,000, beginning at noon today.

Up to that time pay roll disbursements at the banks were made in gold. Thousands of people received the checks this afternoon and no one balked on them. Practically all the merchants in town published an agreement today to receive the checks, and provisions have been made for putting out up to two million dollars' worth on Monday. One merchant as a leader advertises that the first thousand persons bringing the checks to his store will receive gold in exchange for them, if they so desire.

NO PROTEST IN DALLAS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DALLAS (Tex.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The principal banks of Dallas have for the past week been issuing clearinghouse scrip and paying depositors cash on only 5 per cent. of their deposits; and these payments are limited to not to exceed $100 per week to any one depositor. There has been no protest on the part of the public.

Some of the larger national banks talk of resuming full payments of depositors' checks next week.

ASSET CURRENCY ISSUED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Emergency money, locally known as asset currency, has been issued here through a committee of the local clearinghouse.

The money is in the form of bank notes, backed by the clearinghouse association. It is based on assets of this section of the country, such as fish, wheat, and lumber and represented by bills of lading and warehouse receipts, together with other securities. When this collateral is deposited with the loan committee of the clearinghouse, the new paper money is issued to the different banks, which have generally taken it. A total issue of $1,500,000 has been authorized, but only about $200,000 has so far been put into circulation.

This supplies the lack of currency and appears to answer the purpose splendidly. The notes are countersigned by a registrar of the clearinghouse. There is general confidence in the currency, which is issued in denominations of $5, $10 and $20. Business houses take them without question, banks accept them and even the street cars take them for fare.

USING CASHIERS' CHECKS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The clearinghouse certificate plan has not made its appearance in Kansas City. Something very similar, however, has been in circulation for two weeks.

Immediately following the issuance of clearinghouse certificates in New York and Chicago, the banks of Kansas City began issuing cashiers' checks, payable to bearer in lieu of currency. These checks are marked "Payable only through the clearinghouse," and they differ only from clearinghouse certificates in that they are issued individually by the various banks. The large department stores and merchants generally are accepting them, the same as currency.

IN LAW'S GRIP.

BANK OFFICIALS ARE ARRESTED.

ACCEPTED DEPOSITS REALIZING INSOLVENCY, IS CHARGE.

Criminal Prosecution Is Begun Against Men Connected With Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Portland, Or., and State Treasurer May Be Involved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Warrants were issued from the Police Court this morning for the arrest of all officials of the suspended Title Guarantee and Trust Company on the strength of information filed with Dist.-Atty. Manning.

The complaint, which was signed by C. F. Ehman, a real estate dealer, charges the officials of the bank with violating the State banking statute in that they accepted deposits knowing that the bank was insolvent.

President J. Thorburn Ross, Vice-President George H. Hill and Treasurer T. T. Burkhardt were arrested and taken to the Police Station, where they were released upon the deposit of $5000 each. Warrants are also out for the apprehension of F. M. Warren, fifth member of the directorate of the institution, and John E. Atchison, secretary of the concern, both of whom are out of the city. Warrants will be served at the earliest opportunity. Warren is in the Orient and Atchison is in New York, where he went to raise money on a bundle of securities he took with him.

Whether or not State Treasurer Steel will be arrested for ignoring provisions of the State law in making deposits of State funds has not yet been determined by Mr. Manning. He says that a civil action probably lies against the official, but he has not reached a definite opinion as to whether or not under the code he may be held criminally liable.

Ehman, who signed the complaint against the bank officials, made a bank deposit of $550 in the closed bank on October 28, the day before the Governor was persuaded to call a bank holiday. The holiday has been in effect ever since, and the complaint charges that the officials of the bank knew then that the institution was insolvent.

With almost two millions in deposit, the cash on hand had dwindled down to $9000 when Ehman's deposit was accepted. The State law provides a punishment of a fine of not less than $1000 or imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than two years, or both fine and imprisonment, for bank officials who accept deposits after the institution is insolvent.

EUROPE TO INVEST.

WANTS AMERICAN STOCKS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A financial force that will furnish a mighty uplift of no mean measure to the monetary situation throughout the United States may be reckoned upon to make itself felt within the near future, when European investors, according to views expressed today by international banking houses, are expected to come to the New York market and purchase standard securities, whose prices have been forced to low levels by urgent liquidation.

Purchases of American securities on a large scale by foreign investors spells sheer gold imports of large proportions, and the opinion was freely expressed today that millions would soon be poured into New York in payment for securities purchased at the present levels.

Arbitrage houses already report purchases of an investment character by England, and as the situation clears these purchases will increase.

England and the continent bought largely of American securities last March, when the local market was suffering from a severe decline, and arbitrage brokers now say that bargain hunters abroad are again nibbling at good American securities.

"We are going to have some features of 1893 over again," said a member of an international banking house today. "After the storm came the calm in that year, and while we were adjusting ourselves to a new order of affairs the European investor came into our market and bought heavily of our stocks, which did more than anything else to bring needed gold to our shores. The storm center is now behind us, and purchasers for foreign account will help soon to swell our credit abroad and prevent cessation of gold imports.

"I have London advices that many English institutions are disposing of English and Argentine rails in preparation for investment in this market. A momentary stringency brought on by an excess of prosperity can never be provocative of continued distrust of our institutions, and with a clearing situation the capital of Europe will find its way here for investment when the yield on the investment is greater than in any financial market in the world."

English houses are said to be bare of American securities, which were sold here last summer, according to reports made by arbitrage houses today, and those houses may now be considered as probably purchasers of the very securities which they sold many points higher than present prices.

CASH PAID MINERS.

MEN REFUSE CHECKS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Indiana operators paid their semi-monthly pay roll, aggregating $500,000, today, with currency, because the miners over the State, at mass meetings last night, voted unanimously not to accept checks as requested by officials of the United Mine Workers, which request was made on the assertion of the operators that otherwise the mines would have to shut down, because they could not get cash.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

Burlington, and in Western time territory will apply for the first five minutes after 1 o'clock p.m.

MILLIONAIRE INCOG.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Ia.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Abraham Stimmer of Waverly, Iowa's millionaire philanthropist, is now said to be touring Iowa incognito, distributing wealth among the needy and seeking places to aid worthy charitable institutions. It is his way of gaining happiness in the world. Already he has given more than half a million to institutions of the State, and it is said his only worry is that he will not be able to spend his remaining several millions before his death.

DUCK WITH BELLS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARQUETTE (Mich.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Keightley family of Mackinac the other day received as a present a fine plump duck which was prepared for the next day's dinner. In the act of dressing the duck the housewife was amazed to discover in the crop of the bird a sleigh bell nearly an inch in diameter. How it had been swallowed without causing death passes comprehension.

BOY, IN JAIL, PLANS DEATH.

Deserted by Parents, Arrested for Theft, Youth Seeks to End Disgrace by Suicide.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Abandoned by his father and mother and refused entrance to their home, they being separated, Lee Hopper, a fifteen-year-old boy, deliberately made preparations to end his life today in a cell at the County Jail. He was arrested three days ago for stealing some jewelry and $8 in coin from a farmer at Wakefield, for whom he had been working. When brought into court he told a pitiful story of having been abandoned by his parents when he was 2 years of age. He was placed in an orphan asylum and later adopted by a woman in Los Angeles, but at her death he was compelled to shift for himself. He said when he saw the money and jewelry it proved too great a temptation and he took them.

The boy was overcome by his disgrace, and after being sentenced he tore up a blanket and braided a rope, which he was about to use to hang himself when a trusty discovered him. After he has finished his sentence an effort will be made to secure him employment at some place where an interest will be taken in his welfare. It is one of the saddest cases that has come to the attention of the court here in many years.

RETURNS ALONE TO PRISON.

Convict Refuses to Take Advantage of Failure of Guard to Catch Train for Penitentiary.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although free to go where he wished and escape the prison walls awaiting him, James Wooly, a convict, today returned to Carson City, from Reno, after his guard had missed the train and was left in Reno.

Wooly was allowed to come to Reno in charge of Guard O'Connor to fix up some pension papers. This necessitated stopping over here all night. This morning they boarded the Virginia and Truckee local for Carson, and just before the train started O'Connor stepped to a store across the street and the train pulled out. He was greatly excited and immediately wired all stations along the road to watch out for an escaped convict. He hoped to find his man before the prison authorities discovered his mistake.

This evening he telephoned to the penitentiary, asking if they had heard any news of Wooly, and was informed that the convict had arrived this morning on the train and gone alone to the prison.

Charles Flitch, a seaman, followed him four days later.

River Gets Deeper.

MARYSVILLE, Nov. 9.—The levee commissioners, by a cross-section survey, have made the unexpected discovery that the channel of the Yuba River is deeper now than last year before the supposed big fill, which was charged to the work of dredgers. It is evident that there was no fill, but rather a scour of the river's channel.

Drowned Man's Body Found.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The body of R. F. Keefer of Oakland, agent of the Union Ice Company, who was drowned in the bay while boating October 30, was found this morning, and sent to his former home in Oakland.

To Choose New Manager.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The Call says today, that W. C. Farrington of New York will be chosen general manager of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, to succeed W. S. Pearce, recently resigned. Mr. Farrington, it is stated, is allied with the Harriman interests.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Edgar A. Purcell and Charles V. Brown, motorman and conductor, respectively, charged with the murder of Charles Moss, who was shot to death in a street-car riot October 19, appeared this morning before Police Judge Shortall. Owing to the fact that the inquest had not been held on the death of Moss, the case was continued.

Victim of Thugs.

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 9.—Benjamin Wilheit, who claims to be interested in laundries in Stockton and Portland, was beaten unconscious by two thugs in a sand lot near the railroad depot in this city early this morning and robbed of $22, a gold watch and a suit and hat case.

Meets Death in Shipwreck.

STOCKTON, Nov. 9.—Burton Kelly, who met a tragic death in the North in being beaten to death by the surf while lashed to the mast of a shipwreck, was a Stockton boy and has relatives living here. Shortly before his terrible death he wrote to friends here, stating he was about to return to Stockton.

Suspected Murderers Located.

TACOMA (Wash.) Nov. 9.—Frank B. Covington and Charles Burlison, suspected of the murder of Agnes McCombs Covington, wife of Frank Covington, have been located on the schooner Henry Failing, bound for Australia, by City Detective Smith, and they will be arrested at Valparaiso, Chile, where the vessel will stop for provisions, about December 1. The men were in hiding in a Tacoma lodging-house for two days before the crime was discovered.

SHAKE IT WELL IN A BOTTLE.

DIRECTIONS TO MIX A SIMPLE PRESCRIPTION FOR KIDNEYS.

Splendid harmless recipe to be mixed at home, also tells how to find out if Kidneys are inactive and what to do to get relief—what causes Rheumatism and how the simple home mixture relieves.

A well-known authority says that Backache is often nature's danger signal, which notifies the sufferer that the kidneys are sick.

The following simple home-made mixture is said to relieve backache and cleanse and build up weak, disordered kidneys, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime.

A well-known local druggist is authority that these ingredients are mainly of vegetable extraction and harmless to use, and can be obtained at small cost from any good prescription pharmacy. Those who think they have kidney trouble or suffer with lame back or weak bladder, or such symptoms as frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful, thick, discolored urine, etc., should give this prescription a trial, as no harm can possibly follow its use, and it is said to do wonders for many people.

GETTING READY.

PLANNING FOR CONVENTIONS.

LEADERS OF PARTIES CONSIDER PLACES FOR MEETINGS.

Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis Already Mentioned as Cities at Which Presidential Candidates Will Be Placed in Nomination Next Summer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The question regarding the meeting places of the two great national conventions next summer may be put like this:

Acting Chairman New of the Republican National Committee almost unquestionably favors Kansas City. Secretary Elmer Dover of the committee believes that Chicago is the only place for the convention; friends of Mr. Bryan believe that when he declares himself to be a candidate he will give his friends on the Democratic National Committee to understand that he wishes the convention to be held in St. Louis, if that city can show it has an adequate hall.

Partisans of Secretary Taft desire that Kansas City be selected as the place for the Republican gathering. They believe that when Mr. Roosevelt makes his final pronouncement, after Mr. Taft's return from the East, that he will not be a candidate in any conceivable circumstances, the great West will turn to Taft, and in the great West, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt, and with him the other of Mr. Taft's friends desire the convention to be held. Several members of the Republican National Committee cannot be swerved from their allegiance to Chicago, though if St. Louis provides a suitable hall some of these men will look with favor on that city because it is in a State which has no favorite son. There is not the slightest chance that the Democratic convention will be held in the East. Every one of Mr. Bryan's followers apparently is opposed to going elsewhere than to the Middle West.

FOLK MAY BE A CANDIDATE.

Conference With Bryan Looked Upon as Important to National Political Situation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JEFFERSON CITY (Mo.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The conference between Gov. Folk and William J. Bryan at Omaha yesterday will have an important bearing not only on Missouri, but on national politics. Mr. Bryan summoned the Governor for a formal conference, both by letter and by telegraph.

It is believed Mr. Bryan frankly told Gov. Folk his own intentions in regard to the Presidential nomination. If the Nebraskan informed the Governor that he has definitely decided to forbid the use of his name as a candidate, there is no sort of doubt but what Gov. Folk himself will get in the race.

It is well known that Mr. Bryan some days ago informed many of his close personal friends in Missouri that during the present month he would make a definite statement regarding his attitude in the Presidential contest. Some say it will come from Omaha Saturday of next week.

If Mr. Bryan is a candidate for the Presidency, Gov. Folk will seek to succeed Senator Stone in the Senate, but presumably if Bryan is going to withdraw from the race, Gov. Folk will be pushed to the front as a Presidential candidate. This would open the way for Congressman Champ Clark to enter the contest against Stone.

CLARK EPITOME.

SIZES UP SITUATION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—"The one-gallus Republicans at the crossroads are for Roosevelt; the one-gallus Democrats are for Bryan, and the politicians of either party are against both."

This was the epitome of the political situation given by Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, who paid his respects to President Roosevelt today.

GRIEF-STRICKEN.

FINDS FIANCEE IN HER GRAVE.

Pretty Revolutionist Ends Life in America.

Count Is Heartbroken at Fate of Betrothed.

Noble Will Become a Monk to Quiet Grief.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Count Leonid Kasansky has returned from America, heartbroken over the discovery that his betrothed, the beautiful Vira Centonovna Czerny, who strangely vanished on the eve of the day set for their wedding, had committed suicide in Chicago. She was a revolutionist, and took her life in the belief that she could never honorably marry the Count and thereby possibly compromise him politically on account of his loyalty to the government.

Count Kasansky, who had spent a large sum before locating his fiancée in America, only to find that she was dead, said she was the greatest and handsomest woman he ever saw.

To satisfy himself of her identity he had her grave opened. He found in her coffin the golden cross and ring of rubies he gave her the night she vanished from St. Petersburg. The Count opened an iron box and showed the cross and ring, and also a bone of the finger of one hand. He shook with emotion as he displayed his sacred relics, became excited and walked up and down, covering his face with his hands.

Count Kasansky announced his intention of entering a monastery and becoming a monk. He has laid the pious project before the Czar, he said, and has obtained the Emperor's approval. In religious life the Count hopes, in time, to calm his mind and lessen his poignant grief over the loss of Vira. He has about determined to enter the Solovetsky monastery in the Ice Sea, which is entirely isolated from the excitements of society and the intrigues of politics. His large estates and mines in Siberia, he says, he will present to the monastery, after serving for three years as a servant and taking the final vows. The Count believes he has a hypnotic eye, which makes everybody afraid of him. He goes to the length of saying he believes it was his terrible gaze which banished, one after another, the two women to whom he was engaged. Every year, he says, he will make a religious pilgrimage to America and pray at Vira's grave.

KING WANTS TO HONOR MAN WHO SETTLED TROUBLES.

Lloyd George, Brilliant Welshman, Now Most Lauded Man in England, Narrowly Escaped Mob When He Opposed Chamberlain's South African Policy in Birmingham.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lloyd George, president of the Board of Trade, whose intervention saved Britain from a general railroad strike, is now the most praised man in England, yet during the Boer conflict his life was in actual danger, because with unflinching courage, he denounced the war, its authors and its motives.

There was a riot when he boldly invaded Birmingham to assail Chamberlain's South African policy under his very nose. Lloyd George had to be smuggled out of a hall in a policeman's cape and helmet. He is a Welshman, a brilliant, incisive speaker, pleasant mannered, unspoiled by his present success, with its attendant praise. He is a born politician, of intense principles.

When he first stepped in between the railway directors and the employés, both were ugly and not amenable to reason. He then bluntly warned both sides of the fatal consequences of a strike and he practically forced them to accept his plan for a settlement.

King Edward is strongly behind Lloyd George and is desirous of conferring some honor on him as a mark of his distinguished public services. The latter has declined to accept a title.

He is 44 years old, the son of a Unitarian schoolmaster, and a lawyer by profession. Beginning life without influence, he has won his way to the front ranks. His success is looked on by the public as a triumph for character and ability.

KING COVETS NEW TITLE.

Edward Looks on Visit from Kaiser as Chance to Be Hailed "Pacificator."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In London and Berlin the press is giving to the approaching visit of Emperor William to King Edward an international importance such as would not attach to a visit the chief of the Dreibund might pay to the head of any other European state. Edward is not unwilling to have this interpretation placed upon it. He covets the title of pacificator. He is quite as desirous of removing the impression that the London programme in world politics aims at the isolation of Germany.

More than fifteen years have elapsed since the Kaiser paid an official visit to this country. Britons are now in a forgiving mood, and have forgiven William II for sending the Kruger telegram.

WANT ROYAL GEMS FOR DOGS.

Parisian Theatrical Ladies' Commission "Messieures" to Buy Queen's Jewels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It has come around to me that two ladies who devote themselves to theatrical art and gallantry, says Truth's Paris correspondent, have ordered their "messieures" to buy for them at the sale of the late Queen of Belgium's jewelry the following articles:

A diadem of brilliants bought by the ladies of Belgium for presentation to her late Majesty on the occasion of her silver wedding.

A bracelet composed of four rows of pearls and attached to a miniature of the Archduchess Joseph, née Duchess of Wurtemberg.

A fellow bracelet, with the miniature of the Archduke, her husband.

A string of 124 large pearls with a clasp in brilliants and a locket containing two family miniature portraits.

A miniature of King Leopold II, surrounded with the two rows of brilliants, and sent to Marie Henriette as an engagement token while she was still an archduchess.

The two ladies devoted to art and gallantry do not want the jewels in question for personal adornment. No. One of them has a fancy to get the diadem arranged for Bruno, a police watch dog that watches over her safety in the villa she possesses in Passy, now the most fashionable part of Paris. This Bruno is of mixed breed, the product of various judicious selections, and has gone through a complete course of police training. The string of pearls may be preserved for personal wear. As to the bracelets, they can serve for the two lap dogs of the other lady, Mouchette and Baby.

DEMONSTRATION.

TAFT OFF FOR VLADIVOSTOK.

SCHOOLBOYS DRAG SECRETARY'S CARRIAGE IN MANILA.

Honored Visitor Tells Filipines That He Has Confidence in Them, and He Is Cheered by Crowds as He Leaves Islands to Continue His Tour of World.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MANILA, Nov. 9.—The departure of Secretary of War Taft from the city on the man-of-war Rainbow for Vladivostok today, was attended by a remarkable demonstration upon the part of the Filipinos.

The horses were withdrawn from the carriage in which were seated Mr. and Mrs. Taft, and it was pulled by Manila schoolboys from the Luneta to the dock, through cheering crowds of citizens.

Mr. Taft started from the residence of Gov.-Gen. Smith at 8 o'clock this morning. He reviewed the long military, civic and school parade on the Luneta at 9 o'clock, making a brief address, in which he thanked the peo- course of the Assembly ple for the reception, praised the course of the Assembly, and expressed his confidence in the future of the islands.

Mr. Taft and party embarked at 11:30 a.m., and sailed at 11:50, the launch on which they were being escorted down the bay by a flotilla of harbor launches, with military and civil officials on board, to the Rainbow, where they said their last goodbyes.

Mr. Taft and party expect to arrive at Vladivostok on November 18, and to leave there on the Trans-Siberian journey on November 19. All of the party were in the best of health.

In an interview with a representative of the Associated Press before he departed, Mr. Taft said:

"I feel deeply grateful for the reception and entertainment given me by the people of the Philippines. It far exceeds in its warmth and spontaneity anything I expected, and I cannot sufficiently express my gratitude and satisfaction.

"The condition of affairs in the Philippine government is most satisfactory, and, taken throughout, the progress made during the past two years is remarkable.

"From the first I had full confidence in the Legislative Assembly, a confidence which has been justified by its actions. So far it has taken a conservative ground, and I have no doubt it will continue its useful, patriotic and diligent course. I have yet to see or hear a single member who does not apparently feel a full sense of the responsibility of his duties toward his constituents and country, and I am sure that conservatism rather than radicalism will continue to mark the official conduct of this body.

"I leave the Philippines with renewed confidence in the future of the islands. What I have seen and heard on this trip has confirmed my opinion on the subject which I had previously formed, and have frequently expressed."

Three commissioners of the Chinese government who are investigating the economic conditions of the Chinese residents in the islands, arrived here this morning and visited Mr. Taft on board the Rainbow a few moments before she sailed under escort of two other cruisers. The Chinese commissioners will continue their tour of the Orient, and report their investigations to the government at Peking. They will remain in Manila a week or ten days.

THE KING'S BOSS.

QUEEN MAKES ALFONSO MIND.

KING EDWARD VASTLY AMUSED BY ROYAL PAIR.

Spanish Ruler Is Devoted Slave of English Wife Who Illustrates Her Power Over Him by Entertaining Incident During Hunt at Sandringham.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Alfonso is still his young wife's devoted slave. She leads him where she will by a silken thread, which, however, sometimes becomes visible to her royal relatives.

He obeys orders as a good husband should. So being certain of him, his spouse with a self-confidence which most royal wives lack, insists that he shall not be tied to her apron-strings, but shall go where he pleases with his intimates and enjoy his sports. Yet Queen Victoria knows how to assert herself and how to restrain her husband's boyish impulsiveness. A proof of this vastly amused King Edward at Sandringham on Thursday.

The Spanish King is a fine sporting shot, but the Prince of Wales, the second best shot in England, was bringing down more birds than Alfonso was, never missing one. Alfonso decided that his shooting-coat hampered his aim, and, throwing off the coat, flung it from him. Then, while King Edward laughingly spurred the rivalry, King Alfonso shot so fast and accurately that soon he had as many birds as the Prince of Wales.

Alfonso was as happy as a boy with a new gun. But, unfortunately for him, his wife, with Queen Alexandra and Queen Maud of Norway, was in a motor car watching the battle from a little distance. Seeing her husband without a coat, Queen Victoria sent a peremptory message by one of her suite, bidding him to put on his coat, lest he catch cold. The courtier put the order into many polite words and delivered it most hesitatingly, but the King paid no attention to it. He went on shooting, bringing down birds with unerring aim.

His wife alighted from the motor and approached her disobedient spouse, who, intent on the birds, did not see her. But King Edward did, and, although laughing heartily, called to Alfonso: "You had best be careful; your wife is coming."

Alfonso glanced around, saw the Queen approaching him, thrust his gun into a bearer's hands, took his coat from another, and, while the whole party, men and women, shrieked with laughter, hastily put on his coat.

In a word, however gentle the Queen's control over him, it could not be more complete if she were ten years Alfonso's senior. But she has not yet eradicated his Spanish habit of procrastinating, of saying "manana," or his Spanish indifference to keeping an engagement punctually. The whole royal party again left London for Sandringham today. King Alfonso was twenty minutes late for the special train. His wife was furious, for punctuality is almost a religion with the English royal family. In all probability, Alfonso would have been even later for the train had he not expected that the guns would start at Sandringham three hours earlier than they did.

But it is entirely likely that his Queen will break Alfonso of his dilatoriness. An English friend asked her the other day if she and her husband were not exposed to great danger from anarchists in Spain. "Ena" laughed as she said: "We run far greater danger of breaking our necks while making up time in a motor on an engagement for which we are late, than from anything the anarchists can do to us."

Every one here is raving about the beauty of Queen "Ena," as she is still called affectionately, and she aroused equal admiration in Paris.

French Pretender Is Determined His Sister's Marriage Will Be Marked With as Much State as If He Were Really a Reigning Monarch.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EVERSHAM (Eng.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Bourbon-Orleans wedding next Saturday at Woodnorton, the English home of the bride-elect's brother, the Duke of Orleans, the French pretender, will be attended by forty royalties, including the Queens of Spain and Portugal. Woodnorton can house only fifty persons, but in six weeks temporary buildings have been erected, furnished and decorated in perfect keeping with the house, and they are capable of sleeping 250 guests.

The beautiful chapel, where the wedding service will take place, is among these new buildings. There is also a spacious banqueting hall, on which more than $150,000 has been expended. The whole work on these temporary buildings has been done under the directions of the Duke of Orleans, with the assistance of an eminent French architect and decorators from Paris and Rome.

There will be four days of festivities, everything being done in most gorgeous fashion. In fact, the Duke is making it a point of honor that his sister shall be married with as much state as if she were really the sister of a reigning King.

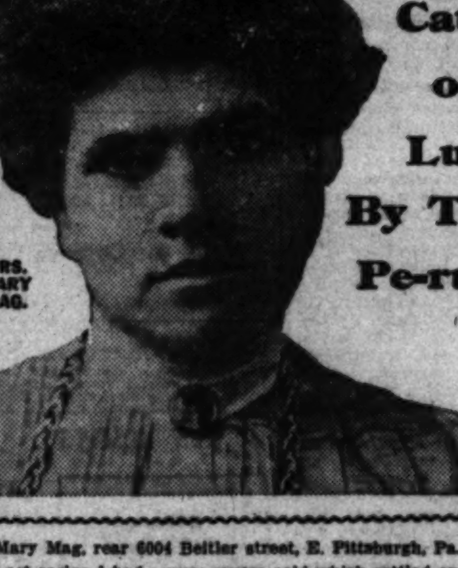
One is Miss Mary Money, a beautiful girl from the United States, who is a guest of the Countess de Molina at Chantilly, where she is preparing to become a jockey. Already she has applied to the jockey club for a license. A bold and graceful steeplechaser, she rides astride, dressed like a boy. Twenty-eight prizes and fourteen silver trophies have been won by her in spirited riding contests.



MRS. MARY MAG.

Saved From Threatened Catarrh of the Lungs By Taking Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Mary Mag, rear 6004 Beitler street, E. Pittsburgh, Pa., writes:

"Last spring I had a very severe cold which settled on my lungs. I went to the doctor for some time, but his medicine did me no good.

"Having read in the paper some testimonials of the value of Peruna, I decided to try it, and at the same time wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. I took five bottles of Peruna and am now entirely cured.

"Before taking Peruna I was so run down that I could do no work and could not stand on my feet. My head ached and I could not sleep—I would wake up and cough. In the morning, on rising, I would cough for at least ten minutes. I was alarmed.

"But, thanks to Peruna, I am now enjoying good health. I would not be without Peruna. I keep it in the house and give it to my little boy when he has a cold."

MRS. MARY MAG.

WOMEN SHOULD BEWARE OF CATCHING COLD

A NEGLECTED cold is generally the first cause of catarrh.

Women are especially liable to colds. These colds occur more frequently during the wet, sloppy weather of winter and spring than any other time of the year. Often they are not considered serious and so are allowed to run on, or they are treated in such a way as to only palliate the symptoms, while the cold becomes more deep-seated and the patient finally awakens to the fact that she has a well-developed case of catarrh.

By reason of their delicate structure the lungs are frequently the seat of a cold, especially if there is the slightest weakness of these organs. The treatment of catarrh of the lungs is also more difficult and discouraging than catarrh of any other organ of the body.

It would be wise, therefore, to guard against it by every precaution possible.

Peruna has been found a most reliable remedy for coughs, colds and catarrh by reason of the fact that it goes at once to the very seat of the trouble.

It searches out every crevice, every duct of the body. It quickens and equalizes the circulation of the blood, thus relieving the congested mucous membranes. It exercises a healing and soothing effect upon the mucous membranes, no matter whether they are the more exposed membranes of the head and throat, or whether they line the remotest cells of the lungs.

PE-RU-NA THE REMEDY FOR CATARRH OF THE LUNGS.

PERUNA TABLETS can now be obtained by those who prefer solid medicine.

Miss Money has put herself under the direction of Webb, the trainer, and anticipates taking a prominent part in the spring races on France's principal courses. The French stand in amazement, mingled with admiration, for her pluck and daring.

The other young woman who is attracting great public attention is Helene Miropolsky, who, though only 20 years of age, was admitted the other day to practice law.

BERLIN CRIMES EXPLAINED.

Epileptic Confesses to Assaults Which Stirred the Capital of Germany.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—The series of crimes resembling the "Jack the Ripper" murders in London in 1888-89, only that here the victims were little girls instead of women, has been cleared up through the confession of a printer's apprentice named Paul Minow, an epileptic, 22 years old, who recently was confined in an asylum for the insane at Herzberg.

The authorities of the institution were informed that Minow had been talking in a rambling manner of the murders. They suspected him of having committed the crimes and encouraged him to talk, with the result that he freely related in a heartless fashion how he had been taunted by his mother and sister with laziness, had gone out into the streets in a rage and had vented his feelings by stabbing four little girls, one after the other. He then rambled about the city for awhile and eventually returned home.

It does not appear whether the mother and sister of Minow were aware of what he had done, but his mind became so disordered that they sent him to the asylum a week later. The police have confirmed Minow's confession.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—The police report that jewels valued at $12,000 were lost in New York last week by Miss I. C. Chalfant of Allegheny, who is related to the family owning the Spang-Chalfant steel mills of this city.

She carried the jewels in a chamois-skin bag with a belt under her skirt. She had a number of dresses fitted and returned to her room at the Waldorf-Astoria, and later started for Pittsburgh.

She did not discover the bag was missing until on the train.

ELEPHANT EXECUTED.

Columbia, First Pachyderm Born in America, Becomes Vicious and Is Killed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BRIDGEPORT (Ct.) Nov. 9.—Columbia, the first elephant born in this country, was executed yesterday in the presence of twenty-one other elephants, including her mother, because she had developed such a vicious temper no one could come near her.

She was born in Philadelphia, twenty-eight years ago, and was easily handled until a month or two ago.

Five men, with rope, tackle and pulley choked her to death.

PREACHERS PROTEST.

Pittsburgh Ministers Want Motto "In God We Trust" Retained on United States Coins.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While the State of Oklahoma will not be entitled to have a star on the national flag until July 4, 1908, it has already been given its place on the national coins.

Instead of the usual milled edge on the United States coins, the new $10 gold pieces just being put into circulation have forty-six raised stars. Oklahoma has not yet officially been admitted to the Union, but it will be on November 16, when the President issues his proclamation.

General criticism is heard on the new gold piece in Washington, and word has been received that a protest is on its way to Washington from various Pittsburgh ministers against the omission of the motto: "In God We Trust."

ACCEPTABLE TO CHURCHES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] If you get hold of one of the new $10 gold pieces which lacks the time-honored motto: "In God We Trust," don't hesitate to drop it in the contribution box at any St. Louis church. It will be accepted just as readily as one of the piously inscribed coins we have been used to.

Five leading St. Louis ministers who expressed their views regarding the change did not seem to view it with great alarm. Most of them thought that having had the words on the coin, it was a mistake to take them off, but that the public piety was not likely to suffer greatly.

COMMITTEE TO VISIT CAPITAL.

STOCKTON, Nov. 9.—Next Monday Mayor Hudson, M. J. Gardner, E. W. S. Woods, G. W. Tatterson, C. D. Clarke and J. M. Eddy, will leave for San Francisco to meet the California Congressmen, who are to leave for Washington soon, as Congress meets next month. The object of the trip to the metropolis is to impress upon the Congressmen the advisability of expediting the construction of the diverting canal, and to secure appropriations for the dredging of the canals and waterways, with a view to having fifteen feet of water to the sea from Stockton.

QUESTION—Is there any alkali on the land?

ANSWER—Practically none. Out of the 28,000 acres there is probably not a trace of alkali on more than 1000 acres, and as the public are to choose 24,000 out of the 28,000, there is no possibility of any subscriber getting any land with any alkali on it.

QUESTION—What does the land grow?

ANSWER—The soil will grow an endless ra of products. Probably the greatest profit com from sugar beets and grapes. The land is sa to be naturally the most ideal beet land in the United States. These excursions will leave evenings at 6:30. Expenses of the trip are covered by $12. For the accommodation of those who cannot call during the day, the office of the trustees will be open evenings.

Table of Cost

Figures based on the Big Field Rancho at $15 per acre. To find the cost in Home Rancho multiply figures by 2.

40-acre farm, cash payment $200, deferred payments total cost $600.

80-acre farm, cash payment $400, deferred payments total cost $1200.

120-acre farm, cash payment $600, deferred payments total cost $1800.

160-acre farm, cash payment $800, deferred payments total cost $2400.

320-acre farm, cash payment $1600, deferred payments total cost $4800.

Scrip, Checks, Savings Ban Deposits will be accepted the same as cash.

As this announcement is not an official notice but is paid for by myself out of the fee allowed for representing the trustees, I can freely express my own opinion, and I wish to say that in the eighteen years in which I have resided in California this is unquestionably the greatest bargain I have ever known of. I have perfect confidence that every purchaser who is fortunate enough to secure any of this land will make 200 to 300 per cent. profit, and I do not believe another of this kind will ever come again. I especially desire to see those people who are seeking land for actual farming purposes succeed in getting some of this allotment.

WATER PROJECT ENDANGERED.

Flood of Bills Expected at Opening of Congress.

So Many Plans Afoot That All May Go Under.

Friends of Lake-to-Gulf Idea Plan Campaign.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A flood of waterway bills will be poured in upon Congress during the first week of its session.

Friends of the Mississippi Valley plan for a deep channel from Lake Michigan to the Gulf fear that in the very multiplicity of projects all may be borne down to defeat. It will take a careful and well-planned campaign of sound argument to save the day for the one great inland watercourse which has commended itself to the President. That such a campaign will be conducted is the belief of advocates of a channel from Chicago to the jetties of the Mississippi.

As a preparation to moving on Congress the forces back of many of the different waterway projects have arranged to hold conventions in various parts of the country to formulate plans for appropriations.

Two days after the opening of the next congressional session the National Rivers and Harbors Congress will meet in this city. Prominent men from every State that has within its boundaries waterways which are navigable, or by government aid could be made navigable, will be at the meeting. The president of the congress is Representative Ransdell of Louisiana, the stanch Democrat who President Roosevelt recently praised highly in a speech.

If Congress will commit itself to the middle western channel project by ever so small an appropriation, the project will go on to its end, for such has been the history of appropriation legislation. It may not be that the amount forthcoming will be great at the outset, but there is a seeming belief in official circles here that Congress will sanction the Mississippi River channel at the coming session if the promoters are alive to their opportunity.

It is said that they should not only study their own plans, but those of the advocate of other waterways, for there are things to be disproved as well as proved.

CANNON GETS RAISE IN PAY.

Speaker Will Draw Almost as Much Money as Roosevelt Next Month.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although Speaker Cannon may not realize his ambition to succeed Mr. Roosevelt in the White House, he will soon have an opportunity to appreciate how it feels to walk up to the desk of the paying teller at the end of the month and receive a salary nearly as large as that paid the President.

Mr. Roosevelt's compensation for running things is $4166.66 a month. In December Mr. Cannon's check "for service" will be only $166.66 less than that of Mr. Roosevelt. As a matter of cold statute law, Mr. Cannon has been plain Representative Cannon of the Eighteenth Illinois District since March 4, and the house has been without a speaker since that date, receiving a salary of $625 a month. The difference between this and $1000 a month, the Speaker's stipend under the new salary law, has gone into an account which is placed to the credit of the Speaker-to-be.

Isthmian Canal Commission Shows Amount Thus Far Expended on Panama Project.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Advance sheets from the annual report of the Isthmian Canal Commission have been received in Washington, giving statistical information of the appropriations and expenditures of the canal construction up to July 1 of this year.

It is shown that $79,608,568 has been appropriated for canal construction, and that of this amount $48,235,110 was expended up to the close of the last fiscal year. The figures, however, do not include the $40,000,000 paid to the French Canal Company in relinquishing its rights in the canal and the property there, and the $10,000,000 paid to Panama for right of way.

The expenditures to date include $39,-452,499 for construction and engineering work; $2,318,277 on account of the expenses of the civil government; $5,-550,268 on account of the sanitation, and $954,126 for miscellaneous purposes. The balance available July 1 was $31,-373,458.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The Friars, an organization of newspaper men, gave a supper at midnight last night at the Hotel Astor to David Belasco in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his advent in New York as an author and manager. Some unique features were introduced.

When Mr. Belasco got up to speak the room was darkened, stage thunder and lightning followed, and finally a spot light was turned on the famous manager and kept on him all the time he was talking.

Wells Hawks, the president of the Friars, presided. Among the speakers, in addition to Mr. Belasco, were Thomas Dixon, Jr., J. C. Williamson of Australia and David Warfield. Theatrical men from all over the country were present.

PROFESSIONAL ADVICE

RESTORING COMPLEXION

The following prescription contributed by a professional dermatologist with a national reputation.

He says that in his long practice he has never found anything to equal this mixture for bringing back the rosy tint of youth to the skin. The formula is as follows: Two ounces Rose Water; one ounce Spirits of Cologne; four ounces crystallized Sartoin. Put the Sartoin into a pint of hot water (not boiling) and when dissolved and cooled add the Rose Water and Spirits of Cologne, and strain through a fine cloth. Any large bottle or a fruit jar will serve as a receptacle if it can be closed air-tight.

These simple ingredients can be obtained at any well stocked drug store and easily mixed at home. This preparation should be applied once a day after washing and massaged well into the skin. It is said the results become apparent after the first few applications, but the treatment should be continued until the rose tint complexion becomes permanent.

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances renders it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. It builds up nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces. It makes digestion perfect, and enables you to get from the food you eat the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens the system, is a promotor of health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a form of food already digested and is recognized as a medicine everywhere.

DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

NERVY WOMAN PUTS BURGLAR TO FLIGHT.

ONLY after a desperate struggle, an attempt to shoot his captor and a daring leap out of a second-story window, did a burglar escape from Mrs. K. J. Eldred at No. 1221 Walnut street, and secure his liberty last night.

In company with Justus Taylor, age 7, Mrs. Eldred spent the evening at her home. About 10 o'clock she heard a peculiar noise in an upstairs bedroom. Several times the noise was heard, and then there was a report of something hard falling upon the floor. This was followed by the sound of footsteps.

Leaving the lad to guard the stairway, Mrs. Eldred dashed upstairs. Dimly outlined in the darkness of the upper hall she saw the form of a man, crouching as he ran. Without hesitation, Mrs. Eldred ran along the hallway and cornered the intruder.

"What are you doing in this house?" demanded Mrs. Eldred.

Quick as a flash, the robber pointed a revolver at the woman and warned her back.

For several seconds neither moved. Then the robber turned and leaped into the bathroom. He was not quick enough, however, and Mrs. Eldred caught him by the coat. The robber turned and grasped the woman about the waist. He tried to throw her to the floor and then attempted to break her hold. All the time Mrs. Eldred hugged the man's right arm close to her body, preventing his using his weapon. He finally succeeded in gaining the use of his right arm.

A stunning blow sent Mrs. Eldred reeling backward and the burglar slammed the bathroom door shut and locked it. Mrs. Eldred recovered soon and began to beat in the door with a chair.

"Stop or I'll shoot," cried the robber. His command had no effect. After several more warnings he finally fired four shots through the door. Mrs. Eldred was forced to retreat.

In the meantime, the Taylor boy had telephoned to University Police Station for an officer. Patrolman Hickock made a quick trip to the house on a motorcycle and hastily broke in the door. The burglar had fled.

During the short interval elapsing between the firing of the shots and the arrival of the officer the burglar made his escape down a rain pipe after crawling out a small window in the bathroom.

THRILLING.

HACK AND DRIVER HURLED FORTY FEET.

IN A collision between a runaway hack and a locomotive last night about 6 o'clock at the Southern Pacific bridge over the Los Angeles River at Leroy street, William Hayes, the driver of the hack was hurled thirty feet along the span and escaped without injury. The hack was demolished, and the two horses were killed.

Hayes is a driver for the Lusk Cab Company, and resides at No. 220 Santa Fé avenue. He had been drinking when he started north on Main street about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. As his team neared Date street on Macy, they became frightened and dashed off at a high rate of speed.

At first Hayes endeavored to stop the team, but finally gave up, and confined his efforts to guiding them. The team dashed madly along Date street to the Southern Pacific right of way near the Llewellyn Iron Works, and started east along the railroad track.

Between switch stands and over rails the team ran, dragging the hack. At the approach to the bridge the right of way narrows down to a double track and the bridge has no roadway. Just at the end of the bridge, the tracks of the main line of the Santa Fé cross those of the Southern Pacific. At this crossing the accident occurred.

Southern Pacific engine, No. 2794, running light, was running east toward the bridge, and rapidly caught up with the runaway. Engineer Johnson did not see the runaway until within twenty feet of the hack. He attempted to stop, but the speed of his engine was too great, and the locomotive collided with the hack.

Hayes was thrown out onto the bridge, and fell on the ties between the tracks. The vehicle was demolished. The horse on the right side of the hack was thrown forty feet and fell between the tracks, falling into the river bed about twenty feet below. The horse on the left side was hurled onto the inbound track of the bridge, and its legs were wedged between the ties. Both animals were almost instantly killed.

For over an hour the tracks of both Southern Pacific and Santa Fé were tied up. It took much labor to extricate the horses from the bridge. Hayes was removed to the Receiving Hospital. When it was found that he had sustained no injury he was sent to the City Jail for drunkenness.

CLOSING.

OPERA FINALE IS BRILLIANT.

SPLENDID PRODUCTION OF "BARBER OF SEVILLE."

Unusually Fine Cast Heard in Rossini's Comedy—Same Old Trick of Cast-changing Mars "Faust" Presentation—Lambardi Hopes to Return Next Year.

The opera season concluded at exactly 11:30 o'clock last night, with the last notes of "The Barber of Seville."

The final cast was indeed a brilliantly effective one, and it is doubtful if music lovers in New York or elsewhere in America will see this year a better presentation of Rossini's humorous masterpiece than that given before the audience in the Auditorium.

As Don Bartolo and Don Basilio Signori Bergami and Wulman were of surpassing effectiveness as comedians.

Padovani's Rosina was not only a triumph vocally, but as well a captivating impersonation. With her dainty ankle-length skirt, her coquettish arrangement of her beautiful hair, and generally effective make-up, she became genuinely Rosina's self. In voice she was as perfect as usual, and prolonged demonstrations from the audience again testified to her unusual worth. Sopranos may come and go, but no matter who visits Los Angeles for many months to come, it is doubtful if Mme. Padovani's record in coloratura achievement will even be approached.

Much space might be devoted to Wulman's absolutely unique caricature as the musical pedagogue. His comedy, like his acting in serious roles, bears the stamp of superiority. He not only emulated the traditional "business" of the part, but gave his auditors a burlesque creation ludicrous to look upon and thoroughly understandable, as well.

Bergami's buffo work is known, and appreciated, from former productions.

Parola's singing was in finished style and exquisite voice. His "Ecco ridente" was a memorable bit.

Pacini, as the factotum, gave absolutely the best performance of his local season, both in singing and in acting. In this part he rises to heights of dramatic reality that he does not approach in any other role.

The "Faust" performance, in the afternoon, was marred by an uncalled-for repetition of the same old cast-changing trick that the management has evidenced in former seasons.

Parola was advertised to sing the title-role, and, probably knowing that he would not sing it, the heads of the company permitted the advertising end of the house to even print his name on the programmes. It so stood, no announcement was made to the contrary—and Balestri sang the part, utterly without comprehension or dramatic spirit at any moment.

The fact that Parola did not sing is in itself of no consequence, but it is a serious matter that the Italian managers have again and again fooled the public on just such things. Many persons probably came to hear Parola in the role, and in justice to them some announcement should have been made.

The entire company will leave for Oakland at noon today, opening a brief return engagement there Monday night. The first bill will be "Lucia."

Sig. Lambardi expresses his faith in Los Angeles, notwithstanding a dull season, and says he hopes to return next year with a company equally good, and possibly with Leoncavallo as principal director.

IN SORRY PLIGHT.

Wife of Missing Man Found Starving on the Street—No Trace of Her Husband.

Suffering from a terrible mental strain and from the abstinence of food for three days, Mrs. Anna Banta, No. 1741 Newton street, fell in a faint at Fourth and Spring streets, last night about 8 o'clock, and was sent to the Receiving Hospital. Two weeks ago Banta disappeared from the Belle Vernon dairy office at Eighth and Maple avenue, and has not been seen since.

Four years ago John Banta was an attaché of a San Antonio, Tex., hospital. He was married in that city, and for two years resided there. About six months ago Mr. and Mrs. Banta came to Los Angeles. Banta secured a position as driver for the dairy, and became one of the most promising employés.

On the morning of the day he disappeared, Banta left his home, telling his wife that he expected to return home within an hour. Two hours later Mrs. Banta called the office of the dairy on the telephone, and was informed that Banta had just tendered his resignation, and had started for his home.

Mrs. Banta has been sick for the past eight months, and she thought her husband had resigned that he might give more time to caring for her, but he did not return home. By night the woman was hysterical. She recovered the following day sufficiently to go to Central Police Station, where she asked the aid of the officers. The detective bureau paid no attention to the report, and suggested that Banta would return home when he felt like it.

This made no impression upon Mrs. Banta. Since that time she has spent the most of her time searching for her husband. Banta had no funds, and his wife was left without means. Gradually the woman has been becoming weaker in mind. She has few friends in the city. The authorities will now take up the case.

"My husband has met with foul play," said Mrs. Banta. "People said he had run away, but that is not true. He was too good to me. I will believe in him until I die."

MOB SCENE IN VAUDEVILLE.

Variety Performers in State Bordering on Panic as Result of New Deal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When vaudeville actors realized today that through the deal between Klaw & Erlanger and the Keith-Proctor-Williams-Hammerstein combination all the variety interests in the country will shortly be controlled from one office, they were in a state bordering on panic.

They instantly realized that the day of fabulous salaries is over, and that within a few months they will be receiving from 20 to 60 per cent. less for their services than they are now getting. Small agents fear they will be put out of business.

From good authority it was learned that the pool simply wishes to reduce salaries to a fair basis. Star acts will always receive high prices.

HOPES TO GET DETWILER.

Attorney-Detective Burns Stops Off in Toledo on Business Trip to East.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TOLEDO (O.) Nov. 9.—Raymond J. Burns, the attorney and detective who had charge of the search for A. K. Detwiler, wanted in San Francisco on a charge of bribery, was in Toledo today. The reason for his visit is a mystery.

Mr. Burns, when asked specifically about the search for Detwiler, said. "I did not come to Toledo specially about the search for Detwiler. I just stopped here on my way East on business in connection with another case. Of course, I would not overlook any opportunity to arrest Abe, but the theory of the officers in San Francisco is that, since he has been so long missing, he has escaped to a foreign country and is probably somewhere in Europe."

PEER INVOLVED.

a foolish youth, who had got himself into a mess with a married woman. The gist of what he told the Duke was that he should break with Mrs. Atherton, pay her whatever price she demanded to keep quiet, and marry Miss Shelagh speedily.

When the Duke reached his hotel after his interview with the Prince of Wales, he found Mrs. Cornwallis West waiting for him. That clever woman did not intend that he should have any time to recover from the dressing-down given him by the Prince of Wales before she tackled him. There was a scene, but the upshot of it was the Duke promised her that if Miss Shelagh would forgive him he would marry her within three weeks.

It took her a bit longer to talk Miss Shelagh around, and get her to pardon her recreant lover, and abandon the notion that she ought to be a blighted being for the rest of her days.

PAYS THE "DAMAGE."

The next thing to be accomplished was the "squaring" of Mrs. Atherton. That wily woman had no intention of letting such a rich prize slip through her fingers without making a fight for a share of the prize money at least. She had followed the Duke home in the next ship that sailed from South Africa.

The Duke refused to see her, and referred her to his solicitors for the settlement of any question of damages she might raise. She saw the solicitors and assessed her damages at $250,000. The money was paid her without a quibble, a fact which afterwards caused her bitterly to regret that she had not asked for more. As the Duke owns a square mile of London, which brings him in something like $1,500,000 a year, besides large country estates, the huge price he paid for his folly did not necessitate the practice of any petty economies on his part.

The marriage between Miss Shelagh and the Duke took place within the stipulated three weeks and was the great society event of the season. With her $250,000 Mrs. Atherton returned to her husband's "protection." It is said, and it is probably true, that he knew nothing of the bargain she had driven with the Duke. A gallant soldier—and that Col. Atherton was—often makes the blindest of husbands.

PLAYS FOR HIGH STAKES.

Mrs. Atherton, fascinating as ever, soon had hosts of admirers. But she had learned the value of discretion—and discrimination. She didn't intend to run any serious risks except for high stakes. At last the Honorable John came her way. As a prize he didn't rank in the Duke of Westminster's class. But time was fleeting, and Mrs. Atherton realized that her charms would soon be waning. So Mrs. Atherton decided that as the future Lord Churston and the Honorable John was worth while.

In a very short time she had him fast snared. He was a trifle over thirty—an age at which a man is supposed to have arrived at years of discretion—and is entitled to no such lenient view of his conduct as the young Duke may have deserved.

The "goings on" between the Honorable John and Mrs. Atherton were so flagrant that Col. Atherton soon became the laughing stock of his friends and acquaintances. They began to speak of him as "shady," and to hint that he was partaking of his wife's spoils. Incensed at such remarks, he was at last driven to seek a vindication of his character in the divorce courts, with the result already told.

Mrs. Atherton is not the kind of woman to have neglected any opportunity of making provision for her future. There is little doubt that she will be able to sustain her breach of promise suit by epistolary evidence. It is not improbable that the Honorable John would have married her had he not fallen in love with Miss Denise Orme, who, although only a comedy actress, has no unsavory past behind her.

SECRET WEDDING REVEALED.

It is said that Mrs. Atherton put detectives on the Honorable John's track when her suspicions were aroused that his affections for her had cooled.

It was one of these detectives, it is said, who discovered that he had been secretly married to Miss Orme. Then she put the matter in the hands of her lawyer. The Honorable John could not afford to adopt the Duke of Westminster's method of squaring Mrs. Atherton. His father, who is not one of the rich peers, flatly refused to advance him a penny to help him out of his scrape. He had no other recourse than to contest her suit. So he publicly announced his marriage to Miss Orme and prepared for legal battle.

Unfortunately for the Duke of Westminster he is the Honorable John's trump card in the game that is to be played in the law courts. His story is to be wrung from him to prove that Mrs. Atherton is a sordid adventuress and not entitled to any damages at all. It is rather rough on the Duke that after paying $250,000 to get the scandal hushed up he should be forced to make it public himself. But the stern moralist, and his ally, Mrs. Grundy, will say it serves him just right.

The story won't really do him much damage now. He has been a good husband. He and Miss Shelagh have been very happy since their marriage, and have two lovely children—a boy and a girl. The eldest sister of the Duchess is the Princess of Pless. Her only brother, George Cornwallis West, is the second husband of Lady Randolph Churchill, who, as all America knows, is an American woman and the mother of that brilliant young politician, Winston Churchill.

BURGLARS MAKE RICH HAUL.

Burglars entered the home of J. R. Cammack at No. 1008 East Twenty-seventh street last night between 8 and 11 o'clock, during the absence of the family, and took $300 worth of jewelry. The police say that the robbers overlooked about $2000 worth of plate and jewelry. The robbers then forced in a back door and systematically rifled the house. After selecting the most valuable articles of jewelry that they could find, they made their escape. The police could find no clew to the identity of the thieves.

MAY NOT RECOVER.

A Mexican believed to be J. Hernandez, a laborer, was perhaps fatally injured at Watts Station last night when an inbound Long Beach express train struck him as he was crossing the railroad tracks. The crew picked up the injured man and brought him to the city. He was sent to the Emergency Hospital. It was found that he was suffering from a fracture of the skull.

An east-bound Detroit-Buffalo passenger train on the Wabash Railroad collided with a freight train near the entrance to the Fort Wayne (Ind.) yards yesterday, wrecking both engines and a number of freight cars. Several trainmen and a score or more of passengers were severely shaken up and bruised, but nobody was seriously injured.

LETTERS OPENED BY GRINDSTONE

Receives More Mail Than Any Other Woman in the State

How would you like to receive so much mail that it would be necessary to use a grindstone in order to open the letters as fast as they come in? This is the way a woman in Indiana opens her mail. Mrs. Cora B. Miller of Kokomo, gets tons of mail and to save time has them opened by a large grindstone which occupies a conspicuous place in her office. No other person in Indiana receives so much mail as she.

To give an idea of how vast her correspondence is, you need only to be told that she spends in one year $25,000.00 for postage stamps. How many letters will this send out? It is first-class postage for 125,000 letters. Mrs. Miller's correspondence is not confined to one State or one country, but women from all parts of the world write her and it certainly is a pleasure to receive so many letters so full of love and gratitude. The reason Mrs. Miller receives so many kind grateful and assuring letters is because she gives treatment free of cost to suffering women. A few months ago she sent by mail absolutely free of cost $10,000.00 worth of medicine to women who were afflicted with female diseases or piles. She is still receiving thousands of requests from ladies who have never used the remedy and has decided to give another lot of $10,000.00 worth away to those in need of treatment.

Here is a simple mild and effectual home remedy which has been used by more than a million women in the privacy of their own home, curing when doctors and other medicines failed.

It is especially prepared for the speedy and permanent cure of leucorrhea or whitish discharges; ulceration, displacements or falling of the womb, profuse, scanty or painful periods; uterine or ovarian tumors or growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness; creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry; hot flashes, weariness, and piles from any cause or no matter of how long standing.

Every woman who is a sufferer, unable to find relief, should write Mrs. Miller now without delay and she will send by mail free of charge a 50 cent box of her simple home remedy, also her book, with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer and how they can easily cure themselves at home.

Don't suffer another day, but write at once to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, Box 860, Kokomo, Ind.

THE DEATH.

SUITOR HIS LOVE.

UNWELCOME AT- MURDER.

Follows Who Was but Who Had and Shoots Her

—A.M.] —After pursuing attentions for Schmilowitz of and killed the presence of her apartments in Myr-

According to the story told by Mrs. Stebel's little boy, Schmilowitz had been writing letters to his victim for ten years and had been so insistent in his annoyances that Mrs. Stebel, her husband and her children had been compelled to flee from Philadelphia to Boston and thence to Brooklyn in the hope of eluding him.

Schmilowitz says he is a cabinet maker and has a wife and children in Cleveland. Stebel, also a cabinet maker, was at work when the tragedy occurred.

Ten years ago in Cleveland, before Mrs. Stebel was married, she is said to have accepted the attentions of Schmilowitz as a suitor.

Mrs. Stebel and her children were at breakfast when Schmilowitz knocked at the door of their apartments. As Mrs. Stebel unsuspectingly opened the door of the apartment, he greeted her with the question: "Why have you never answered those letters?"

As he spoke he drew a revolver and fired at her, but missed. Mrs. Stebel fled from the door, with the man in pursuit, firing. One bullet struck her between the shoulders and penetrated the heart, causing instant death.

Schmilowitz fled from the house, but he was intercepted by a detective. He had thrown away his revolver and submitted to arrest without a fight, saying: "It is a life for a life with me. I don't care what happens to me now."

OMAHA MERCHANTS FLEECED.

Man Who Is Reported to Have Operated in Los Angeles Works Game in Nebraska Metropolis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Using the name and credit of a reputable business firm of Tacoma, Wash., as a blind, a smooth crook has just fleeced Omaha merchants out of several thousand dollars' worth of merchandise. The same man is reported to have worked the same scheme in Los Angeles some months ago.

Two weeks ago a stranger, representing himself as "Mr. Bloom of Tacoma," landed in Columbus, Neb., rented a room, and opened business with a stock purchased in Omaha on the reputation credited Bloom in Tacoma by the commercial agencies. Developments showed the real Mr. Bloom was still in Tacoma, and in business.

Before the creditors could close in on the Columbus Bloom he packed and shipped his goods and skipped out. He is thought to have been arrested in Winnipeg today.

WOMEN ARRESTED.

CHARGED WITH ARSON.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SANTA ROSA, Nov. 9.—The burning of the Hotel Slade at Guernville on Thursday night was followed by the arrest of Mrs. Margaret Watson and Mrs. Grace Bierer, long residents of Guernville, but now having homes in San Francisco, on a charge of arson. They were the owners of the hotel.

While the authorities were investigating the fire, Mrs. Watson boarded a train for San Francisco. She was followed and taken from the train by Deputy Sheriffs Reynolds and Ramsey to the County Jail. The furniture in the hotel was insured, but the agent of the insurance company has refused to pay the loss.

Mrs. Bierer was brought from Guernville in custody of Sheriff Smith. The women have retained counsel, and, on his advice, refuse to discuss the charge against them.

BURGLAR CONFESSES.

PERHAPS ALLAWAY'S SLAYER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Failing to relieve his troubled conscience with strong drink and religion, Anthony Kelly, 42 years old, who says he is the black sheep of a wealthy Philadelphia family, went to a police station last night and confessed to having committed numerous burglaries.

The police believe that he also may know something about the recent murder of James W. Allaway, the Los Angeles commission merchant, who was shot and instantly killed November 5 by a burglar.

On account of the improvement in the Moroccan situation, the French government has ordered the withdrawal of four cruisers and nine torpedo boats from duty off the coast of Morocco.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

NATURE AT PLAY.

STORM RIOTS IN ALTADENA.

TREMENDOUS DOWNPOUR, BUT LITTLE DAMAGE.

Great Rain Is Limited to Small District, but Water Flows Like a River Down the Streets—Not a Drop Falls in Pasadena and Wilson's Peak Is Above Clouds.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Nov. 10.—Flood upon flood of water, pouring in blinding sheets, incessant thunder and the sky glowing with constant zigzags of lightning yesterday afternoon marked one of the heaviest storms that ever struck Altadena and the country lying below Rubio Cañon.

Although the downpour was the worst known in this region, little or no damage was done. One telegraph pole was struck by lightning and the Southern Pacific tracks at Mariposa and Lake avenue were covered with gravel. This is the whole extent of the damage reported, while, on the other hand, the orange groves and fruit trees generally are vastly benefited by the rain.

The storm began about 1 o'clock in the afternoon with a gentle rain, but the clouds quickly gathered near the mouth of Rubio Cañon, and from 1:30 to 1:45 o'clock the heaviest storm spent itself in a wild deluge, windless, almost, but lit by constant flashes of lightning, and accompanied by unbroken reverberations of thunder. Residents in Altadena say that the uproar and crash of the thunderbolts was the worst they ever experienced.

A peculiarity of the storm is that it was confined almost entirely to the neighborhood of Altadena. In this city not a drop of rain fell, and Wilson's Peak was far above the storm and in sunlight, whence the wild and awful networkof the lightning could be viewed in the valley below, tearing the clouds and darting through the massed vapors. The sight was something awful, and for a time it looked as if nothing could live under that curtain of rioting electricity.

According to the rain guage at the residence of LaFayette Porter in Altadena, .83 inch fell within the hour and 80 per cent. of this precipitation was in fifteen minutes. Shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon the waters rolling down the hillsides reached Pasadena. Raymond, Fair Oaks and Pasadena avenue were quickly impassible. On Fair Oaks the stream spread from curb to curb, and at a late hour tonight the gutters along these three streets are still running goodly and rapid streams.

That no damage was done by this unexpected storm is attributed to the fact that the roads in Altadena have been thoroughly improved and the oiled surfaces afford easy and smooth runways for the water. Had these highways been of the olden character, where the gravel and earth would be scoured and scraped up by the rushing flood, there is little doubt that houses would have been swept away and many lives lost. It is stated by residents of Altadena that at the height of the storm the water ran through all the north and south streets of the town from one to two feet deep and raced with such swiftness that no one could keep footing against the torrents. The actual downpour will never be known as the Porter rain gauge was outside the real storm center, which seemed to hang over Rubio Cañon. The storm spread over towards La Cañada, but no damage is reported from that place, and it is unlikely that it got the full strength of the flood.

Every railroad culvert was tried to its utmost, but only at Mariposa and Lake avenue did the torrent stop traffic by burying the Espee tracks in sand and gravel. Yesterday's storm brings the rainfall for the season at Altadena up to 4.48 inches. The precipitation for the season at Pasadena remains at 3.65 inches.

FINDS DEMENTED WIFE.

One of the saddest cases that has come to the knowledge of the local police had a happy ending yesterday when Chief of Police Delaney of Denver wired to Howard H. Favour, the local Chief, that Mrs. Charles M. Luker had been found, and was in care of the authorities. This woman is a young wife, and expected soon to make her husband happier than they had ever been before in their short married life. By one of those curious disturbances of nature her mind became unsettled, and without warning she disappeared from their home in Los Angeles last Tuesday. Charles M. Luker is a street-railway conductor in Los Angeles. Last Tuesday he came to his home and learned that his young wife had gone to Pasadena to visit friends. She had left her mother's house in the morning, without attracting unusual attention of her mother. The young husband, without any misgiving, came over to Pasadena to bring her home.

After inquiry at every likely place he found that she had disappeared. Then he reported the case to Chief Favour, who immediately began investigations, and found that the young woman had departed for Denver. Telegrams were immediately dispatched along the line, and her husband followed over the Santa Fé route to overtake her.

Yesterday Chief Favour made his heart glad at Albuquerque by the news that his wife would be found in Denver, safe and sound, and in the care of competent nurses at the police headquarters. The young woman will be brought home as soon as possible, and lovingly guarded until she returns to her right mind, which the physicians say will be within a few months. Mr. Luker was nearly distracted when he learned that his young wife was alone on such a perilous journey, as it was impossible to know whether or not she would leave the train before she reached Denver, where the family have friends.

The couple lived happily and there was no reason for the flight other than an uncommon but well-known freak of nature.

MAY DYNAMITE TRAIL.

P. J. McNally has been informed that the Carnegie Institution on Mt. Wilson has brought action in the courts in Los Angeles for an injunction to prevent him from dynamiting the new wagon trail leading to Mt. Wilson. When seen tonight, Mr. McNally, who owns the land upon which the trail debouches into the valley, said:

"I do not know that I had intended to use dynamite to stop all traffic over this trail except that for the Carnegie Institution; but I will use effective measures to this end and the suggestion of dynamite is a good one. When the Carnegie Institution wanted to build a trail by which the material for the observatory and supplies could be hauled by wagon to the mountain peak, I granted that right upon the express understanding that the road should never become a public highway.

"Now I understand and know that this trail is being used by automobile parties, by horseback riders and by pedestrians generally. I have protested to the Carnegie Institution people, and have called their attention to the agreement upon which I permitted the building of the trail. If dynamite is necessary to stop the public travel over this trail, I will use it or some other means equally good. I will be operating on my own land, and I think I can take care of the situation. I am friendly to the observatory people, and want to help them in every way I can, but not by injuring myself as the use of this road as a public highway would do. I have not yet learned of the suit."

CLOSES BUCKET SHOPS.

It will be impossible to operate a bucket shop in Pasadena after the passage of an ordinance to be introduced at the Council next Tuesday, at the suggestion of Mayor Thomas Earley. This law will be rather sweeping, as it will prohibit as a "bucket shop" every and any place where stocks are sold on a margin. That ought to be broad enough to hold them for a while. Since the closure in Los Angeles of certain firms who have operated what is commonly known as "bucket shop" business, there has been a constant threat that these concerns would move to Pasadena. Up to date the fear has not been realized, but in looking over the laws it was found that the ordinances were not explicit as to this feature and that these concerns might get a foothold. This is a move on the part of the Mayor and City Council to take time by the forelock and close the stable door, not after the horse is stolen, but before he can find a stall. From the temper of the Council there is little doubt that this ordinance, which has been drawn by City Attorney Wood, will pass as soon as the parliamentary procedure can be had.

So wide is the scope of the new law that it will wipe out absolutely all dealing in stocks on margins. City Attorney Wood says that he does not think that the legal steps to be taken by the Toledo Stock and Grain Company will affect the Pasadena law. It goes right to the root of the matter and makes no distinction between one kind of stock trading on margins and another. It closes the city to all transactions of the kind, and every company which deals in stocks here must buy the commodities outright or seek another stand for their business.

CLANG ROUSES IN SAWTELLE.

Unlocked Door in Bank Sets Off Burglar Alarm and Creates Excitement.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAWTELLE, Nov. 9.—The loud clanging of the burglar gong at the Citizens' Bank at Fourth and Orange streets tonight alarmed a large part of the town. Citizens scantily clad seized firearms and rushed into the streets, ready to aid in a burglar chase. Investigation developed the fact that the office force of the financial institution had been working late, and, on leaving for the night, had not locked the place completely. The partly open door caused the alarm to be set off, which produced the excitement.

WARSHIPS.

MAY VISIT CRUISERS THIS AFTERNOON.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN PEDRO, Nov. 9.—Some time before noon tomorrow the United States armored cruisers Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia and Colorado, four of Uncle Sam's biggest and best warships, under command of Rear-Admiral James H. Dayton, will round Point Firmin and come to an anchorage in the offing between San Pedro and Long Beach. The formidable fighting machines will remain for a week or ten days, and will then proceed to the navy yards at Mare Island and Bremerton. Visitors will be allowed on the ships after 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The four armored cruisers are identical in their construction and armament. The keels of all were laid in 1901, and a description of the Colorado will answer for the other three. The Colorado has a displacement of 13,680 tons, a speed of twenty-two knots, engines of 26,000 horse power, and cost $2,780,000. Her length along the water line is 502 feet, her extreme breadth 69.6 feet, and her mean draught 24.1 feet. Her normal coal supply is 900 tons, and her bunker capacity is 2000 tons.

The main batteries of all four of the warships consist of four eight-inch breech-loading rifles and fourteen six-inch rapid-fire guns, while in the secondary batteries are eighteen three-inch rapid-fire guns, twelve three-pounder rapid-fire, eight one-pounder rapid-fire, two three-inch rapid-fire field, two machine and six automatic Colt guns.

The full complement of each of the visiting ships consists of fourteen officers and 787 men. No definite programme has been announced for the fleet after arrival, but the men will be given liberal shore leave to allow them an opportunity to visit Los Angeles and other points of local interest in Southern California.

PULLING SNAGS.

TEARING AWAY MENACED PIER.

OCEAN PARK STRUCTURE IS TO BE REMOVED.

Men Are at Present Engaged on the Circular End and It Is Likely That Everything Will Be Removed as Far Shoreward as the Buildings. May Be Replaced With Concrete.

OCEAN PARK, Nov. 9.—As fast as men can do the work, the circular end of the trim pleasure pier is being torn away. This extends into the sea from the foot of Marine street and Pier avenue and, since its construction two years ago, has been the favorite haunt of those who enjoy piscatorial pursuits. The Pier-avenue section carries the obsolete outfall sewer pipe, but the other part of the structure was erected for pleasure purposes only.

From the center of the crescent there was a further extension into the sea and, at the end of this, a band stand had been provided. This was removed today, as the high tides were threatening disaster. The piling, unprotected by concrete or asphaltum, were badly eaten by the toredo and the bounding billows had already commenced to play havoc with the remainder of the pier and there was a fear that serious disaster would result to the auditorium, casino and roller coaster, near shore.

It was as a precautionary measure that the decision to dismantle the piers was followed by prompt action.

These structures represent an outlay of probably $20,000 and it is likely that everything will be removed as far shoreward as the buildings, and that the pile foundations to those structures will be encased in concrete. No plans have been reached as yet, but there is good reason to believe that not later than early spring a long pleasure pier with concrete piling will be run out to replace the frame construction.

ATTENDANCE INCREASING.

Enrollment in South Pasadena Schools Much Larger Than Had Been Anticipated.

SOUTH PASADENA, Nov. 9.—The public schools have felt the effect of the large influx of tourists and those who have come to stay. Especially has this been noticeable in the High Schools. The attendance has steadily increased ever since school opened, and the enrollment is now much higher than was anticipated when school opened. The same is true in a modified degree in the grammar schools. Both the High and grammar schools have made decided advances in the line of social and amusement societies.

The South Pasadena Bank has been paying its checks in currency and specie as usual, and has not resorted to the expediency of issuing scrip. It holds a very high percentage of reserve.

New Cure For Rupture

New Scientific Appliance, Always a Perfect Fit—Adjustable to Any Size Person—Easy, Comfortable, Never Slips, No Obnoxious Springs or Pads — Costs Less Than Many Common Trusses —Made For Men, Women or Children.

I Send It On Approval—You Wear It—If You Are Not Satisfied, I Refund Your Money.

I have invented a rupture appliance that I can safely say, by 30 years' experience in the rupture business, is the only one that will absolutely hold the rupture and never slip and yet is cool, comfortable, conforms to every movement of the body without chafing or hurting and costs less than many ordinary trusses. I have put the price so low that any person, rich or poor, can buy, and I absolutely guarantee it. I make it to your order—send it to you—you wear it, and if it doesn't satisfy you send it back to me and I will refund your money. That is the fairest proposition ever made by a rupture specialist. The banks or any responsible citizen in Marshall will tell you that is the way I do business—always absolutely on the square.

Jas. Britton, Cured of Rupture by C.E. Brooks

Here is what Mr. Jas. Britton, a prominent manufacturer of Bethlehem, Pa., writes:

"C. E. Brooks, Esq. Dear Sir:—I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact at times I did not know I had it on. It just adapted itself to the shape of the body and clung to the spot no matter what position I was in. It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture, if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They certainly would never regret it. My rupture is all healed up and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Jas. Britton."

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Write to me today and I will send you my book on Rupture and its Cure, showing my appliance and giving you prices and names of people who have tried it and been cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember I use no salves, no harness, no lies. Just a straight business deal at a reasonable price.

AFTER THE BLOW.

BIRDS STRANGE AND DRIFT TOO.

MARKS OF STORM SHOW IN LONG BEACH.

Fowl Usually Found on the Islands of the Sea and Drift Which Is not Commonly Seen on That Part of the Coast Are in Evidence There. Hospital Leased.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 9.—The breakers continue as high as yesterday, and the scenes along pier and beach today were the same. At Seaside Park the water entered several houses at high tide, but no damage was done. Two of the fender piles on the pier were washed away, and several more planks were torn loose from the lower deck. Because of the heavy swells none of the boats can land passengers at the wharf. Many sea birds usually found on the islands and new to the beach are seen, indicating that a heavy wind out at sea has driven the birds shoreward to stiller waters. Much drift foreign to this beach has also come ashore, denoting there is a disturbance far reaching.

LEASES HOSPITAL.

At a meeting this morning of the directors of the Long Beach Hospital Association terms were accepted by which the hospital passes into the control of the Battle Creek Sanitarium Company of Battle Creek, Mich., for five years, with an option of renewal or purchase at a stated sum.

The new lessees pay a yearly rental of 5 per cent. on a valuation of $65,000, and if the lease is renewed, will pay 7 per cent. yearly for the next five years, with the privilege of purchasing the hospital building and site at any time.

The sanitarium company will take possession the first of the month and will install its own physicians and nurses. They have in contemplation many changes and improvements, including the "rest cure" and other features which are peculiar to the sanitarium company.

The sanitarium company has made several previous attempts to locate in Long Beach, but heretofore has asked a bonus, which idea was not favorably received here.

The Long Beach Hospital is located on Tenth street, at the head of Linden avenue. It is a modern structure of brick, up to date, and was built less than two years ago. The stockholders were the physicians of the city, and a few business men, the latter being rather silent partners. As a result the hospital was mismanaged, and scandals crept in. Then the physicians asked their partners to take hold. There was an upheaval in the nursing force, and a reorganization was effected, since which time affairs have been running smoothly and satisfactorily.

Under the new control the hospital will be run as a private business institution.

SEASHORE NEWS NOTES.

Considerable excitement was caused at First and Pine about noon today by a fistic encounter between E. O. Lynn, advertising solicitor of the Press, and Frank Thomas, a sewer contractor. It was a lively bout while it lasted, but the combatants were quickly separated, with the newspaper man slightly the worse for the encounter, which he began. The trouble which caused the fight grew out of strictures made by Lynn, on a private spiritualistic seance which he attended as a guest of Thomas.

A deal for a scenic railway on the beach is pending, and Myron H. Wells is today negotiating for a site for the promoters, who are eastern men. If the deal is carried through, it means the addition of a $50,000 amusement feature to the present attractions along the Pike.

For the second time within a week, William Robinson, an employé on the Salt Lake drawbridge, was the victim of an accident in which a sliver of iron lodged in his eye and an oculist's services were necessary.

Nellie Bimmers was arrested today on complaint of Manager Arches of the bath-house, who charges the girl with the theft of a bath suit. She will have a hearing Monday before Recorder Hart.

HERMOSA SHY AS A JOINER.

TALK THERE OF ANNEXING TO REDONDO BEACH.

Various Improvements in Prospect for the Coming Summer for the Drawing of the Warm Weather Colony—Municipal Lighting Plant Is Favored by Local Association.

HERMOSA, Nov. 9.—Now that Hermosa is an incorporated city and is on the eve of building a municipal pavilion and city hall and installing an electric lighting plant to be operated by the city, the old talk of annexation to Redondo is again heard.

But, so far as Hermosa is concerned, the project is talk only. The disposition here seems now to be to go ahead and vote the necessary bonds and get the proposed improvements under way so this beach may be in position to entertain the crowds that are expected during the next summer season.

The Hermosa Beach Improvement Association has gone on record as in favor of the installation of a municipal electric lighting plant. Estimates have been secured as to the cost of machinery, poles, wiring, etc. From these it is gleaned that the projected plant would cost $12,815. It is estimated that the cost to the city to produce each kilowatt of energy would be 3 cents. The scheme is to supply it to consumers at 6 cents and still save the users 50 per cent. on their light bills.

SAY THERE'S ACCRETION.

Persons who have resided on this beach ever since there was any settlement profess to have observed that with the high tides of each winter season there is an accretion of sand until the shore line is seen to be steadily advancing westward. They declare that the march westward during the past ten years is quite noticeable.

HERMOSA POINTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Brandel have come to this city from Owosso, Mich., and will pass the winter here as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Byerly.

Mrs. B. F. Tufts is a seashore visitor from Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. D. L. Crane has arrived home from her visit to Chicago and Omaha.

S. M. Byerly has a new residence under way at Santa Fé avenue.

T. H. Williams has returned to the beach, after a business trip into Arizona.

HEAVY REGISTRATION.

List Indicates Big Increase in Pomona's Population—County Division Excites Much Interest.

POMONA, Nov. 9.—Between 300 and 400 voters have been registered by Deputies J. H. Cowdery and W. H. Truitt here during the past two days. Many of these are newcomers to Pomona, but some are citizens who have moved from one city ward to another since last registering. Others are young men just 21 years old. At least 100 registration blanks were sent out here from the county office, then 200 more had to be ordered, and finally it was necessary to send for more today. This is taken as an indication of the city's growth.

An effort is being made to properly register every legal voter here, so that a large vote may be polled at the county-division election, petitions for which are being rapidly signed in the districts affected.

In view of the fact of the memorial gift made to Occidental College by the late Mrs. L. Rutan through the Rutan estate's executor, John A. Gallup, the dean's chair at Occidental has been named in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Rutan. The gift amounts to about $40,000 worth of income business property in Pomona.

Rev. C. D. Williamson, formerly pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, but now residing in the East, where he has a pastorate at Madison, Ind., has been spending a day or two with friends here.

The assessments for the removal of the East Holt-avenue reservoir are now being paid at the offices of Guerin & Joos.

The teachers of the local High School entertained the members of the Board of Education and the other city teachers with a novel "Personally-conducted party to the Yosemite and the Mariposa Big Trees," at the High School last evening.

FOR VETERAN READERS.

Supply of the Current Reading Matter to Be Increased at Soldiers' Home.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Nov. 9.—Considerable attention is being given to the library just now. While ample room is provided for readers, the amount of current periodicals does not satisfy the demand of veteran patrons of this class of literature. An order has recently been sent to various agencies which will cause rejoicing in this department, and it is learned from Librarian Byles, by January 1, veterans will find spread upon the tables six of the greater eastern dailies, eleven Coast daily newspapers, thirteen Coast weeklies, five central and eastern weeklies, four religious weeklies, two religious monthlies; of magazines there will be twenty-eight of the leading monthlies, three illustrated weeklies and seven weeklies devoted to literature, religion and science. In addition to this, 475 new books, mostly of fiction, will, when added to those already on the shelves, bring the total to 6764 books.

The Doak Sheet Steel Company's Los Angeles agency has secured a contract for placing an embossed metal ceiling in the general dining hall. The price is $1074.40. POISONED BOY OUT OF DANGER

TUSTIN CHILD, WHO ATE ANT POISON, RECOVERING.

After Two Weeks of Suffering, Little Lad Is Allowed to Get Out of Bed—Sheriff to Make Things Warm for Disturbers of Social Functions. Bicycle Auction.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 9.—After a two weeks' struggle against poison, little 5-year-old Fred Glace of Tustin was yesterday allowed to get out of bed. Two weeks ago the boy licked clean a saucer of sweet, honey-like ant poison, and for several days he was on the verge of death, artificial means alone keeping him alive. The Glace family moved into the Ebel place at Tustin, and Mrs. Glace put her groceries on a shelf where there was a saucer containing ant poison, left there by former occupants. When she was away from home Fred went to the cupboard, and the "honey" striking his fancy, he left none of it. The illness that followed gave evidences of arsenic poisoning.

ORANGE COUNTY NOTES.

Sheriff Lacy has decided to keep watch for disturbers of parties and other social functions that he may make an example of refreshment raiders. He says that the practice of stealing refreshments has grown to such an extent that it has become a nuisance, and must be abated.

The city today auctioned off a dozen maverick bicycles picked up on the streets and vacant lots by officers during the last year and placed in the City Hall. Nearly every bicycle had been dismantled of the best parts, at least none of the wheel that was left was worth much. The twelve bicycles were sold for $13.75.

Marriage licenses have been issued here to Charles F. McEgan, aged 40, and Augusta Kremer, aged 38, both of Los Angeles; Edwin B. Shepp, aged 22, and Elsie M. Eft, aged 18, both of Pasadena; Martin C. Goodell, aged 74, and Anna Wilson Calvin, aged 58, both of Pasadena; Alfred Lawrence, aged 45, and Laura Collins, aged 28, both of Los Angeles; Sydney H. Smith, aged 21, of San Diego, and Helen Bertha Hawley, aged 20, of Santa Ana; Perry D. Kelsey, aged 21, and Lowhrine Coons, aged 18, both of Los Angeles.

ALMOST COMPLETED.

Southern Pacific's New Depot at Westminster Now Needs Only Few Finishing Touches.

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 9.—The Southern Pacific Company's new depot building is completed, with the exception of a few finishing touches. A construction crew of seventy-five men is engaged in making repairs and improvements on the track and right-of-way in this vicinity, placing the roadbed in the best condition possible for the heavy traffic expected during the celery-shipping season.

It is hoped here that as soon as the improvements now under way are completed the company will provide a passenger train service that will meet the requirements of local travel more satisfactorily than at present.

A horse owned by H. R. Case was run over and killed by a Southern Pacific freight train Friday.

George Newcombe has just arrived from Genesee county, Michigan, and will make his home in this vicinity.

Mrs. S. M. Thornburg of Los Angeles came down last Saturday and spent the time until Wednesday, visiting old friends.

A Tuesday Evening Study Club was organized here last evening. It will meet every Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the vestry of the Methodist church.

Judging from the shooting in this vicinity each morning, the gun clubs must be bagging a good deal of game.

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, Nov. 9.—The Orange County Preserving Company completed its run on tomatoes today. Since August 20 the concern has put up 80,000 cases of tomatoes, twenty-four two and a half-pound cans to the case. There is a stiff demand for these canned goods on account of the short crop, brought about by the rains, which brought on a blight.

The cannery has given employment to from 75 to 100 hands, and its pay roll has been large from the start.

Oranges will be shipped from the preserving company's house this season.

GROWING RAPIDLY.

Upland's Population Increased by Thirty in a Day—Vacant Houses Are Scarce.

UPLAND, Nov. 9.—In a single day the past week, over thirty people arrived in Upland from the East, with the avowed intention of making their homes here. The serious problem with a majority of them is to find houses in which to live. There is talk of organizing a company for the purpose of building houses for rent. Throughout the entire summer just past it was almost impossible to rent a desirable house in Upland, everything being occupied, and now people are willing to take almost any kind of dwelling in order to secure a place to live.

NEW ORANGES GOING EAST.

The first oranges and lemons of this season's crop are now going forward from the various packing-houses here, designed for the Thanksgiving trade in the East. Not in years has the fruit had such good color or been so sweet thus early in the season. Especially well advanced are the oranges on the ranches near the foothills, and many are beingd marketed from these favored localities. The lemon houses are having several busy sessions now. During the last four days of October at the house of the Lemon Growers' Exchange there were received 10,000 boxes of lemons, the banner day of the four witnessing the receipt of 2700 loose boxes. Something like three cars of lemons per day are now going to market. The lemon is coming to be one of the staple products of this section, the Upland variety having earned an enviable reputation in the East.

TAXES BEING COLLECTED.

Thursday was the day set aside here for the collection of taxes by Tax Collector Coy of San Bernardino. A good many people had gained the impression that since Los Angeles county was not collecting taxes, because of the legal holidays having been declared, that San Bernardino was doing likewise. This was erroneous, as Mr. Coy informs us that all the offices of the county are being kept open, and are grinding out business as usual, accepting all taxes, as advertised.

UPLAND'S BANKS SOUND.

While there has been some inconvenience experienced locally by the banks because of the money shortage, there has been no feeling of panic, and the ever-ready checks have served so far, at least, to answer all purposes.

Funeral services over the remains of John Hoffman were held at the Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon, after which the body was taken to Pasadena for cremation. A large number of people attended.

SAFE-BLOWER SADLY SOLD

EXPLODES STRONG BOX THAT IS EMPTY, UNLOCKED.

Redlands Burglar Does Neat Job, but Gets Nothing for His Pains. Party to Sensational Divorce Suit to Take Another Husband—Choral Society to Be Organized.

REDLANDS, Nov. 9.—A safe-blower played a good joke on himself last night by boring a hole in the top of a large safe which stands in the office of Z. Gilman, a feed and fuel dealer on West Citrus avenue, and blowing it to pieces, only to find it as bare of treasure as Mother Hubbard's famous cupboard. To add insult to injury, the safe was not locked, and the door could have been swung back by the hand of a child.

The safe contained a few papers of value only to Mr. Gilman. It was blown open about 2 o'clock this morning, and, although sacks of barley had been placed about the safe to deaden the sound, it was heard by many people in the neighborhood. Officer Roberts was not more than a block distant when he heard the explosion, and before he reached the Gilman building he was joined by A. C. Bay, who had also heard it.

Entrance had been gained by means of a rear door used for the wagons. The explosion broke the windows, knocked the door off the safe, and threw it around somewhat. There is not the slightest clew to the burglar. This is the first case of sensational safe-blowing known in this city for some time.

MRS. FISHER TO WED AGAIN.

The society set of Redlands were treated to a genuine sensation today, when it became noised about that Mrs. Florence V. Fisher, who was more than two years ago divorced from J. H. Fisher of this city, in one of the most sensational suits this county has ever known, is to be married on the 20th of this month to Edward P. Rawle of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place in Washington, D. C., where Mrs. Fisher went immediately after the divorce. Her sister, Mrs. Henry Fisher (the sisters having married father and son,) left several days ago for the East to witness the wedding. Mr. Rawle and his bride will reside in Philadelphia, where he has extensive interests. He is a relative of the Brills, manufacturers of street cars and railroad coaches, and is also interested in that business.

Mr. Rawle has been in Redlands a great deal, and was spending the winter here prior to the Fisher divorce suit. J. H. Fisher, the divorced husband, was married early last spring to Miss Olive Haver of this city.

SHIP ORANGES THIS WEEK.

Although orange shipping has not actually begun, before the end of next week the first fruit will have been shipped from Redlands. The shipments will not be heavy, however, as most packers and shippers are being urged to delay in this as much as possible, even though prices are now such as to tempt the fruit raiser. The fruit is still very green, and cannot help being sour and flavorless.

The Mutual Distributors' Company is picking only the ripest from the Highland groves, where the fruit always colors a little sooner than here. Some of the groves on the Heights are beginning to show quite yellow fruit even this early.

REDLANDS BREVITIES.

The musical people of Redlands are busying themselves in organizing a large choral society, with probably not less then 125 voices. Miss Mary E. Gowans, Mrs. A. G. Hubbard, Miss Roselyn Sargent, Mrs. Harry E. Paige and Roy Kendall are most active in the new organization. Although a director has not yet been chosen, Bruce Gordon Kingsley, organist of Temple Auditorium, Los Angeles, is being spoken of. The society wants to give "The Messiah" soon after Christmas, and either "The Creation" or "The Seasons" later.

The intermediate members of the various young people's Christian societies of this city joined in a banquet for which more than 100 covers were laid, last night, in the Presbyterian Church. Following the banquet, an Intermediate Union was formed, with the following officers: President, Harry Person; vice-president, L. B. Avery; recording secretary, Dwight Knapp; corresponding secretary, Anthony Chase; treasurer, G. E. Hazzard.

PUPILS IN "DRY" FIGHT.

PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN HOT IN SANTA BARBARA.

School Superintendent Refuses to Allow the Children to Be Entered in the Contest as Pupils, but Many of Them Are Enlisted by the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The biggest registration ever known in this city has just been completed for the municipal election to be held on December 3. The bitter fight over the liquor question, whether Santa Barbara shall be "wet" or "dry," accounts very largely for the big registration.

The city is very "wet," but the Prohibitionists are making the fight of their lives here for a "dry" town. The Women's Christian Temperance Union are even enlisting the school children in the fight, much against the will of School Superintendent Adrian, and on election day and the day previous the children will parade through the streets singing gospel and temperance songs.

Adrian has refused to allow the children to be entered in the fight as pupils, but their training for the battle commenced today, when several hundred were gathered at the Grace Methodist Church for practice. There will be another practice for the older daughters of the city Monday evening, at the Presbyterian Church.

Never has a campaign been so bitterly waged, and it would not surprise many of the politicians to find, when the votes shall have been counted, that the Prohibitionists will have carried the day.

The total number of registered voters, 2999, shows an increase of 607 names and an increase in every one of the fourteen precincts in the city.

WARSHIPS DEPART.

Admiral Dayton's big four fleet of armored cruisers, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Colorado and Maryland, weighed anchor shortly after 5 o'clock this evening, and started for San Pedro and Long Beach. The ships concluded taking on stores this morning.

All morning squads of marines were about the streets, rounding up belated bluejackets. But they did not get all of them. Some of the men who had overstayed their leaves of absence were picked up by the police last night, and today and marines took them on board. But when the ships finally sailed, more than an hour late because of the quest for belated ones, there were still a number, just how many could not be learned, unaccounted for.

LOOKS GOOD.

SIGNIFICANT QUERIES MADE.

SAN DIEGO COMMERCIAL BODY IS ASKED FOR DATA.

Questions Imply Probable Establishment of Another Steamship Line on This Coast—City Culverts Found to Be Too Weak for Traffic Passing Over Them.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 9.—The Panama Railroad Company has asked the Chamber of Commerce for data as to the rental of a medium-sized wharf, the port light and other charges to a vessel entering port, and the cost for stevedoring, all of which is taken to mean that the road itself, besides President Roosevelt, is conducting an investigation which may result in the establishment of a line of government steamers on the Coast.

CITY CULVERTS WEAK.

On the question of the liability of G. A. d'Hemecourt, the former City Engineer, City Attorney Puterbaugh has rendered an opinion to the effect that it will depend whether the acts of the engineer in drawing the plans and specifications for the paving of culverts, which are declared faulty, were judicial or ministerial acts, these and other questions of fact to be determined by the court. The city is at the expense of $2000 in strengthening culvert tops, which are unable to bear the weight of travel over them.

APPOINT DELEGATES.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce have adopted resolutions indorsing the work of President Roosevelt, the Inland Commission and the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in arousing additional interest in the importance of liberal appropriations for the development of the inland waterways and harbors of the country. The directors have also appointed Senators Flint and Perkins and Congressman Smith and L. L. Boone as delegates to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in Washington in December.

MUST PAY HALF.

The commission appointed by Gov. Gillett to apportion the common indebtedness and assessments of Imperial and San Diego counties will file its final report next week. The commission finds that the cost of the election, held in Imperial, was $1098.45, which sum must be paid by the two counties, equally divided.

GENERAL NOTES.

The University Heights Improvement Club has withdrawn its indorsement of the paving of University avenue, University boulevard and El Cajon avenue, declaring that it will be better to wait until the abutting property becomes of more value. The original indorsement of the proposition of the club gave the paving project a boost, but since the resolution was adopted vigorous opposition has been shown.

A few days ago the Chief of Police and Police Commissioners asked the City Council to revoke the license of Con McCarthy, liquor seller. McCarthy has since sold out his business to J. D. Viett, who asks for the assignment of the license held by McCarthy.

TO COMPEL AN ANSWER.

Another Effort Will Be Made to Induce Harriman to Reply to Questions Previously Propounded.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Efforts to compel E. H. Harriman to answer the questions propounded to him last spring by the Interstate Commerce Commission, concerning the Chicago and Alton Railroad, will be renewed next Wednesday.

C. A. Severans of counsel for the commission has arrived here. He will appear next week before Judge Hough in the Federal Circuit Court, where he will argue in behalf of the petition, which asks that the financier be compelled to answer the inquiries.

Mr. Harriman refused to answer when asked whether he owned any of the Alton stock sold to the Union Pacific, on the ground that this was not within the provinces of the inquisitors.

AT BRIDE'S REQUEST.

Steel Magnate Corey Takes Electrical Massage Treatment in Effort to Reduce His Weight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I would willingly give a year's salary to get rid of thirty-five pounds of adipose tissue," remarked William Ellis Corey, the $100,000-a-year president of the United States Steel Corporation, to a Turkish-bath rubber yesterday while he was undergoing an electrical massage treatment at Victor Preslier's baths.

Corey is taking this treatment twice a week. The steel magnate's amazing gain in weight since his second marriage has alarmed his actress bride, formerly Mabelle Gilman, and it is at her urgent behest that Corey is undergoing the treatment. Corey weighs 210 pounds today, or thirty-five pounds more than when he married the former comic-opera singer.

THINKS PRAYING PAYS.

Connecticut Preacher Gives Up Salary and Trusts to Supplications for Contributions.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW BRITAIN (Ct.) Nov. 9.—Rev. J. E. Klineburg, pastor of the Swedish Baptist Church, has been raising his salary by prayer for a year.

He said today that he thought the method a big success. He has raised $1150 for his own salary and $17,092 for his church during the year.

He notified the church trustees last year that he felt it his duty to give up his salary and trust to prayer to bring him contributions for his family.

CHARCOAL STOPS GAS ON YOUR STOMACH

Wonderful Absorbing Power of Charcoal When Taken in the Form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

TRIAL PACKAGE SENT FREE.

Charcoal, pure, simple charcoal, absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas. Where does the gas go to? It is just absorbed by the charcoal—the gas disappears and there is left a pure, fresh, sweet atmosphere, free from all impurities and germs.

That's what happens in your stomach when you take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful purifiers science has yet discovered.

You belch gas in company, sometimes, by accident, greatly to your own humiliation. That is because there is a great amount of gas being formed in your stomach by fermenting food. Your stomach is not digesting your food properly. Gas is inevitable. Whenever this happens, just take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges right after eating, and you will be surprised how quickly they will act. No more belchings; no more sour risings; eat all you want and what you want, and then if there is any gas going to be formed, one of these wonderful little absorbers, a Stuart Charcoal Lozenge, will take care of all the gas.

And it will do more than that. Every article of impurity in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away by the charcoal. No one seems to know why it does this, but it does, and does it wonderfully. You notice the difference in your appetite, general good feeling, and in the purity of your blood, right away.

You'll have no more bad taste in your mouth or bad breath, either from drinking, eating or smoking. Other people will notice your bad breath quicker than you will yourself. Make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, so when you talk to others you won't disgust them. Just one or two Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood, every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing,—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you'll like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Building

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The volume of business transacted in the past seven days was not as large as in some weeks, but it was normal, with the exception of one or two days in the middle of the week, when things were exceptionally quiet. The new money, scrip or clearinghouse certificates, has been received favorably, and all dealers are accepting and passing it. The fruit situation is gradually tightening on account of the decrease of the supply, and several lines are almost entirely off the market. All products cleaned up well on the last day, and there will be little stock left to spoil over Sunday.

There were less eggs received this week than in any preceding week of the year. The greatest number of arrivals on one day did not exceed seventy cases, while the average was nearer sixty. On Saturday receipts totaled 65 cases of fresh local ranch stock. There were no bids or offerings of these or any other kind. Only one car of fresh eastern eggs arrived during the week, and they were in the hands of a dealer off the exchange. The price on eggs is very firm, and for fresh stock most dealers are receiving 45 cents a dozen.

The receipts of butter were not so heavy as those of the week before, and there has been a firming-up tone right along. The decrease of the first part of the week just past has been sustained, and there has been a general clean-up of storage stock. The movement has been so free that indications point to a resumption of the 70-cent rate per 2-pound roll. On Saturday, 13,468 pounds of fresh stock were reported in. There were no bids or offerings on any grade.

Cheese arrivals were not more than ordinary, and there was considerable strength shown in the Anchor brands, which include several varieties, and which were boosted a cent, making them run from 20 instead of 19 cents a pound. There were some large offerings of Swiss cheese during the week, while of other varieties there was very little placed. On Saturday there were no receipts and no offerings.

Potatoes were the heaviest sufferers in declines of any lines quoted. Highland Burbanks were lower on Saturday, and they are now obtainable at 1.25 a sack. Salinas, on the other hand, were firmer, and a flat rate of 2.00 a sack was declared. The movement has been free at the reduced prices, and they are cleaning up pretty well. Oregons were sold in heavy quantities at fair quotations. Receipts for yesterday were 344 sacks, which was lower than the average of the week. Colorado potatoes were offered at 1.75 a sack and placed on call.

The onion market was very firm, and during the early half of the week advanced fractionally all along the line. The Australian Browns was the chief variety asked for, and sold in most cases in preference even to Yel- [illegible]

There were many changes in the fruit situation. Bartlett pears, with the exception of a small amount of cold storage stock, have disappeared, and the russet and "Winter Nelly" have taken their place. These two are both selling for less than the Bartlett. Figs went away up, and remained there. On Saturday white figs were bringing 1.25, while the blacks were in most instances bringing a quarter more.

Strawberries advanced this week to the highest figures they have brought since they appeared for the first time in the spring. A good berry sold as high as 13 cents a box. On Saturday there was a fractional decline on account of the poorness of most of the stock. Blackberries were about the same. Raspberries remained high, and nearly all of those on sale were the red variety. Cranberries were more firm, and selling at no less than 9.00 a barrel. On the retail market the consumer can buy them at 10 cents a quart.

Grapes were up and down without regularity. Muscats on Saturday sold at 1.40 to 1.50 a box. In the early part of the week they sold away up to 2.00 for good stock. Red Emperors have almost entirely taken the place of the Tokay, and the Mission grapes are in their prime. Cornichons are the most seasonable of this variety of fruit, and the latest of all are the Malagas, which are pretty well controlled locally by two firms.

Peaches were scarce, and only cold storage stock is being disposed of. The same may be said of plums, of which there were quite a few on the market. Apples were firm throughout. One of the finest of the late arrivals is the Ben Cap from Lompoc, which is selling at 1.75 a box. There were several offerings of Newtons and winter Pearmains on the exchange, but they were not accepted. Oregon is sending quite a few apples here, and all of them are excellent stock.

In the vegetable line, there were overstockages on two or three occasions. On Friday it was cauliflower, and several days previous it was turnips and radishes. Celery was lower, and sold down to 25 cents for the poor stock. Better grades brought in the neighborhood of 50 cents. There were some fine leeks on display at the same prices that are current for green onions. They were about the first which have been seen for a month. Horseradish and dill are new, and selling well. Lettuce is moving freely right along, and was well cleaned up before noon of Saturday.

The poultry situation was practically unchanged. Cull hens, that is, those weighing less than three pounds, were selling at 14 cents, while those higher than that were up to 15. Ducks and geese have been arriving more regularly, and turkeys are getting plentiful. The quotations on them, however, remain unchanged.

There were fish of all kinds, in any quantity, available during the entire week. Lobsters were also in sufficient evidence to fill any call, and sold regularly at 20 cents a pound. A few northern fish, especially salmon, have been coming in regularly, and there is a big call for them.

ON 'CHANGE.

NOT A FLURRY IN THE STOCK MARKET.

Trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange represented a considerable volume of business. The valuation of securities handled on the board reached a total of $11,320. More high-grade investment bonds and stocks were sold yesterday than for some time, and at prices which show no slump from previous boom prices. Very few concessions are being made in the asking prices of the stocks, and while bids are not as numerous as might be, those that are made are up well with the market.

That feature transactions were in the bonds of the Los Angeles Traction Company. Five of the 6 per cent. $1000 bonds were sold at 109, bringing in a gross amount of $5450 to the seller. The close was firm at 108@110. There is no concession in these prices as the bonds have not varied one-half a point in the bid price throughout the year. One $1000 bond of the 5 per cent. variety of the same company sold at 104, this bond closing at 104@105. Compared with quotations at the end of January this year, this is a gain of 5 points. Five $1000 bonds of the Associated Oil Company changed hands yesterday at 74. This price has dropped considerably within the last few weeks. It was offered at 75 on the close, without a bid.

Ten shares of Union Oil stock changed hands at 135. The close was steady at 134@150. Ten shares of Associated Oil changed hands at 23.75 and the close quoted the stock at 23.62½@24.37½, showing a lower level than at any time since the security was listed. A strong bear interest has been consistently influencing the market for the stock for several months past. No definite cause has been assigned for the slump in this oil stock, which began several months before any trouble appeared in the financial sky. A sale of 300 shares of Central Oil was sold at 82, and the stock closed at 75@82. The bank stocks remain at the levels quoted for Friday with no sales. Industrials show no activity.

The trade on the mining call did not amount to very much. The best trading was in forty shares of Goldfield Consolidated mines stock, which sold at 4.00 and closed at 4.00@4.25. Fourteen thousand shares of Consolidated Mines changed hands at 1⅝@1½ cents per share. The close was at 1½@1⅝. Five thousand shares of Johnnie Consolidated were sold at 9¼ and 1000 shares additional sold at 9⅝ on a buyer sixty contract.

DECREASE IN VOLUME.

Transactions in mining stocks on the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange yesterday did not total the large volume they did on Friday. In the majority of cases prices and quotations held firmly, and net gains were the rule rather than the exception for the day's business.

A further advance was recorded for Daisy, 100 shares of which were sold at 98. The close was at 97@98, showing a gain of one point, compared with the close on Friday morning. This was slightly off the close of the previous afternoon, when it was quoted at 98@101. Jumbo Extension sold at 76 cash and at 75 on a seller ten-day contract. The close was 76 bid. Sales totaled 400 shares. This was a net gain of two points for the day.

Florence continued strong, 100 shares changing hands at 2.30. The close was firm at 2.22½ bid, with none in the market. The bid was up 17½ points as compared with the closing quotation in Friday morning, and showed a net rise of 7½ points over the closing bid of Friday afternoon. Combination Fraction was strong, selling to the extent of 100 shares at 98, and closing quoted at 98@1.00. This compared with 95@98 for Friday morning and with 99 for Friday afternoon. Five hundred shares of Atlanta were traded in at 24 and the close was 24 bid. Scattering sales were made in Johnnie Consolidated at 9, in Milltown Fraction at 3½, in Dixie at 4 and in Lige Harris at .01. Nine thousand shares of Triangle stock also were sold at 7⅞@8. The close was at 7⅞ bid.

NORTHERN ORANGES IN.

Two Carloads from Porterville on Local Market—Southern California Navels Moving.

The northern section of California has begun to ship its golden harvest of navel oranges. The first car arrived in Los Angeles from Porterville yesterday in splendid condition. In size they averaged from the small 216s to the very large 96s. They were offered at prices ranging from $3.25 to $3.75. This is a considerable drop in the price existing for several weeks when the first few boxes went as high as $5.50 and latter fell to $4.50.

The first navels to be shipped from Southern California to the East went out of Riverside last Wednesday. There were two cars, both billed to New York. On arrival they will compete with the late Valencias and the imported Mediterranean Sweets. In the Redlands Riverside and Highland districts, the navels grow to perfection. In the immediate territory of this city the Valencia matures to much better advantage, owing both to soil and climate conditions.

The outlook for navels this year is very good. E. G. Dezell, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which handles a large share of the citrus output of Southern California, estimates that in the neighborhood of 20,000 carloads will be sent East."

"At present the navels are growing very well," said Mr. Dezell; "and there will be a larger crop of medium sizes, always more in demand than the large ones, which were so plentiful last year.

"Last year was an exceptionally fine one, and it is rather difficult to say whether this year will surpass it. If the present financial conditions do not become better I am afraid the growers will sustain considerable losses on account of the smaller demand. People can live without oranges, and naturally they will curtail their expenditures for this fruit.

"The crop on the trees does not show the great number of splits that have been reported several times. Perhaps 5 per cent. of the entire crop is affected in this manner, which is not unusual. The mistake in the estimates has been caused by the fact that the oranges thus affected color first, while those which are still green cannot be as closely figured."

Several other dealers have expressed their opinion in the same manner and they all are confident that the ensuing season for navels will be as good as any in the past.

NEW YORK MARKET.
SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The decision to withhold the publication of the bank statement until after the close of the stock market deprived it of what is usually the whole incentive to activity in the Saturday short session. The consequence was a torpid market and an inconsequential drift of prices. The bank statement made the unpleasant showing of a widening of the deficit below the legal reserve by the amount of $13,085,000, leaving the margin for repair before the legal reserve limit is resorted to at $51,924,625. The cash showing was not worse than was expected. The increase of $4,213,000 compared with an indicated decrease of $15,000,000 as far as the known movements of money could be traced. Moreover, bank officials asserted that not more than $5,000,000 of the week's $21,000,000 or receipts of foreign gold actually figure in the statement. The statement is computed for five days, owing to the holiday, instead of the usual six days, and this would serve to magnify the changes. So far as incoming gold may serve to release credits and reduce loans, this small proportion of gold arrivals which figure in the statement leaves the actual result understood. The additional gold engagements made this week must figure in the same way in extension of loans subject to liquidation on the arrival of gold. How far the new issues of clearinghouse certificates and the transfer of loans from trust companies to banks may figure in the loan item are purely conjectural. There was a stiffening of the premium paid for currency today. The feature was the further large transfers of currency to the interior, representing the forwarding to its destination of the gold import arrivals. The New York clearinghouse banks estimate that gross shipments of currency made by them to other towns this week amounted to $21,500,000; last week to $22,000,000 and the preceding week $21,500,000, an aggregate for the three weeks of $65,000,000. Bonds were steady. Total sales par value $1,787,000. U. S. 2's advanced 1 and the 4's 2 per cent. in the bid price on call during the week.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.
GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—After a nervous session the local wheat market closed strong on liquidation by shorts, the December delivery showing a net gain of 1⅛@1¼c. The demand for wheat which caused the strong rally late in the day was based chiefly on the weekly statement of the New York banks, which showed a more satisfactory condition that had been generally expected. An improved export demand and liberal shipments from here the past week helped to strengthen the market. There was an active trade during the last half of the session, but the volume of business early in the day was very light. Lower cables and sharp break in the corn market were bearish influences that caused weakness the first part of the day. The market closed strong. December opened ⅛@⅜c lower at ½@¼c higher at 90 to 90½, advanced to 91⅝, and closed at 91½. May sold between 99½ and 1.00⅝, and closed at 1.00⅜@1.00½. Renewed liquidation caused a slump of 2c in the price of corn. A large part of the sales were said to be for the account of an eastern trader. Prices advanced about 1c from the low point on buying by shorts induced by the strength of wheat. The close was steady. December opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 56⅝ to 56⅞, advanced to 57½, and then declined to 55⅝. The close was at 56⅛@56¼. Oats were weak almost all day. There was only a small volume of business. The market was affected principally be the action of corn. A 2 to 4c decline in cash showed a weakening influence. December opened at 46⅝, sold between 46¼ and 47½, and closed at 46½. Provisions were firm on active demand by shorts. Offerings were light throughout the entire day. A 15 to 20c advance in the price of live hogs was a bullish factor. At the close January pork was up 2½c, lard was 7½c and ribs 7½c higher.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour was barely steady; winter patents, 4.25@4.75; straights, 3.90@4.50; spring patents, 5.10@5.40; straights, 4.40@4.90; bakers, 3.30@4.10; No. 2 spring wheat, 98@1.01; No. 3, 90@1.00; No. 2 red, 89½@90; No. 2 corn, 58¾; No. 2 yellow, 59½@60; No. 2 oats, 46½; No. 3 white, 42@49; No. 2 rye, 76; good feeding barley, 62@70; fair to choice malting, 75@90; No. 1 northwestern flaxseed, 1.17; prime timothy seed, 4.20; clover, contract grades, 15.25; short ribs, sides (loose,) 7.25@8.25; mess pork, per bbl., 12.00@12.25; lard, per 100 lbs., 8.37½@8.50; short clear sides (boxed,) 7.50@8.00; whisky, basis of high wines, 1.35.

New York Cotton Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Cotton was irregular with Liverpool making a very disappointing showing in spite of such bullish visible supply figures. The foreign markets probably feel the effect of the drainage of the gold from Europe, which is likely to have a depressing influence on industrial affairs abroad. There was a rumor that the National Ginners' Association estimated crop at 11,132,000 bales. The papers were filled this morning with articles regarding the December squeeze and one of the leaders in the manipulation issued the statement saying the movement had been undertaken to facilitate the exportation of the cotton. Just to show how well the plan has worked, it might be pointed out that exports in October this year are 282,000 bales less than they were during October of the short crop Sully year. On the decline of about 5 to 7 points, there was more or less covering by shorts, which gave the market a steadier appearance toward the close.

The visible statement favors bulls, but was ignored under present conditions. The New York Cotton Exchange makes spinners' takings 266,000 bales, against 282,000 bales last year. It makes the increase in the visible of American cotton 167,000 bales, against 1[illegible],000 bales last year. The December squeeze is given a great deal of attention in the papers this morning. Members of the pool are criticised sharply on the ground that they are tying up a lot of money and generally disturbing the situation.

Generally fair weather was indicated for today and tomorrow.

It is generally believed that European trade, particularly in cotton goods, will suffer severely as result of exportation of so much gold.

Following is the range of prices today:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
January	9.98	10.11	9.94	10.09
March	10.10	10.15	10.06	10.14
May	10.19	10.26	10.08	10.18
December	10.25	10.47	10.22	10.45

STARVATION SITS AT LOADED TABLES

You Can Lead a Dyspeptic to The Table, But You Cannot Make Him Eat.

There comes a time in the lives of a great many men and women when even a sirloin steak ceases to be poetry. It becomes a protest. The appetite becomes fitful and fretful. Nothing on the bill of fare can coax it.

The appetite is there and yet it isn't.

This makes eating a mere matter of machinery—the mouth doesn't water. The stomach has been worked overtime, and the body and the brain are paying the penalty.

There are thousands of people in every station of life who are walking the earth today with dyspeptic stomachs. They wear a dejected, forlorn appearance, their energy is at zero, nothing interests them, and they interest no one, their faces are shrunk, their nerves are wilted and their shoulders sag.

What If a Man Gains the Whole World—and Lose His Appetite!

Everything on the table may look delicious, but nothing will be tempting. That's one sure sign of dyspepsia.

If you have ever felt bloated after eating and imagined it was your food that filled you; if you have felt your food lie "like a lump of lead" on your stomach; if you have had a bad, sour breath, difficulty in breathing after a meal, suffered from eructations, burning sensations, heartburn, brash, or gas on the stomach, make up your mind you have dyspepsia. And the chances are you have had it a long time.

Your stomach is overworked, abused, fagged out. The gastric and digestive juices are weak, the muscles of the stomach are jaded, and the whole business needs new life. It needs something which will take hold of the food as it comes in and do the digesting, and let your stomach take a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do that very thing. They contain a most powerful ingredient which helps the stomach in the process of digestion, cures dyspepsia, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, eructations, acidity or fermentation. They invigorate the stomach, increase the flow of gastric juice, and do two-thirds of what the stomach would have to do without them. That gives the stomach some rest, and a chance to get right again.

You will feel the change first in your mind and heart and then over your whole body. You'll feel rosy and sweet. That's the object. You can get these effective little tablets almost anywhere on earth for 50c a package.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Mexican Mines

Have produced hundreds of millions of dollars in gold, silver, copper and lead, and the ground has only been scratched.

The Richest

District is said to be in the corner formed by the three States—Chihuahua, Sinaloa and Sonora. Two great railroad systems, the Southern Pacific and the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient, are now rapidly building into this section, and will cross near some of the richest mines.

In the World

The Choix Consolidated Mining Co., Ltd., has 26 gold, silver, copper and lead mines in this district. These mines have shipped hundreds of thousands of dollars of ore, and the Company is now preparing to operate them according to modern methods. 75,000 shares of stock is offered at One Dollar per share. Each share conveys an interest in all of the 26 mines.

RECOUP YOUR LOSSES

The tight money market has enabled us to get a phenomenally favorable option on the 250,000 shares 10 per cent. preferred treasury stock of the Central Mining & Development Company, owning a 4-years' lease on the Butte Boys property in the Red Mountain section, under remarkably advantageous terms. Only 15 per cent. royalty. No time limit on removal of ore from dump, etc. The company's engineer reports assays up to $2000 per ton. An independent mining engineer, a shrewd, practical miner of seventeen years' standing, who made an examination of the property on his own account, and invested his money in its stock as a result, gives in a report the following among other ledges uncovered at the 165-foot level: 4 feet of $82 ore, 3½ feet of $400 ore and 18 inches of $1000 ore—gold, which would certainly indicate a mine of enormous value. Our contract with the company contains extraordinary provisions to protect investors. The Butte Boys mine is owned largely in Portland and reference can be made to prominent men of Portland.

Up to November 22nd we offer this 10 per cent. preferred treasury stock at 15c a share. We are specially anxious to hear from parties able to take large blocks of stock on favorable report of their own engineer.

Engineers' reports and other data on application. Closest investigation invited.

A Short Talk on Money Saving

This little pamphlet will tell you all about our new copyrighted system of saving; it is better than life insurance and much better than ordinary saving systems for it encourages regularity and persistence in saving. It is a system of monthly payments and withdrawals.

For instance—suppose you deposit $10.00 a month for 10 years. The surrender value would be $1472.40, or you can draw out $10.00 a month for 20 years and 8 months.

EASTERN STAR TWINKLES.

Oriental Chapter Conducts Installation Amid Oriental Splendor and Eats Oriental Refreshments.

Worthy Grand Patron Ben B. Cartwright of Alhambra last night installed the officers of Oriental Chapter, Order of the Easter Star, in the red room at the Masonic Temple on Hill street, followed by a banquet, at which about 400 ladies and gentleman sat down to chop suey and tea, served by Chinese brothers from the Chinese Masonic Temple of this city. The feast was topped off with ice cream and cake.

All the decorations were distinctly oriental, and the tables were decorated with magnificent pagoda cakes made by Chinese experts. In the red room were a number of beautiful teakwood chairs, with red satin covers, richly embroidered in silver and gold, which had been loaned for the occasion by the Chinese Masonic Temple.

The following were the officers installed: Elsie A. Sebastian, W.M.; Ora Taylor, W.P.; Mabelle Thorpe, A.M.; Helen Starr, Secretary; Elizabeth Barnard, Treasurer; Martha Harmon, C.; Daisy Aitland, A.C.; Allie A. Dixon, Adah; Lyda Wood, Ruth; Augusta Mackerboth, Esther; Florence E. Colyear, Martha; Emma Boyd, Electa; Jennie Starr, organist; Sarah Butler, Chaplain; Mysie Heaton, Warder; A. J. Maas, Sentinel.

Mrs. C. L. Logan acted as Grand Marshal in the installation ceremonies. The outgoing Worthy Matron was Ola Taylor, and the outgoing Worthy Patron was O. Shepard Barnum.

PLAN PILGRIMAGE.

Local Elks Will Migrate to San Diego for Three Days' Festivities With Brethren.

Five hundred Elks from Los Angeles and from other Southern California lodges will go to San Diego on Thursday to take part in the dedication festivities of the new Elks' hall in that city. A special train will leave here on Thursday morning over the Santa Fé to convey the visitors to the meeting place.

The celebration will cover three days, both afternoon and evening entertainments being held. The dedication services proper will be held on Thursday afternoon, and will be followed by a lodge meeting and banquet to the visiting Elks. The ladies will, in the evening, be entertained at one of the San Diego theaters.

Past Grand Exalted Ruler Henry A. Melvin of Oakland will be present, and it is thought likely that some of the active officers of the grand lodge will also be in attendance, invitations having been sent out to them.

Friday and Saturday will be devoted to excursions into the surrounding country, a trip into Old Mexico being one of the attractions planned. The celebration will come to a close on Saturday night.

SLUGGED FROM BEHIND.

L. Lanardo, a laborer residing at No. 302 East Third street, was knocked down and robbed by a hold-up man near San Pedro and Third streets, about 9 o'clock last night. A patrolman found him lying on the sidewalk, bleeding from the head, and thought that he had sustained the injury in a fall while staggering along the street. After he had sent the man to the Central Police Station the police surgeons discovered that Lanardo was not intoxicated. They revived him. He told two policemen that he heard a man stealing up behind him, and when he turned to see who it was the robber struck him a terrific blow, which rendered him unconscious. He claimed that he had a watch and $45, which are missing. Witnesses along San Pedro street say that they saw two men struggling, but thought nothing of the affair until they saw one man fall and the other stoop over him for a minute and then run. They said that the man entered a saloon at Third and Los Angeles streets. The police could find no trace of the robber.

STANFORD MEN BANQUET.

Dinner Last Night Becomes Celebration of Victory of Palo Alto Eleven Over Berkeley.

The fourth annual banquet of the Stanford Club of Los Angeles was held last night in the banquet hall of the Lankershim Hotel. Covers were laid for 156, and the affair took upon itself the form of a celebration of the victory of Stanford over the University of California on the football field yesterday.

The room was beautifully decorated with Stanford colors, and a large figure eight, composed of asparagus plumosus, hung from the ceiling of the room. From each plate little red balloons were suspended, and from time to time the silk cords holding these captive were cut, and before the evening was over the ceiling was dotted with the balloons with their strings attached.

Fredrick B. Braden of the class of 1909 acted as toastmaster. Addresses were delivered by George H. Woodruff, Hon. Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Lewis R. Freeman, George B. Culver and Hon. Albert L. Stephens.

The arrangements for the affair were in charge of E. D. Lyman, Andrew J. Copp, Jr., William I. Traeger, George W. Dryer, George B. Culver and Dr. P. A. Adams.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON ILL.

H. S. Farwell, son of Simeon Farwell, a millionaire merchant of Chicago, who has been a guest at the Lankershim for the last few weeks, was yesterday operated upon for appendicitis. Farwell has been spending the last month or so in Southern California, and the first of the last week became ill. As his condition became worse, his father and sister, Mrs. Ruth F. Gridely, of Chicago, were informed of the young man's condition, and yesterday they arrived at the hotel. It was stated last night that the operation was successful and that the patient would soon be well again.

WAS IT "KNOCK-OUT" DROPS?

Claiming that he had been poisoned by "peter players," Salvadore Timerez, staggered into the arms of Patrolman Donaghy last night and fell unconscious before the officer could question the man farther. After the police surgeons had worked over Timerez for nearly a half hour they succeeded in reviving him. He claimed that he had gone into a saloon at Macy and Anderson streets and that two men had induced him to drink liquor which made him ill at once. He rushed from the saloon against their protests. Timerez had about $50 on his person.

ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

J. H. Sheffield of No. 1341 West Twelfth street, and Oscar Anderson of No. 1324 Southerland street, were arrested last night on a charge of rape at the instance of a 15-year-old girl. The case is a technical one the officers say. Sheffield represented that he was a wealthy unmarried man while he is said to have a wife in this city and has been employed as a street car conductor. Anderson has been employed by the Borrows Adding Machine Company.

TAKE MONEY ONLY.

Burglars entered the room of Mrs. J. Drake, at No. 334 South Main street, yesterday afternoon and took $30 in cash. The burglars overlooked about $100 worth of jewelry. They evidently entered the room by prying open a window. The police have no clew to the robbers.

The Finest Upright Piano Ever Made

When this is said of the Steinway Vertegrand, we fully realize how sweeping and broad the statement will appear to you. To us it is but a simple truth.

The Vertegrand is best because it is an upright in form only—for convenience. It is in effect a grand piano. It has a bigness of tone that yields the broad orchestral effect of a grand; responsiveness that is looked for only in a grand; a nicety of action that affords those musical effects that seems a part of the grand only; a delicacy of touch that suggests the grand action, and a richness of voice that is associated only with the masterpieces of piano making.

The Vertegrand is the best because it is made best. It is made of the same quality materials used in the costliest Steinway Concert pianos; made by the same men; made under the personal direction of eight members of the Steinway family. It is a great art work, made and priced for popular sale—$575 cash.

LIGHT ON BYGONE EONS.

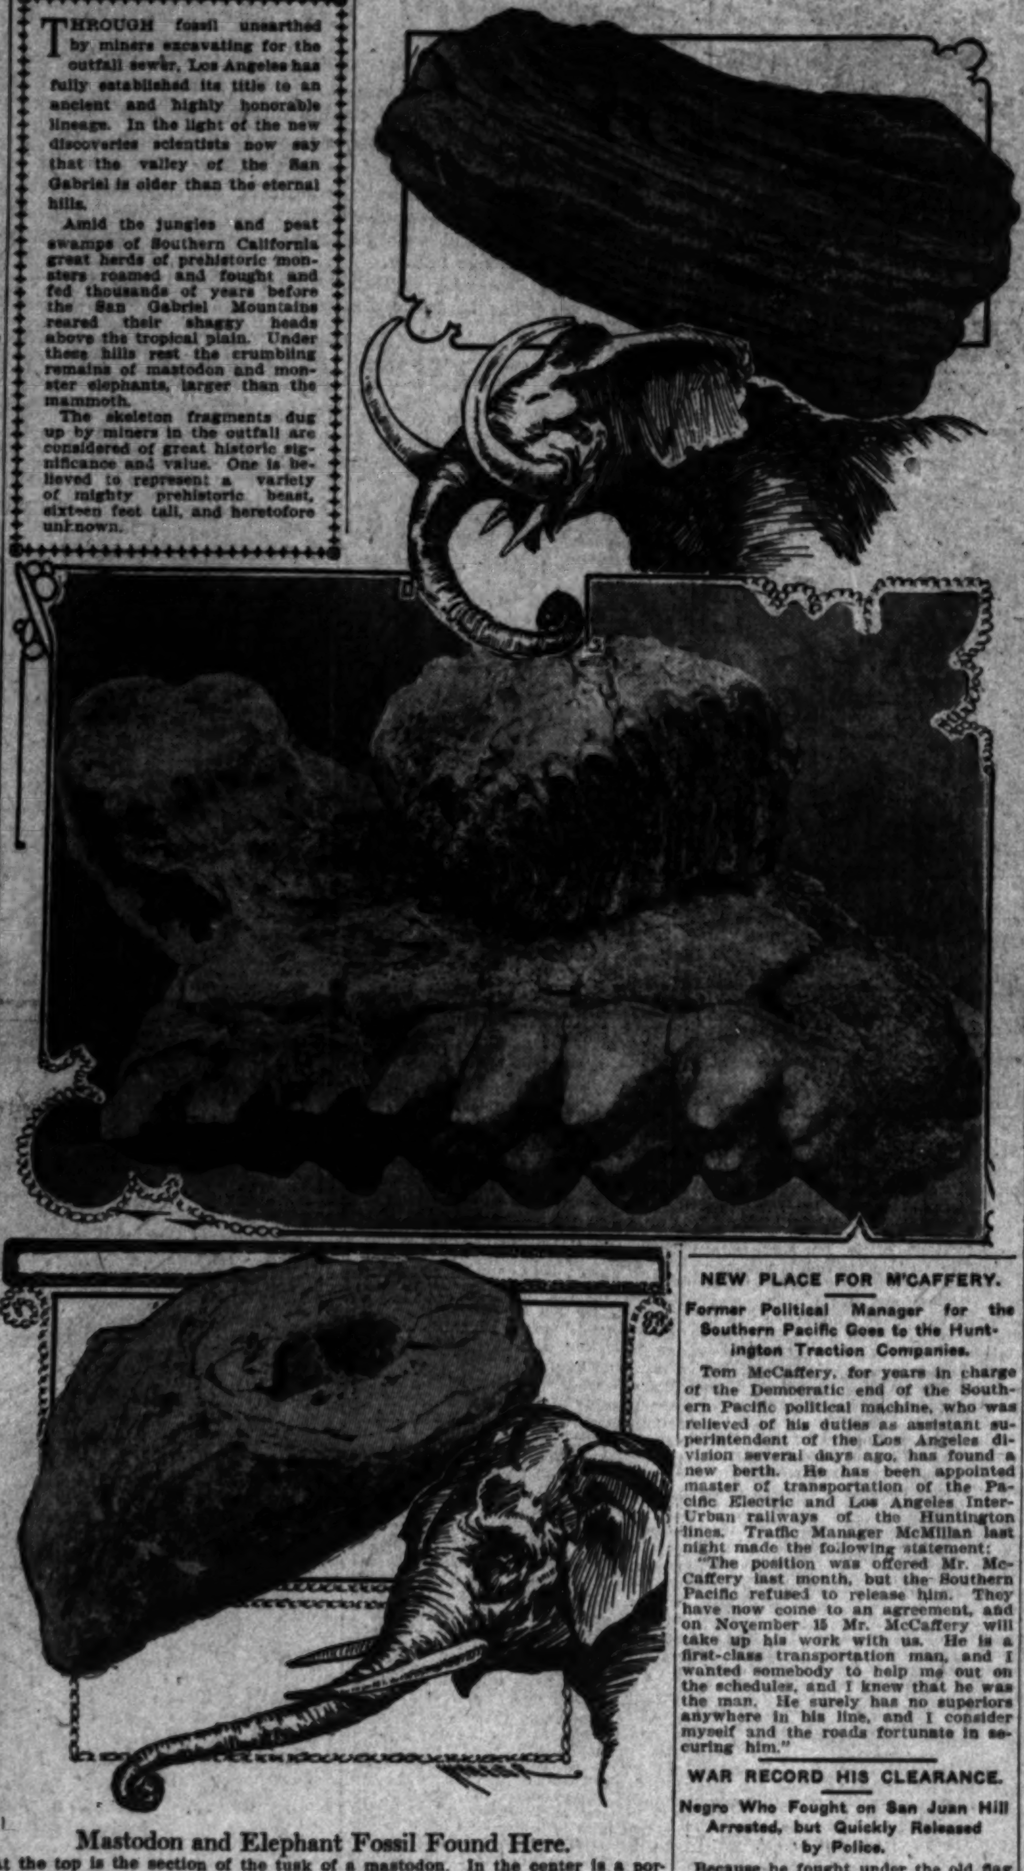
ANIMAL WORLD'S CRADLE IS SAN GABRIEL VALLEY.

Rich Fossil Discoveries in Outfall Tunnel Show That Monsters Once Roamed Here. Scientists Upset.

THROUGH fossil unearthed by miners excavating for the outfall sewer, Los Angeles has fully established its title to an ancient and highly honorable lineage. In the light of the new discoveries scientists now say that the valley of the San Gabriel is older than the eternal hills.

Amid the jungles and peat swamps of Southern California great herds of prehistoric monsters roamed and fought and fed thousands of years before the San Gabriel Mountains reared their shaggy heads above the tropical plain. Under these hills rest the crumbling remains of mastodon and monster elephants, larger than the mammoth.

The skeleton fragments dug up by miners in the outfall are considered of great historic significance and value. One is believed to represent a variety of mighty prehistoric beast, sixteen feet tall, and heretofore unknown.



Mastodon and Elephant Fossil Found Here.

At the top is the section of the tusk of a mastodon. In the center is a portion of the lower maxillary of the same animal, and on it rests a portion of the jaw of the prehistoric two-toed horse, showing the teeth. At the bottom is a fragment of tusk of the Elephas Columbi, pronounced by the Smithsonian Institution to have been larger than the mammoth.

In excavating for the Los Angeles outfall sewer the miners uncovered fragments of two huge skeletons. City Engineer Hamlin sent specimens of each to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. Yesterday he received from Assistant Secretary Rathbum of the National Museum a communication to the effect that one skeleton is that of a mighty mastodon, possibly a new variety, and the other that of elephas columbi, a huge mammal larger than the far-famed mammoth of Siberia and Alaska.

Compared to old elephas columbi the shaggy mammoth was a dwarf rather than a jumbo. When columbi entered the peat swamps the mammoth fled back to the jungle and pulled down a few big trees to form an ante-diluvian brush heap beneath which he crouched until columbi fed and retired.

The mastodon is still larger than his fossil neighbor. Portions of the skeletons unearthed indicate that the mastodon was not less than fifteen feet high, and the mammoth about twelve feet high. The outfall sewer diggers thought they had disturbed the burial place of some ancient saurian and paid little attention to the fossils. It is possible that further excavations will be made in the Inglewood gravel beds by the geologists of the Smithsonian Institution.

DOUBLE SURPRISE TO SCIENCE.

The surprise to the scientists is that the mastodon and the elephant should be found together in the same feeding ground. It has always been supposed that they existed in different regions and were the products of different cycles. But in the quicksands under the Inglewood hills elephant and mastodon are found side by side. About them are the bones of a fossil horse, a wonderful two-toed animal, marked by his cloven hoof; there are also bones of the forefoot of the fossil deer. These fossils have lain undisturbed for a period estimated variously from 20,000 to 50,000 years.

In sand beneath the strata where these fossils were discovered the miners found rare specimens of sea shell of the tertiary period. All the specimens from the sea were on a lower level than the gravel where the mastodon and elephant were imbedded.

This fact alone is of prime interest to science, as it establishes that the San Gabriel Valley has been a part of the mainland almost from the beginning of things. England ceases to be the mother country and Germany the fatherland to us. The jungles of Southern California were hoary with age whe the British Isles and the greater portion of Germany emerged from the North Sea.

This may have been the Garden of Eden, after all.

So much for the mute testimony of these old fossils that have stood sentinel under the Inglewood highlands for 500 centuries. The cycle of their birth is hidden away in the mysteries of the twilight centuries, aeons before the birth of tradition.

Several years ago gold miners discovered the skeleton of a mastodon while driving a tunnel through Table Mountain in the northern part of the State. This fossil established the fact that the cycle of the mastodon antedates that when the coast mountains came, not out of the sea, as tradition relates, but out of the heart of a tropical jungle.

It is possible that the discovery of

NEW PLACE FOR M'CAFFERY.

Former Political Manager for the Southern Pacific Goes to the Huntington Traction Companies.

Tom McCaffery, for years in charge of the Democratic end of the Southern Pacific political machine, who was relieved of his duties as assistant superintendent of the Los Angeles division several days ago, has found a new berth. He has been appointed master of transportation of the Pacific Electric and Los Angeles Inter-Urban railways of the Huntington lines. Traffic Manager McMillan last night made the following statement:

"The position was offered Mr. McCaffery last month, but the Southern Pacific refused to release him. They have now come to an agreement, and on November 15 Mr. McCaffery will take up his work with us. He is a first-class transportation man, and I wanted somebody to help me out on the schedules, and I knew that he was the man. He surely has no superiors anywhere in his line, and I consider myself and the roads fortunate in securing him."

WAR RECORD HIS CLEARANCE.

Negro Who Fought on San Juan Hill Arrested, but Quickly Released by Police.

Because he fought under the old flag with Roosevelt, at San Juan Hill, James Jackson, an old negro, was yesterday released from arrest by Lieut. Murray at the Police Station.

The old gray-haired darky had been arrested by Patrolman Brown because he insisted on standing on a corner where a fire box was located. Jackson explained that he was waiting for a friend, but he was arrested, and sent to the Police Station.

"Hones' to Gawd," he stuttered to the desk sergeant, "I ain't done nuffin in all my life. I don't belong in this yer station. I wuz a sojoh wif Roosevelt at San Juan, and I got a bullet in de ahm and anuddeh in de leg. And heah I done been arrested foh standin' on de cohneh."

The officers were inclined to have a little fun with the old negro. They asked him how it felt to be shot at, and he gave them a graphic description. Then they began to feel kind of queer when Jackson bared his arm and showed an ugly scar above the elbow where a bullet had polwed its way. A surgeon from the Receiving Hospital testified as to the character of that scar.

Then Lieut. Murray came up. "Jackson have you been in the army, are you sure about that?" said Murray.

"Suah to Gawd," said the old man.

"All right," said Murray, "trot out there and salute your officer."

With a grin, the old negro turned about and walked to the door, then he wheeled and advanced straight toward Murray. At the regulation five paces the negro stopped, his heels clicked together, and his hand swung to the tattered brim of his old hat.

There he stood at attention as stiff as a ramrod.

"All right, Jackson," said Murray, "you may go home, and you needn't report back here Monday morning as instructed. That salute tells your case very well."

Sergt. Redmond, who was in the army in Cuba, stated that Jackson was one of the crack riflemen, and went up the San Juan Hill in the famous charge. Jackson is drawing a pension, and now drives an express wagon. He will not again be molested.

CATCH FISH WITH RAKES.

Residents of Northwest Section Make Big Hauls When Reservoir Is Cleaned Out.

It was just like making hay while the sun shone yesterday to catch fish in the northwest part of Los Angeles. All you had to do was to take a rake, go out to the city reservoir near Reservoir and Lucile streets, and rake 'em in.

City employés were cleaning the reservoir and turned most of the water into the creek that flows past the Cahuenga postoffice, northwest of Temple and Hoover streets. Some of the fish were twelve inches long. Men, women, boys and girls waded into the creek with rakes and hauled them out until bags and baskets were filled.

SOON TO ASK COUNTY SPLIT.

POMONA'S PETITION WILL BE FILED NEXT WEEK.

Secret as to Boundaries Then Will Come Out and the Opposition, Which Is Strong in Many Sections, Will Be Able to Get Busy—Mystery Hurts the Movement.

One week from tomorrow, it is expected, the promoters of the proposed new county of Pomona will present their petition to the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county, asking that a special election be called for the purpose of obtaining a vote on the question that has been agitating the eastern portion of Los Angeles county and the western part of San Bernardino county for several months past.

When the petition is presented, and probably not before, the exact boundaries of the proposed new county will be disclosed and the opponents will know for the first time whether it is planned to take them into the new county or to leave them where they desire to be—in Los Angeles or San Bernardino county.

While the convention at Pomona a few weeks ago, at which county officers were nominated, went through with a rush—just like a machine convention—there was dense mystery as to what the boundaries would be, and the managers of the campaign frankly acknowledged that they were making a secret of the boundaries in the hope that the opposition could not do effective work in heading off the movement.

As the opponents, under the law, have forty days in which to prepare and file a protest after the filing of the original petition, it is hard to see what the proponents expect to gain through secrecy. In fact, reports from the territory affected indicate that the cloak of mystery has hurt the division cause very greatly.

Azusa simply will not go into another county. That has been understood from the start, so that city will not be included in the boundaries that will be submitted to the Supervisors. There is strong opposition to division in Glendora, Puente, Covina and several other sections, and when the counter petitions go into circulation, it is pretty safe to guess that a great deal of territory will ask to be excluded from the proposed new county.

It is admitted by managers of the movement that the real battle ground will be on the west line of the proposed county—taking in Glendora, Covina, Puente and other towns and settlements, all of which prefer to remain in rich and prosperous Los Angeles county with its low tax rate and economical government, rather than to step off into space and try an experiment that has proved costly in various new counties that have been formed in the past.

It is asserted by the proponents of the plan that Ontario, Upland and Cucamonga, which are in San Bernardino county, welcome the chance to get into a new and smaller county, but the opposition in those places has not yet been heard from.

With the filing of the petition next week, the real fight will be on, and some feathers probably will fly.

FOUND AFTER MANY YEARS.

Members of the Weik Family United in Los Angeles After Long Separation.

After a search of twenty-five years, two branches of the Weik family met in Los Angeles last week when Fred Weik of Rochester, N. Y., walked into the office of Fred C. Weik, a real estate agent, at No. 436 South Spring street. Through an advertisement, Fred Weik saw that a namesake was a real estate agent here. Upon inquiry he found that Fred C. Weik came from the same part of the country as his father. For the past week reminiscences of the families have been wined and dined over in a celebration of the meeting.

In 1860 Charles Weik and John Weik, brothers, came to America. They enlisted in a volunteer regiment. In the battle of Bull Run Charles Weik was killed. His brother went through a four-year campaign and then settled in Michigan.

George Weik, the father of Fred C. Weik, of Los Angeles, came to America in 1883. He looked up the fate of his brothers who had enlisted in the Union army. He found that Charles had been killed, but that John was living in Michigan. Through the records of the Grand Army of the Republic he learned that John had died about two months before he arrived in America. He went to Michigan and searched through the county where the Weik family was supposed to be living. He could find no trace of them. He died in 1892. Upon his death-bed he asked his children to continue the search.

Fred Weik, is the eldest son of John Weik. He is a traveling salesman for the Vanderville & King Seed Company of Rochester. His mother is living and he has two brothers and two sisters, living in Rochester.

Fred C. Weik, who is the son of George Weik, has been a resident of Los Angeles for ten years. He was proprietor of a bakery until seven years ago when he went into the real estate business.

"AS YE SOW."

SEEDING VAST GRAIN EMPIRE.

Army at Work in the Great San Fernando Valley.

Steam and Horse Plows Turn Thousands of Acres.

Wondrous Change Dawning for Rich Domain.

Half a dozen monster steam plows and hundreds of smaller plows drawn by horses have just started the fall tilling of one of the few great grain fields of the world—the collection of extensive ranches that make up the vast San Fernando Valley, at the very gates of Los Angeles. Nearly 2000 acres of soil is turned over and seeded daily in preparation for next year's harvest. Hundreds of horses and scores of men are engaged in the task. At least 75,000 acres in this wonderful grain empire is to be seeded to wheat and barley, the former predominating.

And yet this season's plowing and planting marks the beginning of the end of the grain industry in Southern California, and particularly in the San Fernando Valley. Inch by inch, acre by acre, the grain lands are encroached upon. The march of civilization is proving year by year that other crops than grain yield richer returns, and it can be but a short time before this expansive and fertile valley will be dotted with fruit ranches of comparatively small area, yet ten times more productive of wealth per acre than the golden grain fields that each year pour forth their yellow harvest.

Most wonderful of all the modern accessories of the up-to-date rancher are the great steam plows that have joined forces with the combined harvesters and other improvements in agricultural machinery to reduce expense and save labor in the production of the world's great food staple—grain. At least six of these great tillers of the soil are employed in the enormous task of pulverizing and seeding the soil of the rich San Fernando Valley. The task, it is expected, will be completed within forty days of the time of starting—its end probably coming early in December.

Thirty acres a day is the portion set for each of these great steam plows, which are distributed at various points in the valley, four on the 52,000-acre tract of the Los Angeles Farming and Milling Company, one on a portion of the 18,000-acre ranch of the San Fernando Mission Land Company, and one on parts of the two great Porter ranches.

In addition to the steam plows, there are countless smaller implements of the same kind, some drawn by seven horses, some by only two.

STEAM AND HORSE TOGETHER.

Horse and engine work together on the same ranch, but steam has far the better of it, both in speed and in economy, for the steam plow will perform in a day more than four times what can be done by four seven-horse plows, and there is a saving, not only of the services of at least two men, but greatly in the cost of operation, for the traction engine that drags the plow does not "eat its head off" every day.

It is true that the engine requires fuel, but oil is the fuel, and it is had at low cost in the San Fernando country, for productive oil wells are near at hand.

Each thirty-horse-power engine used in hauling the plows consumes probably 300 gallons of oil a day, and it is figured that the cost for this fuel is about 1 cent a gallon, or $3 for a day's supply. Feed for thirty horses, estimated at 30 cents a day, would run to $9, not counting the time and trouble in caring for this number of animals, nor considering that at least two additional men are required to guide the horses attached to the plows; also not taking into consideration the fact that, while the steam plows not only open up the ground, but seed it and harrow it at the same operation, while, with the horse plows, the seeding and harrowing usually are separate tasks.

LIKE PONDEROUS AUTO.

Like a ponderous automobile at reduced speed, the traction engines drag the plows about the field at a gait that keeps a team of horses attached to a light buggy traveling at a lively speed to keep up. Along straight rows and around sharp corners they are guided by the engineers, with almost the trueness that a trolley car follows the rail, while in other parts of possibly the same field, the seven-horse plows trail along at a "homeward-the-weary-plowman-plods-his-way" gait.

Behind each traction engine follow twenty eight-inch plows, turning a furrow that in the aggregate measures more than twelve feet. From seed boxes just above the plows drop the grains of wheat that are to spring in a sea of green after the first rains. Dragging along in a lazy sort of way at the side of these plows are four harrows that pulverize the soil and cover the seed to the required depth.

The heavy engine and its trailers pass over the field but once, and the ground is plowed, seeded and harrowed. All that is needed is a little moisture to germinate the seed.

It is an odd and a wonderful sight to watch one of these great engines far off in the valley, puffing gently away over the weed-covered surface, leaving in its wake a great wide stretch of cultivated soil, rapidly approaching and reaching the point of observation, then turning and going 'round and 'round, until, within a short

BRIGHT MINDS WILL GATHER.

Rare Treat Is in Store for Women at Monrovia.

Federation Club Convention to Last Three Days.

Excellent Programme Mapped Out for Occasion.

The Los Angeles district of the California Federation of Women's Clubs has planned to outshine every previous effort in the programme for the coming convention at Monrovia, November 19, 20 and 21. A glance at the features to be presented shows that bright minds have been at work.

The committee that evolved this admirable schedule includes Mrs. Mathew Robertson, Mrs. R. J. Waters, Mrs. Egelhof-Rundel, Mrs. A. T. Stewart, Mrs. Bertram Davies and Mrs. Fred Hooker Jones.

The council of presidents will be held Tuesday afternoon, November 19, at 2:30 p.m., to consider the following subjects: "Our New Departments," "Club Bird Days," "Eternal Vigilance," "Is a Registration Bureau for Visiting Club Advisable?" "Enlargement of Club Work," "The Tie that Binds," and questions on pertinent topics.

Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, president of the district, will preside at this council, which is open to presidents of all federated clubs. The Monrovia Saturday Afternoon Club has arranged a reception and musical for Tuesday evening in honor of delegates and friends.

The convention will be formally opened Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, all meetings being held at the Woman's Club House in Monrovia. Rev. Clark Marsh will make the invocation, and the address of welcome will come from Mrs. E. D. Northrup, president of the Hostess Club. Mrs. Porter will respond.

THE FIRST MORNING.

The remainder of the morning will be occupied as follows: Reports of committees—Credentials, by Mrs. R. W. Pridham; Programme, by Mrs. Matthew Robertson; reports of district officers; presentation of State officials, with address from the State president, Mrs. E. D. Buss of Bakersfield; "Foretaste of the Ninth Biennial," Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles; "Club Extension," Mrs. Russell J. Waters.

Wednesday afternoon will present a vital part of the three days' proceedings, with reports from the chairmen of a number of the departments of district work. "Among Ourselves," will include "The Safeguard of Liberty," Mrs. E. B. Root, chairman of education; "Our Good Green Wood," Mrs. W. W. Orcutt, chairman of forestry; "Rescuing from Oblivion," Mrs. J. H. Johnson, chairman of history and landmarks; "The Welfare of the Whole," Mrs. William Baurhyte, chairman of philanthropy; "Fair Exchange," Mrs. Egelhof-Rundel, chairman of reciprocity; "Educating the Homes," Miss Lois Avery, chairman of household economics; "Bird Protection from a Humane and Scientific Standpoint," Mrs. William Myers. The last number of the afternoon is called "Her Point of View." A prominent club woman will present the viewpoint of a woman clerk; another, that of a laundry worker, and another that of a household servant.

"Literature in the Far East" is the title of an address to be delivered Wednesday evening by Prof. L. A. Handley of Occidental College. A musical treat will be furnished that evening by Mrs. Katherine Kimball Forest and Mrs. Mary J. Shallert.

The Nominating Committee, composed of Mrs. F. E. Prior, Mrs. I. L. Hibbard, Mrs. E. C. Lockwood, Mrs. F. W. King, Mrs. J. T. Brady and Mrs. Alice Castello, will report Thursday morning, after which will come the election of officers. The next president of the district probably will be Mrs. Russell J. Waters, who has been acting president during the seven months' absence of Mrs. Florence Collins Porter.

After the election of officers, an address, "The Twentieth Century Use of Color," will be given by Mrs. Eleanor Bingham. Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, chairman of civics, will give a talk on "Civics," illustrated.

Thursday afternoon will be one of great enjoyment. It will be given over to art and artists. Mrs. W. H. Housh, chairman of art in the district, presiding. The programme includes: "Variations of an Old Theme," by Mrs. Harmon D. Ryus; "The Deeper Meaning of Art," Mrs. Leonard Lester; "The State Commission," Miss Elizabeth Robson; "Decorative Art as Applied to Pottery and Porcelain," Miss Leia Horlocher; "The Power of Beauty," from "The Window in Thrums," Miss Mary Phelps; "Beauty, Its Practical Relation to Life," Miss Katheryn L. Scobey; "Art Students' Life in Paris, with Timely Hints," Miss Blanche D. Cole.

The convention will close Thursday afternoon, after the report of the Resolutions Committee.

UNIQUE FEATURES.

The unique part of the coming convention will lie in the department exhibits, and the women have some clever surprises in store. The art exhibit, in charge of Mrs. Housh, will include pictures, poetry, crafts and keramics. A district scrap-book will be shown by the club extension department, in charge of Mrs. Waters. Education, in charge of Mrs. Root, will present contrasts, showing that the preservation of childhood is the bulwark of the nation.

The forestry exhibit will be arranged by Mrs. Orcutt. Household economics, under Miss Avery, will exhibit a collection of kitchen comforts. Mrs. Baurhyte, for the department of philanthropy, will give a glimpse of woman's humanity to woman. Mrs. Egelhoff-Rundel will show "Balanced Benefits" for the reciprocity department.

Monrovia's local board, which is doing splendid work in preparing for the visitors, is composed of Mrs. L. N. Wheeler, Mrs. George Barry, Mrs. W. H. Evans and Mrs. Spence. Parliamentarian for the convention is Mrs. J. A. Osgood.

Pepper in History.

Pepper has played a far more important role in the history of the world than most people would be willing to believe. We know that there were many bags of pepper in the great store of spices which the Queen of Sheba, direct ancestress of the present Emperor of Abyssinia, brought to King Solomon when she paid her memorable visit to Jerusalem. We know, also, that several hundredweights of pepper aided materially in the ransom of Rome from the hordes of the Goths. Alaric and his captains, in spite of their being barbarians, were gourmets who appreciated at its true value the most finely flavored of all spices. And it is a matter of record that, owing to the Dutch having raised the price of pepper from 3 shillings (75 cents) to 8 shillings ($2) a pound, the merchants of London held a meeting at Founders' Hall, with the Lord Mayor in the chair, on the 22d of September, 1599, and agreed then and there to found an association for trading directly with India. Such was the beginning of the old East India Company, which eventually developed into Great Britain's vast oriental empire, with its population of 300,000,000.

SEEDING GRAIN EMPIRE.

time, the entire field has been covered and new pastures are sought.

One man is required to run the engine, another to keep the seed boxes filled, leaping off occasionally at convenient stations where wheat in sacks is stacked to meet the demand.

THIRTY ACRES A DAY.

A steam plow covers thirty acres a day, plowing, seeding and cultivating. A seven-horse plow makes an average of seven acres a day, usually doing nothing but plow, the harrowing and seeding coming afterward. There are but six plowshares in the horses, as compared with twenty in the wake of each ponderous traction engine.

And so much for steam as compared with brute power in the propulsion of the plows. Yet even the great seven-horse plows are a wonderful improvement over the crude implements that were used by the early Mexican settlers more than a century ago, when the padres first came into the fruitful San Fernando Valley and there reared the beautiful mission and its surrounding buildings that now, alas, have fallen into decay and give but a vague idea of the splendor that once girt them 'round.

Even now more wonderful changes are in sight, for this great grain domain, circumscribed as compared with former years, is to pass away, and in its place is to spring up a land of amazing wealth, in which pretty little homes, each surrounded by fruit trees and small gardens of a few acres in extent, will dot the landscape for miles and miles, unto the very feet of the mountains that hem in the valley on three sides, the open side a gateway to Los Angeles and the sea.

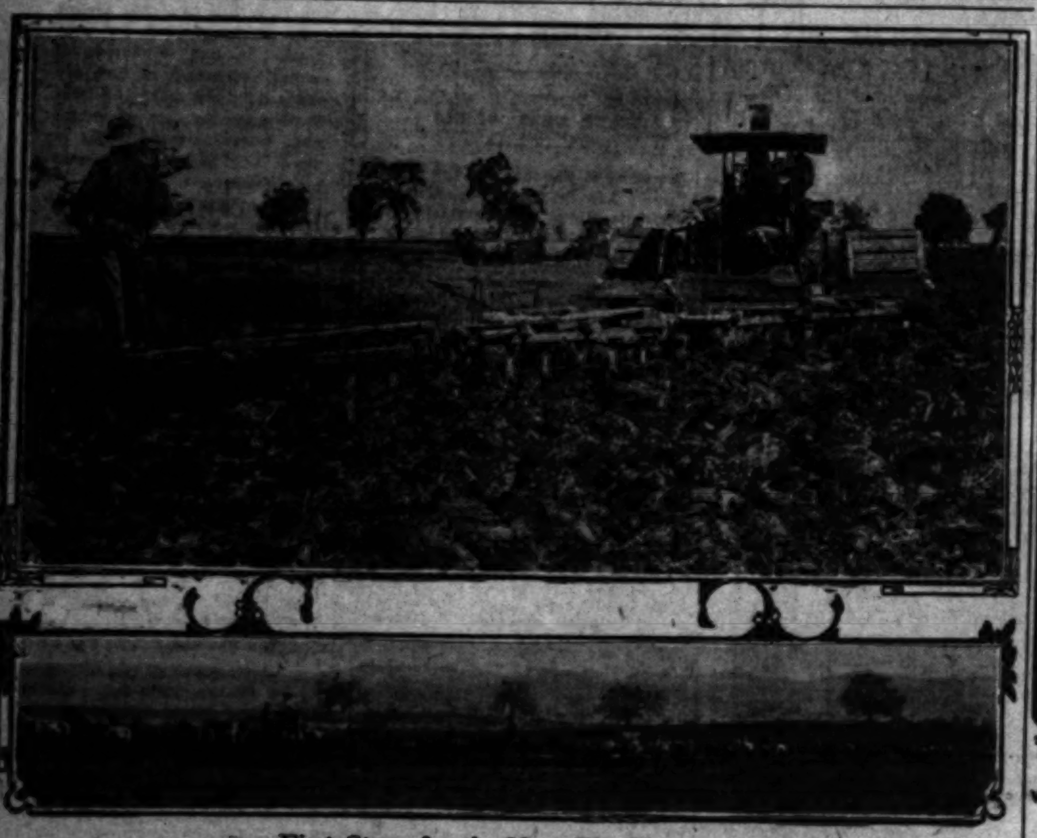
COMING OF THE WATER.

For, close to the valley, in a natural reservoir that offers no engineering difficulties, will be stored the waters of the Owens River on their way to Los Angeles, and from this great source of supply an abundance will be obtained at low cost for these thousands upon thousands of fallow acres that in years past have yielded, and even now are yielding, riches for those who touch them with the magic plowshare.

Then will Los Angeles have a "back country" so close to its doors that it will be practically but a step from a beautiful city home to a thriving country fruit ranch.

With the coming of the water and the change of the industry from grain raising to fruit production, the people of the San Fernando Valley look for the opening of a direct electric line to Los Angeles—a line that practically will gridiron the valley and put every small ranch in close touch with the city, with facilities for handling the large quantities of freight in and out, and for transporting passengers to and fro.

Already plans are discussed for this railway line, which, it is said, will take the shortest route into Los Angeles, possibly following the west side of the Los Angeles River for a considerable distance, then entering the San Fernando Valley and tapping its every part.



First Steps for the Next Big Harvest.

DAISY DAISY PARTY.

Dr. Day Was "Day," in a Daylight Charade of a Sweet Bunch of Daisy Belles.

The "Daisy Party," given in the social rooms of the First Congregational Church, by the members of the J. O.C. class of the Sunday-school, in honor of their pastor, Rev. William Horace Day, was unique and successful.

The invitations were on cards, cut in the form of a daisy and painted like the flower; the hall was decorated in daisies and ferns and the class colors, jet, olive and crimson; the name cards were in the form of daisy petals, tied with the class colors.

After a daisy guessing contest, the guests took part in nine stunts, as follow: Song, "Sweet Bunch of Daisies;" reading, "A Daisy;" music by the Daisy Comb Orchestra; poem, "A Day," to which the chorus was sung, each taking her own tune; a whistling chorus; a "Daisy Daisy Poem;" song, "Daisy (Bells," and charade, "Daylight."

In this charade, Dr. Day took the part of "Day," and in the midst of all the fun was greatly surprised when the "Light" came. It was in the form of a gold "J.O.C." pin, the pastor being an honorary member of the class, and in his response he expressed greatest appreciation of the energetic young women, about seventy of whom were present.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES MEETING

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities will be held on Tuesday at 3 p.m. in room 3, Courthouse. All members are earnestly requested to attend.

REPORT DENIED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Special dispatches sent out of this city to eastern papers stated that gold coin is quoted at 10 per cent premium.

Information from reliable sources show that these reports are entirely unfounded.

Wealthy Widow from Colorado, Who Confessed Her Love for Negro, Has Disappeared.

Mrs. Jenevieve Van Lakum, a wealthy widow of Manitou, Colo., who was taken in custody by police officers Tuesday evening and later released after she had promised to give up her alleged negro sweetheart, has disappeared and Humane Officer Reynolds, who had the case in hand, is scouring the city for the children who were placed under his supervision. Yesterday Reynolds stated that the woman and the children had gotten entirely away from him.

Patrolman Jones investigated the case Tuesday night. He took Mrs. Van Lakum and her four children and a negro waiter named William Seay to the Police Station.

There Seay told Lieut. Dixon that he had accompanied Mrs. Van Lakum to Los Angeles and that marriage had been hinted of. Mrs. Van Lakum is said to be madly infatuated with the negro. To Lieut. Dixon, she said that she loved the negro and saw nothing wrong in it. Seay denied that he was in love with the white woman and stated that he kept up his relations with her for the money there was in it. He claimed to have already received $500 from the infatuated woman.

"This woman has disappeared," said Officer Reynolds, yesterday. "Upon Seay's promise to keep away from her I did not think it necessary to take the children away from her and so I allowed her to take them and go in search of a cottage. I believe that she has found a cottage somewhere in the suburbs and is living quietly. Whether the negro visits her or not, I have no positive knowledge, but I am inclined to believe that he does.

"Information from the East states that Mrs. Van Lakum is the member of a prominent family in Chicago. I think that she is irresponsible. I believe she is mentally deranged. Whether this negro has some uncanny influence over her or not I cannot say, but we will endeavor to get custody of the four little children and keep them out of harm's way."

SEARCH FOR MISSING MAN.

Reward Offered for Information Concerning George W. Nash and Circulars Sent Broadcast.

Although Under Sheriff Hartwell and the deputies connected with the Sheriff's office still scout the murder theory of the disappearance of George W. Nash, they were busy yesterday morning, mailing circulars to hundreds of persons in the Calabasas region and in Sawtelle, offering $455 reward for the discovery of the body and information which will lead to the conviction of the murderer.

This is being done in pursuance of the wishes of friends of the missing man, who, believing him to have been the victim of foul play, raised the fund which is offered as a reward. The statement is made in the circular that it is the neighbors of Nash who are offering the reward, but information is to be addressed to the Sheriff.

A picture and description of the missing rancher are presented, and the circumstances of his disappearance, September 19, are reviewed.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks, who returned to his office yesterday, stated that he does not accept the view of the under Sheriff that Nash is still alive. Only a beginning has been made in the search, he said, for the region to be covered is so large.

The District Attorney announced that tangible objects which may serve as clews were discovered in the course of the search in and about Calabasas, and have been brought to Los Angeles. The search may be prosecuted further near the scene of the supposed crime.

Traditions of high ridge that some of the escaped this awful con- and lived on after the close of the Pliocene period to dispute with prehistoric man the title to the west coast.

The elephas columbi is closely related to the mammoth, but it was a larger and more powerful beast. It is estimated that the average elephant of this species was about fourteen feet high and fifteen feet long. The mammoth was a native of Alaska, and never came as far south as Southern California. Several years ago a portion of the carcass of a mammoth was found imbedded in the ice on the banks of the Yukon River. From this carcass the natives dug fat to grease their boats. A small piece of this fat was secured by a scientist and sent to the Smithsonian Institution.

In Siberia, two carcasses of the mammoth have been found in sufficient state of preservation to enable scientists to discover the kind of coat this monster wore.

MAMMOTH AND ELEPHANT.

The term mammoth suggests something very large, and popular report has made the mammoth the largest of all elephants. But the name does not refer to the size. It is derived from the Tartar word "mammata," referring to the earth. The ancients believed the remains to be those of huge moles who lived always beneath the surface of the earth, and died when exposed to the light. This belief was occasioned by the fact that the skeletons were always found imbedded in the earth.

Despite the wild stories of mammoths more than twenty feet in height the largest specimens unearthed are no larger than the African elephants of the present age.

The elephas columbi roamed the country south of the polar regions. He was larger than his northern relative, and wore a coat of lighter weight. He may have come over to Alaska from Siberia, but it is equally probable that he went to Siberia from Alaska.

The mastodon was a creature of the North, like the mammoth. In the Eastern States his skeleton has been found as far south as Southern New York. Some of the specimens unearthed indicate that he reached the extreme height of sixteen feet.

OF PRIME IMPORTANCE.

Of prime importance to the scientist is the discovery of the remains of the mastodon here, as the Smithsonian geologists report that it may prove to be a new species.

Four years ago graders leveling the ground for the site of the Southern Pacific shops unearthed the bones of some huge animal. Holding to the tradition that Los Angeles was a part of the bed of the ocean during the Pliocene period, local scientists pronounced these to be portions of some huge saurian. It is now regarded as probable that the fossil were that of the elephant.

Similar discoveries were made in excavating for a sewer on Pico Heights. It has remained for the Smithsonian Institution to classify these fossils as a portion of the mammoth or mastodon.

OWENS RIVER'S OLD BED?

The discovery of these fossil remains lends color to the tradition that the waters of the Owens River once flowed through the San Fernando Valley to the sea, and that they were cut off by the earth convulsions that gave birth to the coast mountains. The fossil are in a state of preservation which indicates that water has been percolating through the gravel beds beneath the Inglewood highlands for almost countless ages. They controvert the theory that this part of the coast rose from the sea at the end of the Pliocene period.

GREAT VESTED CHOIR OF BOYS.

WILL SING AT ST. PAUL'S AND DEPUTIES WILL TALK.

Story of Two Greatest Episcopal Conventions to Be Told by the Men Who Took Part in Them—St. Paul's Parish to Greet Dean and Mrs. Wilkins.

A mass-meeting of men will be held in St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which there will be a number of strong speakers to tell of the greatest conventions in the history of the Episcopal Church. The deputies have returned from Richmond and Washington, filled with enthusiasm.

That the music may be as notable as other portions of the service, all the boy choirs of the city and suburban churches will unite under the direction of Ernest Douglas, choir master of St. Paul's, and the processions preceding the opening of the services will be a spectacle worth seeing and the music a treat to hear. It will form on the north side of the Pro-Cathedral and enter by the main north door, proceeding down the main aisle to the chancel.

Bishop Johnson, who was present at the great convention in Richmond, and also the convention of St. Andrew's Brotherhood in Washington, will be out of the city today.

The programme will include special music numbers by the united choir, after each address, as well as at the opening and closing. The collects will be read by Dr. Bowers, and the following addresses will be delivered by men who were present at the two conventions. Opening addresses by Dr. J. J. Wilkins, dean of Pro-Cathedral; "The International Convention of the Brotherhood," Rev. William MacCormack of Pasadena; "General Convention as Viewed by a Lay Deputy," W. C. Mushet; "General Convention and Men's Work," Rev. Baker P. Lee, rector of Christ Church; "General Convention and its Doings," J. Bakewell Phillips; closing address, Dean Wilkins.

It is desired to make this a large and representative gathering, not alone of Episcopalians but of men in general, who may hear something of the great forward steps recently taken by the most conservative denominations, of the great work it is doing among men, and how it is reaching out for the salvation of the world.

RECEPTION TO DEAN.

On Monday evening a reception will be tendered Dean Wilkins and Mrs. Wilkins, in St. Paul's Parish Hall, between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock. Assisting them in receiving will be the following vestrymen and their wives, and others connected with St. Paul's parish: Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. John Wigmore, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tupper, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Talmage, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Stilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Richards, J. G. Chandler, Gregory Perkins, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Douglas, Rev. W. H. Dyer, Rev. L. M. Idleman. A general invitation is extended to all the friends and acquaintances of Dean Wilkins and his wife, to take this opportunity of greeting them.

THIS PONY A DANCER.

"Dr. White," Who Belongs With the Circus, Waltzes and Does Other Steps and Tricks.

"Waltz me around again, Willie, around and 'round and 'round," almost sings "Dr. White," a pretty little pure white Shetland pony that is coming to Los Angeles today to spend a few days. He does a good many wonderful things, wonderful for a horse, anyway, but he is most skillful with his feet and legs. For instance, he waltzes on his hind feet, walks on his fore feet alone, walks on two feet, same side of his body, a feat that no human ever has been known to accomplish. He even walks on his right fore foot and his left hind foot.

White dancing pony.

Dr. White also answers questions by pawing with his feet, which is something that few real doctors do. He distinguishes colors and does problems in arithmetic, such as multiplying and subtracting, and there are other tricks that he performs for the amusement of circus attendants, who will see him at the Norris and Rowe show, which opens here tomorrow afternoon at Prager Park for a three-day engagement.

There are other trained animals in the circus, and at least 100 performers are booked to appear. There are twenty-four clowns and many other amusing and thrilling entertainers on the two trains that it takes to carry the circus. There is to be no street parade during this engagement.

EIGHT NEWSPAPER PARTS AND SUNDAY MAGAZINE

Pen Points

The money stringency will last but a few days longer. A circus is coming to town.

Chicago newspapers have fallen into the habit of quoting Latin. It is doubtless hog Latin.

If it is debt that prevents Japan from going to war she is destined to enjoy a long period of peace.

Up to a late hour last night no unofficial man had been found to refuse scrip if he could get it.

The young man who thinks of a clerkship in a bank as a snap ought to try his hand at it now.

What difference does it make whether we have scrip or hard money as long as times are good?

The prospects of panic must have given Mr. Bryan one of the greatest thrills of his entire career.

After we have had the fleet awhile and it is sent back to the Atlantic, will Europe consider it a threat?

Oklahoma will be compelled to wait till next Fourth of July to pin her star on the flag. We'll all help her.

There are also a lot of men who are not allowed to draw money from the bank because they haven't any there.

No matter how many men there are looking for the right jobs, there is always a job looking for the right man.

It will rather astonish most of us to learn from recent statistics that only 20 per cent. of the human race is insane.

Taft is straightening out our troubles in the Orient; but think of Cortelyou, who is trying to straighten out Wall street!

Maybe Congress will say to Seattle that it will not loan any more money on world's fairs until Jamestown pays up.

It may be said in favor of "Uncle Joe" Cannon that he is both old enough and young enough to be President of the United States.

We may say with a certain degree of confidence that this will be about the last time the East will be able to use the West as a catspaw.

If this financial flurry has really resulted in shutting off Tom Lawson's talk then it cannot be regarded altogether in the light of a calamity.

The Southern States having largely adopted prohibition, it now remains to be seen whether or not they will continue to vote the Democratic ticket.

The tightness of money and the slump in stocks incidentally make it bad for chorus girls. Pittsburgh millionaires have other things to think of.

It is reported that the Count whom Gladys Vanderbilt is to marry is a tight wad. We have always had our suspicions that he is not a true nobleman.

Perhaps it would be just as well for Secretary Taft to come home as soon as possible. The other booms are beginning to show some signs of life again.

A whole town in Arizona has been removed in order to make room for an irrigation dam. This is a better policy than destroying farms to make room for towns.

A Washington man has written a book called "Rules for kissing." We have no doubt that one of the very first is to be careful not to let your wife catch you at it.

A young man in Texas was discovered carrying around a hat band on which was the inscription: "On my road to hell." He also had a railway ticket for Chicago.

We are informed that there were about 75,000 automobiles manufactured in the United States last year. But how did it happen that most of them were sent to Los Angeles?

In Germany the speeches of lawyers in court trials are limited to ten minutes. The Germans are a thoughtful people and have figured out the necessity of the economy of life.

After looking over 375 American newspapers we have come to the conclusion that there are just that many ways by which this financial trouble could be settled if left to the editors.

An eastern financial journal says that Pierpont Morgan's tombstone should bear the inscription, "He Saved Wall Street." Has he performed no good deed that could be referred to?

Dr. Schurman wants the University course extended to five years. The trouble with the idea is that it gets a man out of school rather too old to learn something that he can make a living at.

Referring to the remark of John W. Gates that it is easy to make a million dollars, we admit that it is—for the United States government, which makes that much every day at the mints and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

THE STRANGE TIME COMING.

When a mere boy, not yet out of knickerbockers, can stand up in a Los Angeles public school and demonstrate a mastery over the unseen electrical currents of the air, it is no wild dream to suppose that the world is on the eve of strange times. So portentous is the future that the man who would not desire to live another fifty years must be very tired of life indeed.

The mystical, inexplicable agency called electricity is what will work the wonders of the times to be. What has already been done with it is not a circumstance compared to the uses to which it is soon to be put. And yet how wonderful are its uses now! The incandescent light, the telephone and miracles of that sort we have long been familiar with, and yet it is within the lifetimes of men not yet grown old that they have been made practicable. But telephones and electric lights are the merest child's toys when considered with what is now within grasp.

Imagine a message being sent from America to Europe and an answer received in five minutes! That's what happened a few days ago for the first time. In another year, or possibly two at the most, boats will be propelled through the waters unaided by either sails or engines. Balloons will navigate the air under the complete control of man. Unseen, wireless electrical currents will do it all. This means the journeys across the world will be made in hours instead of in days and weeks. It means that people on pleasure excursions will cross the equator and pass the north pole as experiences so commonplace as to be scarcely worth talking about.

The man and woman who has a healthy interest in life will dislike to think that anything might happen to prevent them beholding these boats and balloons in full working order, not to speak of the infinitely more wonderful achievements that are to follow. Among our regrets in going down to "dusty death" will be the one about missing the best part of the show reserved for the other fellows who can stay a little longer.

Still, let us not regret it. Who knows but we may come back and be a part of it all again? Who knows but the same mysterious currents that send the sailless and engineless ships across the seas and scud the aeroplanes against the clouds, will stir our forgotten ashes to life anew, like the poppy that lifts up its head from forgotten springs to the blue California skies? But, if this is not to be, let us hope that it will be our lot to live again in another world where we shall at least have no regrets.

THE WEST COMING INTO ITS OWN.

Senator Heyburn has put the West under great obligations to him, and more than this, he has rendered a valuable service to the whole United States. The financial flurry is a direct product of New York's way of doing business. The manipulation of the speculative stock market has brought the country to the very verge of just such a flurry nearly a dozen times in the last two years and a half. The wild debauch of gambling at one time during this period ran the price of money on call to 125 per cent. It went up to 100 per cent. several times. It was only by the intervention of the United States Treasury that the difficulties now rife did not culminate on these previous occasions. Every time that the great gamble set our financial structure tottering, the Treasury came to the relief of the gamblers not for their own sake, but for the sake of the real industries of the country, and postponed the trouble. In each instance the relief resulted simply in a renewal of the game.

When the flurry came three weeks ago New York owed the West enormous sums. There is scarcely a center of population and business west of Chicago that is not obliged to keep considerable money in New York banks at all times against drafts drawn by them upon that center. It was the inability of the New York banks to pay the balance due to western banks which got us into all our trouble. It was shown in these columns six or eight months ago that the financial condition of New York was utterly unsound and a menace to the business interests of the whole country. This fact was established by showing that if western banks called their deposits in New York banks these last-named could not meet the call, leaving the individual depositors to whistle for their millions on deposit with the New York institutions.

The other day, when the trouble became so very acute, the United States Treasury again came into the breach, and had it not done so the flurry would have become a panic. In spite of the large deposits of public funds placed with the New York banks they were still refusing to let go of a dollar to relieve the situation in the West, when Senator Heyburn called the attention of the national administration to this condition with so much sense and emphasis that the Secretary of the Treasury saw the justice of the Senator's plea. The New York bankers, to whom are attributed our present troubles, have been warned that they must relax their hold on some part of this cash and send it westward to help out in other parts of the country.

New York is a small part of America, financially and industrially, when you come down to the real point. It is the interests of the West, the solid business interests of the country, the moving of crops, which will bring back gold enough from Europe to relieve all our necessities. The keeping of our multitudinous industries in motion (insuring an opportunity of earning a livelihood to the vast working army of the country) is of infinite importance compared with the small matter of bolstering up the gamblers whose headlong speculation brought on the trouble.

If the New York banks which have obtained so much aid from the national Treasury will give up even a moiety of the money due the western banks the whole West will be delivered from its embarrassment and our financial and industrial affairs will run with normal smoothness.

SOUL DIET.

"Is not the life more than meat?"

In the mad struggle for the material, in these days, it would seem that the whole of life is in the getting and spending. In the morning we dare not lift our eyes to the glory of the sky, lest we miss the reading of a market report; throughout the day there is not a moment in which to "invite the soul;" and at night the sacred joys of the home-coming find dull welcome in a mind already filled with thoughts of business. "We lay waste our powers," said Wordsworth, the powers which make for growth; the "eternal verities" have no part in us. The great sweep of the horizon has dwindled to the size of the dollar's rim, and the lift of our eyes hardly clears the height of the milled edge of the coin.

The soul cannot live on such diet.

THE FINANCIAL COLOSSUS.

The greatest figure in finances among the nations is the United States. We have bought more foreign goods during the past twelve months than in any other period in history and we have paid for them every dollar they cost. Our wealthy people have gone abroad to the number of about 100,000 and they have squandered in all the capitals and many of the out-of-the-way places in Europe about half a billion dollars, perhaps more. The foreign holders of our railroad and industrial securities, all earning the largest dividends on earth, got panic-stricken and threw the bonds and shares promiscuously into the market, sacrificing them for less than they were worth. We picked them up and took them for our own, and as we have paid for the enormous imports we have bought and as we have paid for these tourist expenses in the Old World, so we have paid for these returned securities. We are about 50 cents on the dollar gainers, as we sold them for high prices and bought them for low prices. Europe is still in our debt, and is trying like a bad debtor to hold back the money which is ours.

The Bank of England has raised her discount rate to 7 per cent., the highest point in a generation; the Bank of France has raised hers to 4½ per cent., as high as if not higher than ever known in Paris before; and the other national banks of Europe will have to pursue the same course in a vain attempt to keep us from obtaining payment of debts justly due us. In spite of these efforts to keep the money from coming westward across the Atlantic, the financiers declare that we shall get what is coming to us. Americans generally get what is coming to them, or know the reason why.

How did we put all Europe so deeply in our debt? By having the greatest granary and pantry of the world for the production of food stuffs which the redundant population of Europe must have; by our cotton crop, which is essential to Europe to keep their industries going and to clothe their people; by the fabulous riches of our mines, which are pouring out hundreds of tons of copper and millions of barrels of oil, which are both needed and must be had in the Old World. This is an old story, only new at the present time in that our crops are the most valuable we have produced and that the necessities of Europe are greater than almost ever known before.

With these vast crops of food stuffs and raw cotton and others going at unusually high prices, and with the active demand for the treasures dug from our mines, the yellow streams of gold must continue to flow westward across the Atlantic to liquidate the indebtedness of European buyers. Last year we pulled away from Europe a great deal more than $100,000,000 in gold coin and within the last two weeks we have drawn from London nearly half as much. We are digging this year out of our own gold mines another hundred millions of dollars. We can afford to buy goods abroad. We can afford to travel abroad and pay for the best of everything to our hearts content. We can buy back any American securities that any faint-hearted European has in his strong box, and more than pay for it all in the food and raw material which our wonderfully rich country pours out in such unstinted volumes and which Europe must have or go idle and starve.

What is the good of talking about bankruptcy, embarrassment or financial difficulties in a country of such vast wealth as ours? It is simply a panic and nothing more, which will pass away when the people come to realize how foolish they have been. The European investors will also recover their mental balance, come to us for solid, interest-bearing securities, and we will be as kind and generous as they could wish and let them have back the bonds and shares they sold to us when they are ready to pay us 25 to 50 per cent. more than we gave them in the days of their panicky feeling. Then their debts will be all the heavier and they must keep on sending us still more gold. "Uncle Sam" is the modern Colossus of finance.

HAIL TO THE BLUEJACKETS!

The four big cruisers which have been lying in beautiful Santa Barbara's channel for days past will be at Long Beach today. The officers of the fleet and the gallant boys who man ships and guns will be the guests of Los Angeles for some time. No doubt these "boys in blue" will find a hearty welcome wherever they go. There will be no Jamestown snobbery here. An officer's uniform, instead of barring him from entrance, will be his best passport. By all means, let us see these followers of John Paul Jones, of Lawrence, Decatur, Dupont, Dewey and Schley in their official robes. It will make each patriotic heart beat high to see these men on whose skill and bravery so much would depend if any foreign foe should attempt to invade our shores. What maiden's heart will not go pitty-pat as she gazes on the bronzed faces of our handsome sailor lads? The spare spinsters who never felt the joys of motherhood may assemble and "orate" at no rate and all rates about war and its horrors. Hood asks: "What maiden's heart that loves not gold? What cat's averse to fish?" That is all very well, but a sailor's uniform and his sea-beaten face will carry off the prize nine times out of ten against bank accounts, when the prize is a girl's heart. Nor did any woman ever knowingly link her earthly fortunes with those of a coward.

The officers of the fleet are gentlemen. The sailors will behave with due propriety. We must remember that they are accustomed to close confinement on shipboard, and that a "shore leave" means a frolic. Let the boys have their fling in all that is not wrong, and let us help them to have "a good time."

Three cheers and a "tiger" for the officers of the "big four," for the men who splice the main brace and for the "men behind the guns!"

BESIDE THE WESTERN SEA.

[From "California: Where Sets the Sun."]

Oh, I wait to see the glory of this land that fronts the West,
Land as yet unsung in story of earth's greatest and its best,
But its future swims in brightness, and the golden Yet-to-be,
Shining with Fame's spotless whiteness, lies beside this Western Sea.

Poets here and grand immortals in the realm of art and song,
Patriots shall tread its portals, and the sons of science throng
Here, where Summer ever lingers; here, where lofty mountains rise,
Thrusting upward granite fingers to the deeps of cloudless skies.

Wide we set our sea-gates open to the old and waiting East,
Commerce, all her barriers broken, brings to us of wealth a feast,
And the glory of this Nation in its rich futurity
Shall shine proudest in its luster here beside this Western Sea.

WINTER FLOWER SHOW.

Did you see the flower show in Los Angeles these late days? What an exhibition it was! One-third of November is gone. We are getting ready for Thanksgiving Day dinner. Recall what Nature looks like "back at the old home" in New England, the Middle States or the Middle or Northern West. There remains hardly a leaf on the trees. If there are a few still clinging to the branches, they are as brown as nuts. Flowers? There is not one so hardy as to have outlived the early frosts. Not only meadows are bare and all fields sere, but the gardens are a grave, where Nature sleeps as if for ever.

But these blossoms at the Los Angeles flower show come almost all from the open gardens, and no July or August that ever shone upon any spot on the earth produces more luxuriance of bloom. Not only "half-hardy" roses were there, but the most sensitive flowers known were in profusion. In all the country not the least breath of chilliness has fallen to blight in the least degree the heliotrope.

How the new arrivals from "back East" must have feasted their eyes on these evidences of the marvelous climate! Those who remain with us all winter will find little change from present conditions at any date between now and April. On New Year's Day, Pasadena will bloom forth a perfect mass of blossoms as rich as these in our November flower show. All the brightest colors of the rainbow will make glad the landscape here every day in what we call "winter," scarcely distinguishable from the culmination of the summer.

Even the most savage tribes of Indians have never been known to harm a man whom they supposed to be crazy. Especially do they treat with gentleness the man who comes among them chasing bugs. Moral: When you visit the savage, carry a bug catcher instead of a gun.

Rumors in political circles are to the effect that Walter Parker is looking for a new set of nincompoops to send to the State Legislature next year. He ought to have no trouble. There are plenty of them around dead crazy for the job.

The managers of the Jamestown Exposition are considering the advisability of continuing the show next year in order to pull it out of debt. They might as well think to make money out of a last year's bird's nest.

BRYAN'S BAD BREAK.

The world learned ten years ago that Mr. Bryan was a poorly educated scholar in finances, coinage, tariffs, industries or anything connected with political economy remotely or nearly. But the world did give him credit for a little bit of political shrewdness. Now the only leader of the Democratic hosts seems determined to throw this scrap of his reputation to the winds.

But, perhaps, after all, it is not lack of shrewdness, but hunger for sympathy that is responsible for Bryan's anxiety to make a political bed-fellow of that putrid political cadaver, William Randolph Hearst, of New York City, and various other places.

There is to be a love feast somewhere, no matter where, on a near day, no matter just what one, when all the various rankling and hostile elements of bewildered Democracy will gather in an attempt to smoke the peace-pipe and bury all the tomahawks (blood-stained with the internecine strifes of the last twenty years) which have sacrificed the party. The Banquo's ghost at this meeting of the unterrified sachems of the Iroquois and braves of Tammany is to be the "Yellow Kid," discredited Willie.

There is the puzzle. Is it a lack of political perspicacity, or the fact that misery loves company, to which we are to ascribe the presence of this skull in politics at the feast? Doesn't Bryan learn from experience? If the utter disdain with which even the Democratic party spurned Hearst's offer of himself as a candidate for the Presidency in 1904, if the repudiation which Hearst's candidacy for Mayor of New York received, even at the hands of the Democracy of that city, and if Hearst's utter and signal repudiation by the Democracy of the whole State of New York a year ago, when he was the only defeated candidate on his ticket, if all combined have failed to enlighten Mr. Bryan as to the political demise of Mr. Hearst, surely the fate that befell that most unholy alliance between Hearst and Herbert Parsons, only as late as the past week, should be sufficient to rub into the brain of the dullest politician the fact that Willie is a hoodoo, with whose fortunes no sane nor decent man will care to tie up his own.

HOROSCOPE FOR THIS DAY.

Sunday, November 10, 1907.

This day you will find friends full well inclined.
Seek them and happy hours you will find.

Sun and Saturn are in benefic aspect with the moon. The 314th day of the year; moon's age, five days.

A generous influence pervades this day. Meetings of friends will be good, because every one should be at his best spiritually in these twenty-four hours. Give way gladly to the emotions of friendship, human sympathy and love.

"A swift shock that flieth unseen" is a portent for the United States this day. The omen must be read to mean that danger threatens from electric shock. Beware, therefore, of naked wires or rails.

Those whose birthdate this is will have a fortunate year. Men will do well in business, or if in employment they may expect to be promoted. Women will have much pleasure in family and social circles.

The girl born today will marry a very determined and obstinate man. She will be happy with him, however, despite all. She should cultivate her talent for literature.

The boy born today will need a strong rein. He will be impetuous and headstrong, good qualities if they are tempered in youth. In employment he will be fortunate and will be promoted rapidly.

Power of Siamese Queen.

Next to King Chulalongkorn, the most powerful personality in Siam is undoubtedly the Queen, a capable and energetic woman, and altogether a remarkable personage. The position of women in Siam contrasts favorably with that among other Oriental peoples. The ordinary woman possesses such a robust physique and erect bearing that a stranger early mistakes her for a man, especially as her hair is short cropped and the dress of both sexes very similar. In the general business of life the average Siamese woman is often superior to the man; she understands thoroughly economic as well as domestic household affairs, and enjoys a considerable share of freedom. Polygamy is fast dying out in the lower classes, and gradually decreasing among the rich. What is peculiarly hopeful is the attitude of both government and society toward female education.—[Dundee Advertiser.

him for a ride of fifteen miles, it is time for him to retire with the laurels he has won, and make room for men fit for active service. A colonel who declines to get into the saddle has as much business in the field as a naval captain afraid of being seasick has on the deck of a battleship. But these old-men-afraid-of-their-horses might be very useful in the offices of the War Department.

Cheap Demagogy.

"Don't cheat the waiter," says Hearst, with tears in his eyes and a quiver over the hard lot of the poor fellow whose graft exceeds daily the income of half the people whom he serves. He must have taken a census of the hold-up bandits and found them numerous enough to be a considerable political factor, for he tells them, in typographic shrieks, that they are fine fellows and plentifully endowed with brains. He speaks of their tips as "wages," and avers that it is the duty of restaurant patrons to pay those wages. "Economize where you will," says Hearst, "but don't cut down the waiter's tip. With you alone rests whether he shall be paid or not."

The waiter should be paid for his labor, but the man who hires him is the one who should pay him. Patrons pay for his services in their bills, and under the swindling tip system the fellow's employer pouches his wages and forces patrons to pay him again.

The real bandits and hold-ups are the restaurant owners and the Pullman Company, but Hearst does not urge them to be honest and decent, to quit robbing the public and pay their own debts. Like the crude, cheap demagogue he always has been, the Yellow Freak plays to the gallery and distorts the ethics of the question to pose as the friend of the downtrodden. He is a nauseous fraud.

THE LIFE OF THE ARROYO.

Don't you love to wander idly through arroyos deep and still,
Near a little brook, as free as you to have its own sweet will—
Not hurrying at all—only dallying along,
With the eyes for every beauty and the heart for every song?

On a wide, sweet day of autumn, full of lovely, half-told things,
I am walking through the willows,
where a fairy brooklet sings,
Where the mosses lie at ease on the shadowed root and stone,
And there's such a friendly feeling—nothing seems to live alone.

It is just the time when poplars turn to yellow in the leaf,
And the gold comes sifting down like a broken summer sheaf.
The odors of the earth breathe about me, warm and kind,
Like the spirits of the place waiting
there to be divined.

With a happy sense of freedom, on I wander by the stream
Lost in mazes of the willows—how their trailing tresses gleam
On the fluent water purling o'er the flicker of the sand—
How I love to part the branches with exploring gypsy hand!

From a bush about whose stem lies the hue of violet
Springs a bold, melodious rapture that my heart will ne'er forget—
'Tis the life of the arroyo—'tis the lark goes winging by,
Buoyant veering through the spaces of the trees to gain the sky.

Now the great sun vistas fold him,
now the infinite of blue—
Bearing upward in his flight the arroyo's fragrant dew,
Something of the willows' dreaming, something of the poplars' gold,
And the loveliness of shadows—ever more to be half-told.

PEOPLE AND PLACES.

YANKEE MINDS WILL DOMINATE.

OPTIMISTIC EXPRESSIONS BY AN EGYPTIAN NOBLEMAN.

Interesting Criticisms and Comparisons Made by a World Traveler. He Sees in America the Birthplace of New Religions and Development of Art.

Prince d'Abro Pasratide, a democratic and jovial young nobleman of Egypt, who has traveled the world over and is now forming his opinion of America at first hand, has just departed from Boston, where he remained for some time visiting Harvard and delving deep into the historic lore of the city. The prince came to this country some time ago, bearing excellent letters of introduction, among them letters to Henry Clews, the well-known banker of Newport and New York.

"I am going to New York now," the prince said at his hotel. "I shall stay there for a little while and then go South to study the American cotton industry and plantation management. Then I shall sail for home, I think."

Prince d'Abro Pasratide is a descendant of a dynasty that long ruled in Asia Minor, and his family is prominent in Egypt, where it is identified with the cotton industry on the Nile.

The prince, who is dapper and gracious, but a keen observer and a man of wide personal knowledge, has noted many things about America and its people which have surprised him. He was interested to find that Americans differed in their mentality from the peoples of Europe, whence most of them sprang. "I have come to the conclusion," he said, "that the mentality of this people is as different from that of the European as the European is different from that of the Asiatic. I am of the opinion that one of the most important factors in this modification is to be found in the physical geography of the country. Everything here in nature is on such a gigantic scale, compared to that of Europe—the length and breadth of the great rivers, the extent of the plains, the immensity of the mountains, the infinitude of distance—all these things combine to modify the mentality of the race.

"This may seem strange; but it is a known fact and established, that inhabitants of mountainous regions differ in mind from those of the plains, and that mountain tribes who have come down from their hills and settled on the plains lose their primitive warlike qualities and become an easy prey to the next invaders.

"In Egypt we have this illustrated for the past 4000 years. Whatever race has settled therein has little by little lost its primitive qualities, both mental and physical. Even the cattle are affected. When European cattle are imported into Egypt we find that at the end of a few generations they have lost their old characteristics and become like those ancient Egyptian cattle carved on the tombs.

"Therefore, I say that in all the history of the world the physical conditions of a country have had a primary influence on the mentality of the race.

"This idea has struck me very much in America, where I have met people drawn from all parts of Europe, who seem to have lost the characteristics of their native countries. And it seems to me that this action of the land itself here has not only rendered rapid assimilation possible, but has stirred up and developed in the people latent qualities that will manifest themselves mightily, say, a century hence.

"When the existence of a so-called leisure class has become an accepted fact, when the energy now directed to development of natural resources becomes free to seek out other objects, when money-making becomes a far more difficult task than it is today, then, I believe the richer class will turn to politics and the liberal professions and these will become so overcrowded as to foster discontent and socialism and the country will suffer from the evils of overeducation.

"Then will many men, tired of the struggle in profession and business and content with what they have already, turn to other things—painting and music. When that times comes I have not the slightest doubt that this country will produce some of the greatest artists and musicians the world has ever seen.

"Americans seem to be a blending of oriental and European mentality. They are more than European in their energy and strongly oriental in their sensitiveness, and in many minor qualities which I have noticed even in the lower classes.

"All the great religions have come from Asia thus far; Europe has created none; but America will; for although no particular religion has been born here yet, the necessary spirit and the material for it visibly exists.

"Europe moves by units, and individuals; Asia by masses. It remains to see how America will move. Europe is egotistic, America is less so, but Asia has less egotism than either.

"As for the Americans of today, I have found them most hospitable and sincere, and ever ready to take a man at his own worth—a great contrast with Europe, where one must have gray hairs to succeed in any enterprise.

"Of course, coming from Europe, one is struck by what appears at first as rudeness. However, one soon learns that this is wholly unintentional, and that 'crudeness' is the term appropriate.

"American women, independently of their great beauty, have a peculiar charm. Some of the ladies I have met here rank with the brightest and cleverest I have ever known. They know how to do for themselves, and they are the reverse of 'helpless.'"

[The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents without holding itself responsible for writers' opinions. Be brief, write plainly, state clearly. Your Old Clothes.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] At this time of enforced housecleaning, doubtless many housewives will consign to the flames many useful articles of wearing apparel, etc.

In view of the increased cost of living, many families will be unable to buy clothing. If all those having cast-off shoes and clothing, also reading matter, would telephone to the Associated Charities, Bethlehem Institutional Church, or Salvation Army headquarters, they would send wagons for them. M. A. ROSS.

The Railroads and the People.

Those who have so glibly discussed measures to reduce the revenue and revise the practice of the railroads will find that truth lies at the bottom of the well by reading the article entitled "The Farmer, the Manufacturer and the Railroad," in the November number of the North American Review. Upon premises obtained from the publications and from the officers of the United States government, Mr. Logan G. McPherson demonstrates that the railroads pay a higher average salary than either the farm or the factory, and that they obtain a greater pecuniary return for each dollar of expenditure than either the farm or the factory, but that notwithstanding this the net return to the railroads for each dollar of capital is less than one-half of the net return to the farmers and less than one-third of the net return to the manufacturers.

The farmers during the last ten years have waxed and prospered; the owners of the mills and mines have piled up manifold profits, and the nation has rejoiced exceedingly thereat. The railroads, no less an important factor in the industry and the commerce of the country, have had to struggle to keep abreast of the mounting traffic, in the face of public obloquy engendered and fomented by politicians. There are indications that the people in whom Abraham Lincoln placed his trust are opening their eyes to the performance of the railroads and their needs. That part of the people which can be fooled only part of the time will find enlightenment in Mr. McPherson's article. That part of the people which can be fooled all the time could do worse than to read it. They will not find it brimming with humor nor replete with platitudinous reference to any great moral issue, but a clear and cold presentation of facts as they are. Mr. McPherson has performed a public service in making it.—[New York Sun.

That wall is known to be more than 200 years old, but no estimate can be made of the age of the arrastra itself.

"The rock of which the arrastra is made is not found within a radius of ten miles, and it is reasonable to suppose it was left at or near its present position by a glacier, or that it was a part of the formation once existing in the neighborhood, but now completely eroded. It is a basalt formation and may be a part of the igneous outflow of the old volcano.

"The arrastra is near a small creek that debouches into the valley at the head of the Ameca, a journey of about an hour and a half, northerly from the old town of Barranca del Oro (Cañon of Gold.) Between the arrastra and the summit of the range separating the Ameca Valley from the Valley of the Ahuacatlan there are parallel series of small auriferous quartz veins, from which undoubtedly the ore for crushing in the arrastra was obtained.

"Many evidences of former workings were found in this neighborhood, but the workings themselves were inaccessible. Portions of the old dumps occupied positions plainly indicating that in their entirety they would have represented many hundreds of feet of underground openings. Entrances to the workings, caved in and ruined, were seen fully thirty feet above the present bed of the creek. The indications were that these openings had originally been right at the bed of the creek, but in the centuries that have passed since the work was done the creek has worn its way to the present level.

"An interesting visit might be made in the city of Tepic, a picturesque old Mexican town, where, from the balcony of the Hotel Bola del Oro (Ball of Gold) on any Sunday morning, the natives may be seen in the Plaza exhibiting their commodities for sale. Their shops consist of positions on or near the sidewalks, with sheets of canvas stretched on poles to shield the wares from the sun, and a wonderful sight it is. Near by is the old cathedral, dating from the time of the earliest Spanish mission days. A resident of Tepic, at whose house I visited, was granted a considerable concession by President Diaz because it was here that Diaz was sheltered while organizing his revolution. Dr. Benjamin Wallace, a former resident of Los Angeles, is the United States Vice-Consul at Tepic."

SPORTSMEN MEET.

ARE TO CONVENE IN NEW YORK.

ANGLERS' GATHERING OF THE WEEK CALLS MANY.

Subjects of Importance to Fraternity to Be Discussed, and Attempts to Secure Federal Legislation to Protect Fish Will Be Inaugurated.

The convention of anglers to be held in New York City the evening of November 11 has attracted many. The preservation of the game fishes of America in rivers, lakes and the sea, and their increase by proper methods of protection and planting is to be the principel subject of discussion. The delegates wish to promote a higher standard of sportsmanship among the followers of rod and line; to encourage the adoption of angling which will make the wholesale slaughter of fish impossible and increase the sport of taking a fair number in a fair way; and to prevent the abuses which are making so many of our streams and seacoasts barren, such as the vicious use of nets and spears, the pollution of running streams, inadequate game laws, etc.

Intersting papers and addresses upon topics of importance are scheduled from American and Canadian anglers. Among those in attendance will be Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton College, Dr. David Starr Jordan of Stanford University, Dr. Barton W. Evermann, United States Fisheries Bureau; Prof. Charles Frederick Holder, president Tuna Club; Charles Hallock, Tarlton H. Bean of the New York Fish Commission; Arthur Jerome Eddy, president Catalina Light Tackle Club; Charles Stewart Davison, New York; Robert B. Lawrence, president the Anglers' Club of New York; Lafayette F. Streeter, president of the Aransas Pass Tarpon Club; Prof. Charles Frederick Holder, president Tuna Club; F. Gray Griswold, New York; John L. Cadwalader, New York; Walter A. Brackett, Boston Anglers' Club; Cyrus S. Petre, Philadelphia; Seymour E. Locke, New York; Thomas S. Manning, Avalon, Cal.; E. R. Perkins, New York City; Col. Clinton P. Morehous, Pasadena, Cal., and F. L. Harding, corresponding secretary, Philadelphia.

Among the addresses and papers which will be heard are "The True Sporting Spirit," by Dr. Henry Van Dyke; "The Grayling," by Dr. Jordan; "To the Tip-Top of the United States in search of the Golden Trout," by Dr. Barton W. Evermann; "The Great Game Fishes of the Pacific Slope, and What Has Been Done to Protect Them," by Prof. Charles Frederick Holder; "The Fish Cultural Work of the New York Fish, Forest and Game Commission," by Commissioner Dr. Tarlton H. Bean, and "Thaddeus Norris and Bob Roosevelt in Angling Literature and their Fish Protective Creeds," by Charles Hallock.

Limiting the destructive inroads of the shore seiners upon the coastwise fish supply is a matter which interests every section where there is sea angling as vitally as it does Southern California. The particular needs of this part of the angling world stand in prospect of being ably championed, as the Pacific Coast representation is not only large, but all the members are practical anglers of considerable experience, and therefore well qualified to speak of the Coast's needs.

DUCK POND NUISANCE.

Barm Grass and Water Marigold Prove Very Troublesome to the Club Shooters.

Barm grass, which usually has a struggle for existence, thrives so phenomenally upon the duck ponds that it grows into a mat-like mess covering the water and spoiling the sport. Ducks sit out in the grass patches freely enough when undisturbed, but after being shot at they refuse to settle on anything but water.

Thus far no adequate way of handling either the grass or the marigold weed has been found here. In some ponds whose bottoms are hard and firm enough to give a mower traction, the grass if not too thick can be mowed out in places, but the grass generally is worst in the softer mud, where neither machine nor horse can go. Tules are comparatively easy to handle, but grow so fast that keepers must always be on the lookout for them.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Following a conference of city and county officials, the Finance Committee decided yesterday to recommend that the time for paying the first installment of city taxes be extended thirty days.

Members of the Church Federation have warned some Councilmen that the federation will circulate initiative petitions to secure the adoption of an anti-prize fight ordinance if the Council doesn't take action on this question Monday.

A press agent for the circus has won from the park department a permit for the elephants to take a bath in Westlake next Sunday.

A motion has been made to reopen the case of Kelly Roth against E. L. Hazard, and new testimony may be presented immediately after the holidays. Investigation revealed the fact that Hazard and the Wardens, who once worked well together, are no longer friends.

AT THE CITY HALL.

EXTEND TIME TO PAY TAXES.

NOT DELINQUENT THIS YEAR TILL AFTER CHRISTMAS.

Council Finance Committee Recommends Extension After Conference of City and County Officials. Will Keep Money in Circulation in Place of Locking It in City Vaults.

At the conclusion of a conference between city and county officials, the Finance Committee of the Council voted yesterday to recommend that the time for paying the first installment of city taxes be extended for thirty days. This means that taxes will not become delinquent in the city this year until the last of December.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks, the County Tax Collector, two Supervisors and representatives of the Clearinghouse Association attended the conference, which was held behind closed doors in the Mayor's office. There the members of the Finance Committee were given to understand that the Supervisors and the Clearinghouse Association will use their best efforts to secure a similar extension of the time for paying county taxes. They will ask for a special session of the State Legislature.

Following the recommendation of the Council all city departments will accept scrip for payment of fees and licenses, in fact, for all purposes except for taxes.

"We have the assurance of the bankers that there is no grave shortage of cash in any of the local banks," said Chairman Wallace of the Finance Committee after the session, "they have money, but they desire us to take such action as will not withdraw that money from general circulation until the present flurry is over.

"We are working in harmony with the Clearinghouse Association, and we have the assurance of the directors of that association that they will take care of us in case any unforeseen contingency should arise later.

"The city will lose nothing by extending the time for payment of taxes. If we received the money now it would only lay in the vaults and benefit no one. The present arrangement will make it easier for the taxpayers and easier for the bankers as well."

Several Councilmen have received ocular demonstrations that the banks here have on hand an enormous reserve supply of gold and currency. "I saw $250,000 in gold in one bank vault here yesterday," said one legislator, speaking to a member of the Board of Public Works, "and there was enough currency to increase that to $500,000. This was not one of the big banks, either. All the banks are asking of us is that we assist them in maintaining a gold reserve here. It is along the same line that the government proceeds in such cases."

MORE SEWER DELAYS.
WORK STOPPED BY HOLIDAYS.

There is a bad blockade in Vrooman Act work at the City Hall, growing out of the long string of State holidays declared by Gov. Gillette. Most branches of the government are not affected by the holidays, but there is a State law which provides that Vrooman Act work cannot be ordered, awarded or signed for on a holiday.

During the last two weeks all street and sewer work has been practically at a standstill. In the beginning there was trouble in the sewer department over an alleged flaw in the ordinances of intention. This caused a delay on many streets and a few contractors stopped work. Just as the Board of Public Works secured a partial adjustment of this difficulty the holidays came.

But the engineering department is benefiting by the delay that makes so many property owners restive. The men in the street and sewer departments of the Engineer's office are cleaning up a number of odd jobs that have been floating about the office for years, most of them heirlooms of trouble from a former administration. By the time the holidays are over the engineering department will have specifications ready for enough street and sewer work to keep the entire force of local contractors working for the next six months.

FOR ELEPHANT BATHS.
WILL PLUNGE IN WESTLAKE.

A clever press agent for a visiting circus has won from the Park Board permission to use Westlake Park a week from today as a bathing pool for its herd of elephants. The advanced spieler has represented that the great beasts are just itching for a bath and that Westlake is the only available bathtub.

Park Superintendent Morley hesitated to grant the permit, but the circus man produced a whole handful of similar permits granted to the company by eastern municipalities. He is an adept at spinning wonderful yarns about the elephants at bath. Mayor Harper finally stood for the performance, saying that it will give Young America a chance to watch the elephants without buying a circus ticket.

MORE INITIATIVE.
OVERWORKED HOBBY.

The poor old "initiative," decrepit and overworked, is being dragged forth again to do service as a club to drive the Council to sudden action on anti-prize-fight legislation. This time it is welded by the Church Federation through its Civic Righteousness League. The league threatens to start the initiative if the Council doesn't do something about prize fights tomorrow.

A protest against municipal protection for the prize fighters went to the Council four months ago. This was followed by an ordinance containing a number of stringent limitations concerning the number of rounds and the manner in which "boxing exhibitions" may be conducted. The ordinance was prepared by the City Attorney, but it didn't look good to the Council.

The legislators and the City Attorney have experienced difficulty in framing the draft of an ordinance that will pass muster in the courts. The State Legislature adopted a statute four years ago, making express provision for sparring exhibitions of a limited number of rounds. The Council attempted to "regulate" the sport here under this statute, but the Superior Court declared the regulation to be invalid.

There are enough votes in the Council to secure the passage of a new "regulating" ordinance, provided the regulations are not too severe. The kind of ordinance the Council is willing to pass is not the kind that is acceptable to the Church Federation.

Last week the representatives of the Federation threatened to invoke the initiative to secure the passage of a new wholesale liquor ordinance. Tomorrow it will be the prize fights. Probably a majority of the Council would like to see the question of prize fighting submitted to a vote of the people; but they hesitate to call an election that will cost the city at least $12,000 at a time when the treasury is about depleted.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

WHOLE TRUTH WAS NOT TOLD.

DEAL IN LAND WHICH HAS A SUSPICIOUS APPEARANCE.

Attorneys Endeavor to Reopen Case of Roth Against Hazard in Order to Show That at Least One of the Parties Did Not Act in Good Faith.

Counsel in the case of Kelly Roth against E. L. Hazard, an action to compel the return of property which the defendant is accused of obtaining by fraud, are making an effort to have the case reopened for the introduction of further testimony.

At the time the case came to trial, before Judge Houser in the Superior Court, Attorneys Goldberg and Meily had no inkling of the defense which Hazard would offer, and they were very much surprised when the notorious defendant took the witness stand and posed as an innocent victim of his erstwhile friends and associates, C. D. Warden and his son, C. P. Warden, operators of an abstract concern of evil reputation.

Hazard was accused of deliberate fraud in inducing Roth to exchange the fittings of a barber shop for a mortgage executed by one W. G. Lloyd for $1000 on property in Riverside, which the testimony showed to be worth no more than $40 at the most.

Hazard, on the witness stand, declared that he had traded a valuable lot on Boyle Heights to the Wardens for the Lloyd mortgage, and knew nothing of the value, or lack of value, of the Riverside lands which were supposed to secure it. So firmly had he trusted the Wardens, at that time, that he had accepted C. P. Warden's indorsement of the mortgage to him without recourse.

A search of the records, however, revealed the fact that the lot in question, situated at the corner of Michigan avenue and Mott street, had not been transferred by Hazard to Warden till December, 1906, while the transfer of the mortgage from Warden to Hazard had taken place in October.

In his testimony, thus refuted by facts, Hazard showed very plainly that all was not as it had been between him and his former associates, and that his feelings toward the Wardens were anything but affectionate.

An interview with C. D. Warden yesterday, at the place where his discredited business is conducted on Temple street, revealed the fact that the officials of this abstract company felt no more affection for Hazard than he did for them.

Here was a situation full of promise that honest men might get their dues.

Hazard, said the elder Warden, had known very well just what the land in Elysian Heights, Riverside, was at the time he exchanged the mortgage for Roth's barber fixtures, and when the mortgage had passed from the younger Warden to Hazard, without recourse.

"Yes, he gave us the lot for the mortgage, but that was long afterward. We just gave him the mortgage to get what he could out of it from Lloyd." The saving clause "from Lloyd" was uttered after a slight pause. "He was to give us half what he got out of it."

According to Warden's estimate of the value of the lot, which finally was given for the mortgage, he and his son did not come out very well on the deal, if the mortgage really were worth as much as $40, as testimony at the trial indicated that it might be.

"There was a mortgage on it for $1000, and a street bond for $475," he said. "The lot, clear of incumbrance, I should judge to be worth perhaps $1500."

I nhis testimony in his own defense in the Roth trial, Hazard had admitted that there was some incumbrance on the lot he had turned over to Warden, but declared his equity had a cash value of $700 and an exchange value of $1500.

Mrs. Nellie Landers, who is proprietor of a restaurant which happens to be next door to the place where the Wardens wait for unwary ones to come and do busines with them, used to own that now famous lot. Also she owned some property in Oxnard and a rooming-house in this city. Hazard got all of these, by an indirect course, and Mrs. Landers got some property in Rincon.

"I had to sell the Rincon land for very much less than I thought the property I traded for it was worth," said Mrs. Landers yesterday. "I took what I could get for it. Maybe it was worth more, but J. R. Newberry knocked it to anybody who went there wanting to buy it. He owned property all around it."

Mrs. Landers spoke with relief of one incident in the indirect transfer, for she feels that she was in danger of getting into trouble, under the directions of Messrs. Warden, Hazard and Warden. At first, under instructions, she signed a deed transferring the property to one Cope. Maybe Cope never got hold of the instrument. At any rate it was not recorded, and later, without knowing what had become of the first deed, Mrs. Landers was induced to sign another, transferring the same property to Warden.

"If I ever have to have any dealings with that bunch again I'll hire a lawyer to do it," commented Mrs. Landers.

There was another bit of business which Mrs. Landers said she had with Hazard. There had been a judgment against her, and this was made a claim on some of her property. She gave the money to Hazard to pay it, meanwhile taking an appeal. In the higher court she won the case, and the money did not have to be paid.

And it wasn't. Hazard paid it to no one at all, not even Mrs. Landers, but seems quite honest in this instance, for he admits that he owes it to her.

From all of which it might appear that "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee" is not so very peculiar after all.

The case of Roth against Hazard was taken under advisement by Judge Houser October 29. If reopened for the admission of further testimony the matter probably will be taken up immediately after the holidays.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM TEXAS. Anna Maney, late of Texas and recently a resident of the city of Watts, was brought into Justice Summerfield's court yesterday morning, charged with a high-grade misdemeanor, consisting of threats and the flourishing of a revover in the course of a misunderstanding with a neighbor, Mrs. Banche Percy. Mrs. Percy was the complaining witness. The defendant denied all the allegations. Justice Summerfield allowed her to go on her own recognizance, and her examination will be set after the holidays are ended.

STOCK DEAL. A suit to compel a division of money which eight of nine defendants are alleged to have received from the sale of United Railways Company stock was filed yesterday in the Superior Court by M. H. French, W. B. Larrabee and J. W. E. Taylor. The plaintiffs allege that the defendants, the R. A. Phillips Company and others, entered into an agreement to sell 450 shares of the stock, of a par value of $1000 a share, to W. Cooper Morris and W. H. Moore, receiving $56,000 as a payment. The plaintiffs allege that they own an undivided interest of 56 per cent. in the stock, and demand that such a percentage of the amount paid, or $30,240, be paid to them.

GEMS IN DANGER.

STATE JEWELS WERE STOLEN.

ROYAL CROWNS AND REGALIA HAVE OFT DISAPPEARED.

The Crown of Hungary Has Had a Varied Experience—Bold Attempt Once Made to Steal the Royal Regalia from the Tower of London and Successfully Foiled.

The sensational discovery of the disappearance from Dublin Castle of the precious regalia of the Order of St. Patrick is a most elegant reminder, says London Tit-Bits, that even the most jealously guarded treasures are not always safe from the evil designs of clever, enterprising thieves.

The crown of Holland, which is said to have cost £125,000 about seventy-five years ago, actually underwent the indignity of being stolen by burglars. For nearly two years they had it in their possession, and eventually some of the gems from it were found near Brooklyn, in the United States. The others subsequently came to light in Belgium and were ultimately restored to their original places.

Perhaps the crown of Hungary has undergone more vicissitudes than any other European crown. A long time ago, owing to the extinction of the royal male line, there were several candidates for the Hungarian throne, and eventually the Diet bestowed the crown on their own nominee.

Having been persuaded to appear in public in his coronation robes, with the crown on his head, the new sovereign was swooped down upon and carried off by the King of Bohemia, crown and all. Much disappointed, the Hungarians thereupon made Otto of Bavaria their monarch on condition that he make it his business to steal back the missing crown.

TRAVELS IN DISGUISE.

To effect this purpose, Otto made his way into Bohemia disguised as a merchant, recovered the precious crown and started back to his kingdom with it concealed in a cask slung at the rear of the wagon. In the course of the journey, however, it was nearly lost again, for the jolting of the vehicle caused the cask to fall into a deep ditch. It was only fished out with great difficulty, but its adventures were ended for a time with its arrival in Hungary.

The next person to tamper with the crown was the widow of King Albert. Aided by one of her ladies, she stitched it up in a cushion and smuggled it across the River Danube into German territory, where she herself sought refuge.

When pressed for ready cash she raised nearly 3000 ducats on the crown, which she pledged to the Emperor Frederick. Countless lives were lost and much blood was shed before it could be recovered and restored to Hungary, but once again there it was locked up in a strong fortress and guarded night and day.

For the space of a couple of centuries the crown had a comparatively quiet time, though at the time of the revolution it had a narrow escape. In order to protect it from the Austrians it was buried by a band of patriots in a forest, where it lay concealed for nearly fifty years.

It was then dug up from its hiding place, much the worse for its extraordinary experiences, and conveyed to the Hungarian capital. Since then the crown of Hungary has not figured so conspicuously in the romance of stolen royal emblems.

It is some 236 years since the regalia in the Tower of London had a narrow escape from the fate which has apparently overtaken that of the Order of St. Patrick. Having concocted a plot with three kindred spirits, a notorious rascal, known to history as Col. Thomas Blood, induced the keeper of the crown jewels to admit him and his confederates to view them.

No sooner was the door of the chamber closed, in accordance with invariable practice, than a cloak was flung over the keeper's head, a gag thrust into his mouth and an iron hook fixed in his nose. These impediments failing to quiet him, he was knocked down and stabbed, the thieves immediately making off with the crown and globe.

THIEVES ARE CAPTURED.

Next moment the keeper, who had been knocked senseless, regained consciousness, and, hearing his shouts, his daughter rushed out screaming: "Treason! treason! The crown is stolen!" The thieves were speedily run down, and, notwithstanding resistance, were captured with the jewels in their possession.

With an insolence all his own, Blood boasted that it was "a bold bid for a crown," and refused to make any confession except to the King in person. The effeminate curiosity of Charles II secured not only admission to the royal presence, but a pardon and a reward for his daring, in Irish estates worth £500 a year, which were granted to the daring ruffian.

Other crowns have been stolen at different times, among them that of Scotland. When that country was invaded by the English under Cromwell the crown, with all the other royal regalia, was removed for safety to Dunnottar Castle.

Finally the invaders captured Edinburgh, and when they were laying siege to Dunnottar the defender of that place was urged to give up the crown and other property so that it could be concealed from the English in some remote castle in the Highlands.

This the officer refused to do, and consequently a plan for stealing the precious jewels was devised by a daughter of the Earl of Mar, which was successfully carried off by the wife of the minister of Kineff, a parish four or five miles distant from Dunnottar.

A Bombshell Exploded In the Enemy's Camp

When The Hub advertised a purchase of $250,000 worth of men's high grade clothing at half and less and commenced the greatest bona-fide clothing sale ever launched on the Pacific Coast, it was a veritable bombshell in the enemy's camp and caused consternation in clothing circles. Practically every clothing store in Los Angeles got into the game with all sorts of cooked to order sales. The time honored discount game of 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. off from marked up prices, for clothing old and venerable enough to receive more considerate treatment, was resorted to. We fight fire with fire and in lieu of the popgun methods and measley 25 per cent. discount, we make a sharp, bold, fearless and incisive price cut that is sweeping and far reaching.

The officer approached and made service of a summons on the tailor, directing him to appear in Justice Summerfield's court. Allegretti was overwhelmed with mortification. He tried to hustle the officer from the shop, but the fellow would not budge. Then Allegretti waxed indignant.

One of the men started to take several expensive suits that were hanging in a cabinet. Allegretti protested vehemently.

Finally, the tailor hustled next door to his friend, the milliner, and secured a small loan. He returned out of breath and asked what it would cost him. He was told that $31.50 would settle the bill, and the amount was paid.

Then Allegretti secured the services of Attorney Roser and the lawyer prepared an answer, demanding a bill of particulars. When he went to Justice Summerfield's court to file his papers, Roser found the case had been dismissed. The deputy constable said Allegretti had settled the entire matter. Allegretti explained to Roser that he supposed the $31.50 simply was a cash bond to prevent an attachment being placed on his business.

Now Allegretti is seething over his unfortuunate début in the legal playlet. He wants satisfaction. He says he will retain half a dozen lawyers if necessary and fight the case to the last gasp; will spend hundreds of dollars, if necessary, to protect what he considers his rights.

INFLUX OF HINDUS.

Thousands from Vancouver Now Employed on Western Pacific in California and Nevada.

Thousands of Hindus are being shipped from Vancouver by way of Seattle and San Francisco into the construction camps of the Western Pacific in California and Nevada. The natives of India are furnished by contract, like the Japanese. The influx into the railroad camps has driven away many American laborers and the camps are given over almost entirely to Hindus and Japs.

With each colony of Hindus there is a Buddhist priest who follows them about their work and performs the religious rites. The railroad companies pay the laborers $2 a day, and they prepare their own food. About one-third of the Hindus are women, who dress as men and work for the same wages. It is stated that they live much cheaper than any other race.

Trouble already has broken out in Nevada between the Japs and Hindus. The Japs refuse to work in the same camps with the Hindus, who continually change from camp to camp. The priest settles all their troubles and handles their savings, which are sent to India each month. It is stated that out of $60 a month they save $50.

SWEARLESS SAILOR COMING INTO PORT.

Capt. Oscar Oberg, the sailor preacher. Above he is at work on the quarter deck of his ship.

CAPT. Oscar Oberg, the sailor-preacher of the Pacific Coast, and his schooner, the Admiral, are slated to come to San Pedro in about ten days. This will give the captain a chance to visit his home in Long Beach and several of the congregations in that place and San Pedro will have a chance to hear him preach.

Many years have passed since Capt. Oberg began to preach. At first he didn't have a license, either as captain or as preacher, but that did not keep him from spreading the news that he was entitled to both.

The captain has been sailing on the Pacific for nearly thirty years, and he did not always bear the good reputation which he now has. There are those along the waterfront who remember the days when he was a "buco" mate who made things fly, and could clean out any seven sailors who ever went to sea before the mast.

The change came when the captain wandered into a little Peniel mission in San Francisco one night with the idea of causing a disturbance. "They disturbed me, and before I got out of that place I felt so low down and mean that I decided to quit drinking and reform," he says. "It worked so well that I have stuck to it ever since."

Many sailors who are new on the Coast have doubted the idea that a captain can sail a lumber ship and be a preacher at the same time, and not a few of them have shipped on the Admiral with the idea of either showing him up as a hypocrite who preaches on shore and runs a "hell ship" at sea, or of having an easy time under a preacher-captain who is slack on seamanship.

They found before they were out of port a day's sail that they were wrong in both ways. The captain will not stand for any swearing on the quarter deck or in his hearing, and he runs his ship under the strictest discipline necessary.

In the old days when Oberg was a mate and not a preacher he would light into his crew with his fists or a handspike on the slightest provocation and beat them up. He said that it seemed to be the only way to make them know that he was boss. But any one who has ever stood on the Long Wharf at Port Los Angeles and heard the captain giving orders in stentorian tones while the crew is warping the vessel up to wharf will vouch that it is easy to run the ship without swearing or resorting to the use of the handspike.

Another peculiarity about Capt. Oberg is that he works; does real manual labor along with any of his crew while at sea.

Many masters say it is impossible to do this and retain the respect of either mates or crew, but Oberg has shown that it is as easy to work and retain his dignity as it is to run his ship without swearing. In fair weather he spends his time around the quarter deck doing whatever comes to hand. When he reaches port he visits the various pastors in the place and makes it known that he is a minister of the gospel. He is generally in demand after the first visit, because he preaches very interesting sermons, right from the shoulder. He is a man of the world, knows the troubles and trials which constantly confront humanity, and he knows how to sympathize with the poor and the homeless. He followed the sea as a sailor for many years before he worked his way to his present place. But Oberg feels more at home in the little sailor missions strung along the Coast in every port from Alaska to Panama than he does in the large churches, for it is there he meets the men who knew him in the other days, and he says he feels that his mission in life is to bring comfort and peace to those that go down to the sea in ships.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND THANKSGIVING BIRDS STRUT IN A VALLEY.

Typical Turkey Ranch Near El Centro.
There are many larger ones in that section.

The fertile Imperial Valley, a few years ago a desert over whose sands the gobble of a gobbler had never echoed, is now the greatest turkey farm on the Pacific Coast.

Hundreds of thousands of Thanksgiving dinners are strutting about in feathers, ready for the picking. A careful estimate made by a man who went through the valley last week indicates that there are 25,000 turkeys there in prime condition.

Five years ago this section was a waterless waste of sand dunes, unrelieved by any green thing, and no domestic fowl had ever cropped alfalfa from its bosom. Now it is verdant with alfalfa, surpassing in sugar that grown anywhere, and it is found that turkeys thrive upon it, and become much better flavored and more tender fowls than on any other kind of feed.

The industry has grown up so quickly, really within the past two years, that the valley begins to look like one great turkey ranch, and it promises to become world famous. The well-drained soil, the dry atmosphere and the protection from ocean winds make it an ideal place for the growth of turkeys, and they thrive almost entirely upon alfalfa.

Buyers who have visited the valley have contracted for the entire crop at 14 cents a pound, and the price figures up a considerable income for the ranchers.

Mrs. A. J. Morey, on whose ranch the accompanying picture was taken, near El Centro, has 140 fine turkeys, reared by her individual efforts. If they average ten pounds in weight, her income will be about $200, which will be the reward for spare moments spent at turkey growing. Another ranch near El Centro is feeding about 700 turkeys, and figuring at the same rate, the income will be about $1000, while the 25,000 turkeys said to be in the Imperial Valley will produce a gross income of $35,000. Next year this will probably be tripled or quadrupled.

This talk about so much turkey raises in the mind of almost every reader the question of how much his Thanksgiving turkey will cost. The price is now 28 cents in the retail market, and it is the talk of retailers that it will possibly go to 30 or 35 cents by the time the turkey-eating day arrives. The suggestion of the possibility usually means that it will "git thar," and it will not be safe to count on less than 30 cents a pound.

Your ten-pound turkey will, therefore, cost you $3, but you will not have ten pounds of turkey. The only thing the consumer doesn't pay for is the breath that goes out when the bird is killed, and when he lays it on the kitchen table he has six pounds of turkey that has cost him 50 cents a pound.

The Imperial Valley turkeys are already being slaughtered and placed in cold storage, to be ready for the Thanksgiving rush, and the Los Angeles market will be almost totally dependent upon this home production, as there seems to be no eastern surplus.

Fortunate Los Angeles!

Get Sterns and Foster Mattresses Here

The three essentials of a good mattress are that it shall be:

Soft, yet firm, so that the body will lie flat—not sink into a hollow.

Springy, so that it will retain its softness.

And pure!

By the perfection of special machinery Sterns & Foster have made it possible to make of cotton a mattress that has all three of these qualities—a mattress that is absolutely comfortable, never lumps, never needs remaking and that is as pure and clean as fresh linen. We are exclusive Sterns & Foster Agents.

DOGGISH.

POUNDMASTER SURRENDERS.

Distress of Mexican Woman Wins Her Pet.

Los Angeles Pound Well-Kept Institution.

Method of Executing Strays Gives No Pain.

The dog days have arrived. The banks say so, the mollycoddles who have to pay more for their weekly allowance of perfume are sure that it is so, and George and Bill Vacher, the city pound masters, are ready to swear that it is so.

For these are the busiest days of the year at the dog pound. During the past two weeks there have been more than 200 dogs captured and killed, and on the drying racks of the city pound are scalps to be presented to the City Auditor when Vacher makes his demand for pelt money. In the office rooms are the records of the dogs taken from the streets. A long line of empty collars are mute reminders of those which have come and gone.

For dog-catching is a "dog-goned" business. Any dog gone from his home may run into the clutches of the dog-catcher. And when he does, why then something happens to him whereof good dogs scarce dare think, and then he goes to dog heaven and becomes a dog star.

When the photographer entered the big dog corral and looked at the motley gathering of dogs, he said something for which he should haye been ashamed.

He said, "let us flea from here," which, according to the latest authorities, Joe Miller and Jokin Miller, is said to be a joke.

Then he began to do business with the snap-shot machine, and there was consternation among the dogs.

"Oh, pshaw," remarked one fat old society pug dog, as she sat behind the bars of one of the dog pens, "wonder what that old cat, Mrs. I. Rish Setter will say when she sees my picture in the paper. Wait a minute till I get this dab of dust off my eyebrow, and then you may take a pose of me. And say, send me the proofs, and if they suit me I will order a dozen. Yes, just a bust picture, if you please."

The kennels were filled with dogs—every size, kind and description—from the finest French poodles and stately hounds to the mangy flea-bitten little curs of the gutter. All were enjoying the same prosperity. All were well fed and in good health. They believe in doing things right at the Los Angeles dog pound.

WELL-KEPT POUND.

The local pound is well kept. The great corral in which the dogs are allowed to exercise is spotlessly clean. The river gravel is packed down hard, offering a fine chance for a romp. The dogs enjoy this. The kennels where the dogs are kept are also spotlessly clean. The floors are covered with tan bark, and this is removed twice a week. The dogs are changed from one cell to another as the day of their doom approaches, but the really good dogs are not killed. They are sold by the dog catchers. The other variety are given a death treatment so remarkably fast that they never know what has hit them. Fifty of them may be killed in four minutes and all without the slightest pain. On killing days, which occur once a week at the pound, the doomed dogs are put into a big iron case at one end of the yard. When this is full, the lid is shut down and gas is turned on inside. The fumes destroy the dogs in less than two minutes, and the system has been declared by experts to be the best in use in the United States at the present time.

The lot of the dog catcher is a hard one. Every one tries to take a fall out of him. The city authorities do not want to pay him bounty, the men and women of the street jeer and curse at him and fight him on the slightest provocation, and even the little boys throw stones at him as he passes along the street attending quietly to his own business. Such is the general reputation of the dog catcher.

YIELDS TO HER DISTRESS.

But here is what one dog catcher named Bill Vacher did for a poor old Mexican woman one day last week. She came into the corral at the dog pound and looked timidly around. An old black shawl was wound and twisted about her head and flung across her shoulder.

"Mi perro," she muttered.

"Want your dog?" queried Vacher.

"Mi perro," said the woman, with a nod of her head.

She put her small, slender brown hand, worn with toil, into an old beadwork purse.

"Quanto?" (how much) she asked.

"Dos pesos," (two dollars) answered Vacher.

The woman slowly counted out her money. Nickles and dimes and even pennies were taken out. Vacher went and brought her dog. It was a scraggly-looking animal, and had been in the kennel only a short time. The dog catcher who took the dog explained that a number of brown children had been playing with it in front of a shanty.

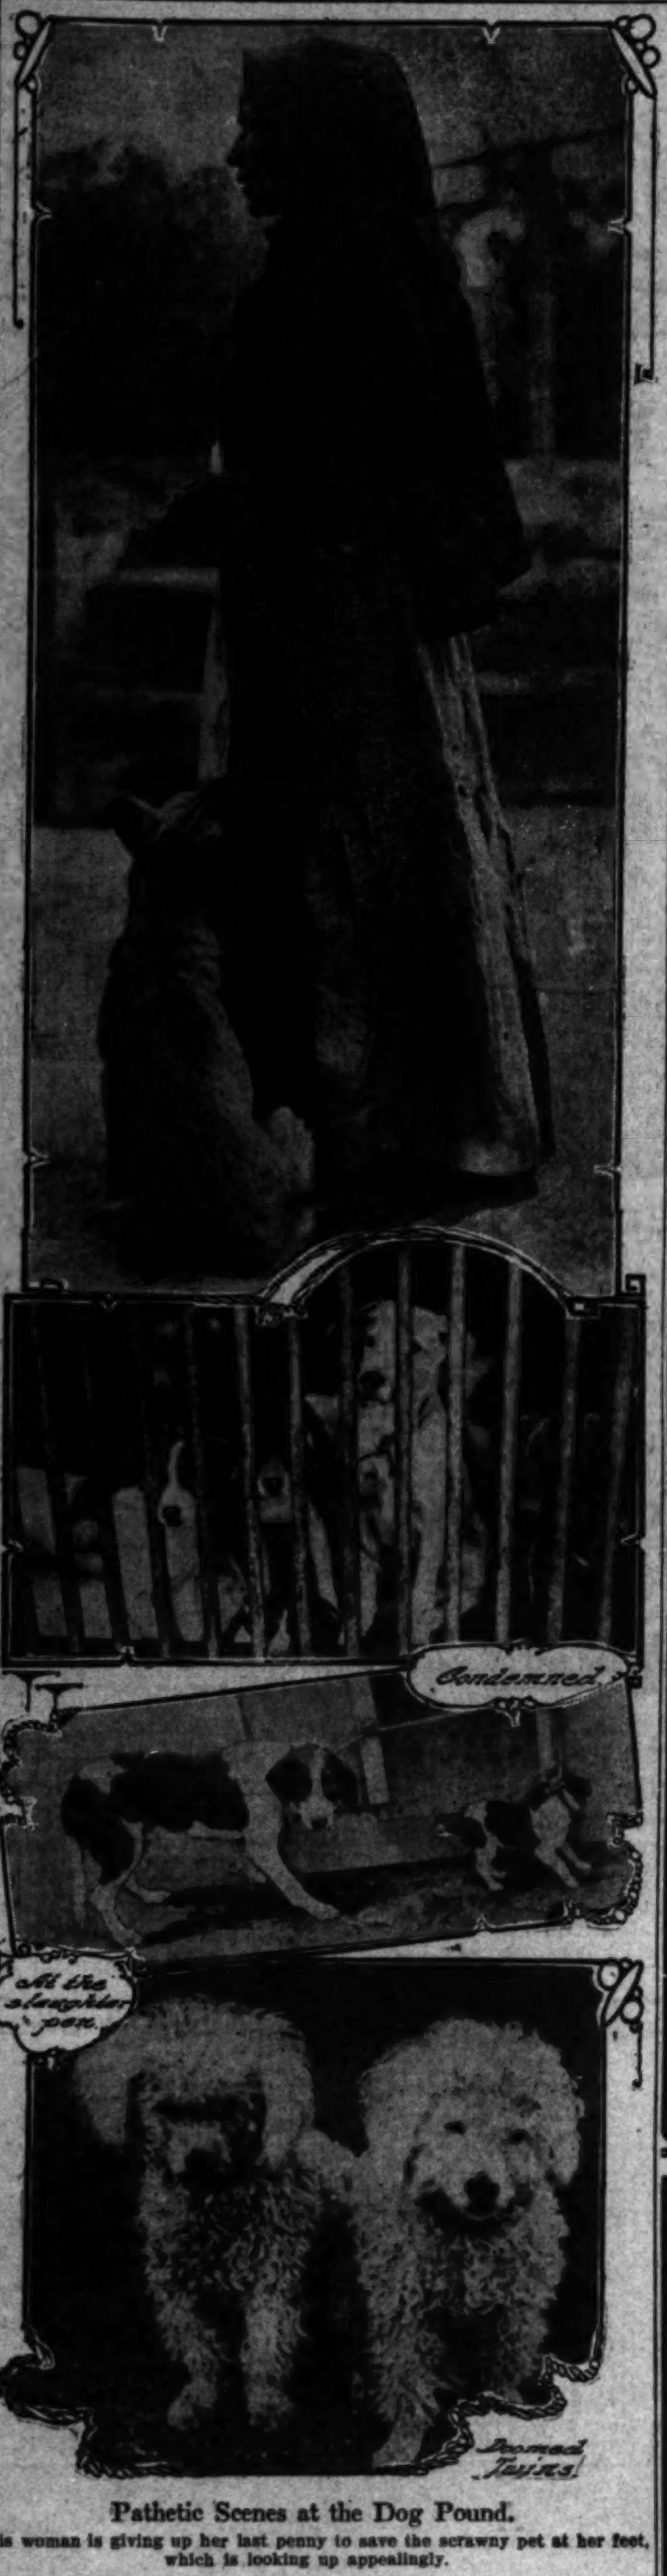
The dog gave a little bark, and ran over to the woman, nestling down at her feet and looking up lovingly into her face. She held out her hand. There was only $1.28 in it. She begged for the dog, but there was a look of despair in her tired black eyes. The dog seemed to understand that he was in a bad way, and he howled mournfully. The woman turned slowly away and started out. Her head was bent just a little lower than it had been. Maybe she was thinking about those brown-eyed, barefooted babies who would not get their dog.

But she didn't get far.

"Here," called Vacher, "take yer dog, lady; take yer dog. This ain't no business to make a livin', not to break the hearts of the little kids."

The woman didn't understand what was said. All she knew was that the dog was here—and also the money. She gathered him up and went away, with a smile for the dog catcher.

The Vachers took the dog pound twelve years ago. At that time the spot where it now stands was flat alkali land. Now there are thousands of dollars in improvements on the grounds. Every year these improvements are added to.



Pathetic Scenes at the Dog Pound.

This woman is giving up her last penny to save the scrawny pet at her feet, which is looking up appealingly.

SCRIP GOOD AS GOLD.

Customs Collector Takes a Stand That Will Please the Local Business Community.

Collector of Customs Pendleton has put a new rule into effect, concerning scrip money, that will certainly be appreciated by all business men having dealings with the customhouse.

According to the rulings of the Department of the Interior the government will not accept for custom dues any money but gold, gold and silver certificates or any of it's own obligations, and, strange to say, will not take any national bank notes, commonly known as "greenbacks." Of course, the new scrip is not legal tender for customs, but Collector Pendleton has decided that he will accept it in payment for all custom dues, in order to relieve, as far as he can, the present stringency. Certified checks from any bank that is a member of the clearinghouse will also be accepted. Pendleton has been kept at home three weeks on account of an injury to his leg, and when he came into his office yesterday morning he announced these decisions on the scrip.

TO BUILD SHOE FACTORY.

Eastern Capitalists Backing a Plant Near Slauson Junction About First of Year.

Backed by eastern capitalists, E. V. Keith, formerly of Haverhill, Mass., plans the establishment of the largest shoe factory in the West, at a cost of $100,000, near Slauson Junction. The plant, which is to have a daily capacity of 500 pairs of shoes, will, in all probability, be in operation by May.

For more than a month Mr. Keith has been in Los Angeles perfecting his plans. An option has been taken on twenty acres of land on the Salt Lake route, not far from Slauson Junction, and a brick building, 75x250 feet, two stories high, will be put up.

Mr. Keith has made arrangements with the Slauson Junction tannery to furnish all the sole leather. The tannery has a patent process which adds greatly to the toughness of the leather, and Mr. Keith says that as soon as a contract is signed the tannery will enlarge its plant and commence putting out a special stock for his factory. When he came here Mr. Keith planned to do his own tanning, but when he found the excellent quality of leather put out by the local company by its new process, he immediately made negotiations for a contract. Keith has been a shoe manufacturer for years, being formerly a member of the George Keith Manufacturing Company of Haverhill, Mass.

"There is a great field here for a factory," he said yesterday. "It costs the eastern manufacturer 10 cents a pair to ship shoes to the Coast, and while this in itself does not seem much, it will make a big factory pay a handsome dividend when you come to figure it out.

"I intend to secure sole leather from a local tannery, but it will be necessary to ship the upper stock from the Middle West. It is my intention to establish city salesrooms in Los Angeles and San Francisco, but the company will also do a wholesale business.

"I have my plans ready to submit to the eastern men who are backing the project, and I will leave for the East within a week or two, but expect to return about the first of the year and commence work on the factory, which will be equipped with the latest machinery. The company will manufacture exclusive styles in ladies' boots and Oxfords and men's shoes."

taken from the Arizona excavations is a primitive flour mill. It consists of a flat stone, two feet wide, three and a half feet in length and eight inches in thickness. The surface is rough and irregular, and is marked by several small depressions, made evidently by the continual rubbing of small, oval-shaped stones. It was the rubbing operation which, it is supposed, crushed the kernels of grain and prepared the flour for use in cookery.

Above each depression on the mill stone is a small hole, which evidently was used as a mortar to crush the seeds which proved refractory. The action of the elements has almost obliterated the holes, but they are still distinct enough to show that they were placed there for a purpose, and are not the result of chance.

Stone axes, clubs and mauls, some of them evidently intended for the arts of peace and others for war, are included in the collection. Each of them is a typical specimen of its kind, and the equal of any ever discovered in the treasures troves of the Southwest.

When the Southwest museum building at Highland Park is erected the treasures now on exhibition in the Huntington building showrooms and also the Palmer collection now shown in the Chamber of Commerce exhibit will be transferred there. With these specimens as a foundation it is confidently expected that the collection will far excel any other ever brought together.

The Southwest museum is maintained entirely by the subscriptions of the members of the Southwest Society, and no admission fee is charged those who care to examine the specimens. Many of the articles on exhibition cannot be duplicated by any other collection in existence, while there is no known relic of the Cliff Dwellers' age that is not represented.

"MAMMY" GETS FOUR BITS.

Weeps on Neck of Business Man, Who Wonders Now If He's Been "Stung."

"Say, mistah, kain't yo' gib a po', stahved ol' cullud lady a bunch of dem grapes?" was a query which startled J. T. Nash, manager of a large fruit company, from a deep reverie into which he had fallen while calculating the probable loss of several hundred pounds of that fruit which half a dozen young women were resorting and repacking in the warehouse of the company.

Turning slowly, Mr. Nash saw before him a decrepit old negro woman, who, on seeing his face, rushed up to him, and, throwing her arms about his neck, commenced to weep, and ejaculated: "Mah chile, mah chile, don' yo' know yo' ole mammy no mo'?"

Considerably embarrassed, Nash finally escaped the grasp of the old woman, and, taking her aside, questioned her.

"What makes you imagine I'm your child?" he asked.

"I don' haf to think, I knows it. Yo' name's Nash, yes, sah, and yo' comes from Texas, yes, sah, from down at Richmon', Texas, dat's jus' what yo' do. I nussed yo' when yo' was a babe in yo' motha's lap."

"I never lived in Texas, never was there," denied Nash, emphatically. "You're mistaken."

"Wha's dat? Yo' nevah libed in Texas? Sho'ly yo' did. I knows. I was de nuss fo' de fambli fo' seven yea's, and yo' got de Nash 'spression all ovah, sah, all ovah yo' face."

While she spoke, Nash had been thinking seriously, and it came to him that he did have an uncle living in Texas for many years, and perhaps the resemblance was striking. He admitted this to the old woman, and she immediately fell upon his neck the second time.

"Ah knew it. Ah just was sho' 'bout dat face. Now kain't you gib a pore ole lady some dem grapes to eat?"

"Certainly," replied Nash, his curiosity aroused. "Where did you come from? How old are you, anyway?

"Ah's 91 yea's ole, nussed thirty-nine chillun in ole Vaginy, and fo'teen 'sides yo'self — Ah mean yo' cousin — in Texas."

"Ninety-one!" You certainly don't look that old. How do you know you are? Prove it."

"Ah knows, all rite, caus mah missus fo' de war done tole me Ah was bo'n fifteen yea's aftah de stahs fell on de earf, 'n dats a mity long time ago, Ah reckin. Ah done see Genul Lee and heaps o' gray coats an' rebels. Mah fule ole man chased 'long wif de ahmy and Ah nevah did see him no mo'." Her big brown eyes here glistened with moisture, and Nash was forced into silence for a minute.

"And you've never married since that time, I suppose?"

"Sah, Ah's done married fo' mo' times sides dat. Ah know married life I'm staht to de end. Dese yere wimmin now'days done know what marrage means. Ah's had 'leben chillun 'n dey's all libin' yet. Some dem's got fambiles mos' 's large as mine."

"Married four times. Surely a candidate for the "smart set" of today. What is your name, your last one, I mean?"

"Mah las' name am Brown, just plain 'Liza Brown. Good name, dat. Kain't yo' loan me a quatah till mornin'? I'se done had no money fo' so long dat ah's mose stahved waitin' fo' a meal."

"Quarter, eh? I haven't a two-bit piece, but here's a half," and Nash dropped the coin into the mammy's hands.

"Bress yo' soul, de Lo'd bress yo' soul. Yo de givinest man Ah's met dis yere whole mornin'," as she placed the coin with twenty or thirty others of similar denomination. "Ah sho'ly would kiss you', only Ah knows dat yo' grown up now and done want no old black mammy comin' 'round and lovin' yo."

In the meantime Nash had hastily departed, wondering if he had been stung, and prepared to meet the next "cullud lady" that claimed to be his nurse when she appeared, if appear she should.

WHAT'S SAID IN SAN FRANCISCO.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—The smoke of political battle has cleared away and the victory of decency has made many of our citizens wonder whether they have not been in a dream for the past six years. It will not be long before the piratical acts of the municipal pirates who governed the city for years will fade from our memories in the same way that the unpleasant effects of a nightmare are effaced by the activities of day. Already there has been a noticeable business revival and in a few days after the election rebuilding contracts for two million dollars were let. All of this goes to prove that the choice of a serene scholar for Mayor is a better commercial asset than the election of a politician.

When two pugilists contend in the ring for glory and gate money, their physical ginger is anxiously noted at the beginning of each round and the outcome of the battle is ofttimes foretold if one exhibits more snap than the other. In the political scrap just finished the physical stamina of the three candidates for Mayor was carefully scrutinized by gambling experts and it was thought an easy matter to pick the weaker of the three. The finish, however, disappointed the prophets and the gentle poet got the decision in better physical condition than either the young lawyer or the sturdy middle-aged artisan. On the night of election when aroused from sleep by thousands of serenaders, he made a pajamas talk equal to any of the full-dress orations of the campaign.

"Everybody works but father" has become a classic in the way of pithy protest; but Eugene E. Schmitz, one of our former citizens, has modified the plaint to "everybody votes but me." He ached to get out and help the champion of the downtrodden, but he was restrained by confining surroundings, and prison bars did in his case a prison make. It was small consolation to him that Ruef could not vote for the socialist.

Former Mayor Phelan, for a millionaire, is a patient man, but forbearance ceased to be a virtue with him under the stress of Ananias politics and he thusly relieves himself: "I have remained silent under charges made by irresponsible campaign orators in order not to confuse the issues before the people and play into the hands of the enemy, but I think the time opportune to set at rest a malicious slander. My name was brought into the late campaign by the defeated and discredited candidate of the Union Labor party, who, at almost every meeting, told his hearers that during the teamsters' strike in 1901 I, as Mayor, said to the men: 'Go back to work or be clubbed.' I desire to declare now, as I did at the time this was first published, that the statement is a pure invention and is absolutely untrue. It is a gratifying thing that today we behold the breaking down of class alignment and honorable men elected to office by the votes of Democrats, Republicans and labor unionists on a platform which reads that 'no man is higher than the law.' "

It takes money to make the mare go and the same is true of the rat. We have been spending over thirty thousand dollars a month to drive him out of San Francisco because of his murderous propensity of disseminating bubonic plague and now when we are on the eve of success the money has given out. Unless the Federal or State government comes to our assistance with ample funds the rodents will have a chance to multiply unmolested as of yore. The city finances are at the point where official salaries are in danger and the imminence of that catastrophe would stop a much more serious danger than rat extermination.

An army of tax eaters trooping into the treasurer's office in the Western National Bank has caused the officials to notify Treasurer Bantel to move out. In these strenuous financial times we are easily scared and the bankers were afraid that the public might think the tax eaters were depositors making a run on the bank.

We are struggling along the best we know how with our asset money instead of coin, and most of us are struggling to get hold of more of it than the other fellow. Subtreasurer Ralston accuses us of having buried $18,000,000 in safe deposit vaults and advises us to take it out and put it in circulation. He says: "San Francisco is in a different position from any other city in the United States in that our banks have made heavy loans for rebuilding purposes. The money has gone into land, labor and materials. The banks cannot readily call in such loans. Put that condition alongside the action of those persons who have buried their coin in safe deposit vaults and you have an explanation of local conditions." The managers of the safe deposit vault companies have refused to rent any more boxes and it looks as though the people would be forced back to the old stocking.

An artist and a naturalist are trying their hardest to keep us from getting a muchly-talked-of water supply from the mountains. Just as we decided that the finest drink in the world would be sparkling water from the reservoir of Hetch-Hetchy Valley, John Muir, naturalist, and William Keith, artist, propose to thwart us by forcing us to drink Spring Valley or whisky. The two men are afraid that the intrinsic beauty of Hetch-Hetchy would be destroyed by waterworks construction, dams and other things, and they will fight the plan in Washington. Most of us who are not artists or naturalists, but lovers of pure water, think that Muir could study nature as well near a dam site as not, and that Keith could paint a lake as well as a valley.

PLUTO.

A New Industry.

Small, but like Los Angeles, it's growing. The Comfort Spring Bed Co. are manufacturing a patent bed spring, which has merit. We have been in the furniture and spring bed business for 20 years, and know a good thing when we see it. So confident are we of its durability, being made of extra tempered steel wire and an extra good frame, that we give a guarantee with every spring which is pasted on all our frames, not to sag or hammock, so a light person is not inclined to roll toward a heavy person. If the springs are not found as represented your money will be refunded. So far we have been obliged to look for business in outside towns to sell our output, and have had some very encouraging letters and recommendations with liberal orders. Now we know we have got a good article and we want a share of Los Angeles business and we want the public to ask the furniture dealers to show you our line of springs and compare with other makes of same price, and let you be the judge which is the best for the money.

Clothes-Satisfact
By A. Frank Taylor
ONE quality alone in a product doesn't constitute Satisfaction.
For instance, a stout pair of hobnailed boots may wear—but they lack both Style and Fit—
And a Suit of Clothes may also wear but be absolutely lacking in Style, Shape and Fit—
80 per cent of all Suits and Overcoats are not Satisfactory Clothes.
For while this 80 per cent of Suits or Overcoats may Wear—the Style, Shape and Fit in them is only temporarily doped into them by Old Doctor Goose.
After such Garments have been worn a while the Style—Shape and Fit have disappeared—
The Lapels of the coat have become bulging—the Collar sagging at the back—the Shoulders broken—
If you want a Garment that does something more than merely wear—
One that retains its Shape, Fit and Style qualities as long as it retains its Wear quality—one that makes you look a well dressed man—you must obtain one of the rarer S Variety.

STATE'S PURE FOOD LAW TO BITE JANUARY FIRST.

Careful Presentation of Many Fine Points of Statute from Office of District Attorney. Don't Be Caught Napping.

FROM the office of the District Attorney of Los Angeles county comes the following exposition of the new State pure food law, its scope, its salient points, its specific provisions and its traps for the unwary. The law will go into effect January 1. Meanwhile every grocer, every druggist, every liquor dealer, every manufacturer and every buyer should become familiar with its requirements.

This explanation was compiled by Deputy District Attorney H. S. G. McCartney, who is a member of the State Senate and was active in the preparation and promotion of the law.

The passage of the California food and drug acts, March 11, 1907, marked an epoch in the struggle in this State for pure foods and drugs, and undoubtedly will work a great reformation in industries connected with the production of foods and medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations.

While the statutes of California have contained laws relative to pure foods and drugs for many years, they have never heretofore been enforcible, so to speak, for the reason that there was no machinery provided for their proper enforcement. The passage of these acts by the last Legislature was not secured without a hard struggle, much study and perseverance—not that the legitimate manufacturers of foodstuffs and drugs were opposed to such laws, but because the passage of such a law without a proper understanding of the manufacture and sale of foodstuffs and drugs might have worked a great injury to innocent parties. Therefore, it was necessary to spend much time in investigation to glean knowledge of the situation by consultation with many manufactures and dealers of both foods and drugs.

Much credit is due not only to manufacturers and dealers in foods and drugs, but to W. I. Foley, attorney for the State Board of Health, and its secretary, Dr. N. K. Foster, who lent valuable aid and assistance in the preparation of the acts under discussion.

Although the laws do not become fully operative until January 1 next, their effect was noticeable soon after the passage of the acts. And the great majority of the manufacturers and dealers have shown that they are anxious to comply with the law, and have hastened to make the necessary changes in their products and labels. It is apparent that as far as most of the reputable manufacturers and dealers are concerned, the law will be largely self-operative. Careful inspection and prompt prosecutions, of course, will be necessary in order to protect the legitimate manufacturer and dealer from unfair competition with such dealers and manufacturers as might, by misbranding or other violations of the law, attempt to undersell the honest merchant. I believe, however, that the machinery provided in the law will be ample to carry out its purpose and intent.

The bill provides for a State laboratory, and Prof. Jaffa of the State University has already been appointed director and chief analyst of foods and drugs. It is the duty of the District Attorney of every county to prosecute violations of the law, and every Sheriff and health officer is made an agent of the State Board of Health to detect violations of the law and assist in its enforcement.

The State pure food and drug law being identical with the national law of June 30, 1906, obviates the confusion and misunderstanding that would follow were they not identical. The manufacturers and dealers may readily familiarize themselves with what is required by the State law by studying the national pure-food regulations already in circulation and distributed.

Recently, by instructions of the District Attorney, I issued the following regulations governing the manufacture of food, which are identical with national pure-food regulations:

DRUGS, CHEMICALS AND PRESERVATIVES IN FOODS.

The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, is specifically prohibited by this act. The use in food for any purpose of any mineral dye or any coal tar dye, except those coal tar dyes hereinafter mentioned, will be grounds for prosecution. The list allowed is as follows:

107 Amaranth.
56 Ponceau 3 R.
517 Erythrosin.
85 Orange 1.
4 Napthol Yellow S.
435 Light Green S. F. Yellowish.
692 Indigo disulfoacid.

These coal-tar dyes must be prepared specifically for use in foods, and must bear a guaranty from the manufacturer that they are free from subsidiary products and represent the actual substance the name of which they bear, and shall be free from any coloring matter other than the one specified, and shall not contain any contamination due to imperfect or improper or incomplete manufacture.

The use of mineral dye or any coal-tar dye in coloring macaroni, vermicelli, spaghetti and other cuts of paste, is prohibited; under regulation 21, section 8, paragraphs "e" and "f:" "A color or flavor cannot be employed to imitate any natural product or any other product of recognized name and quality.

"The term 'imitation' applies to any mixture or compound which is a counterfeit or fraudulent simulation of any article of food or drug."

GENERAL RULES.

The use of paraffine in food products is forbidden.

Mineral substances of all kinds are specially forbidden in confectionery, whether they be poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors shall be added to confectionery.

Artificial colors (that are allowed) should be stated or declared whenever present in flavoring extracts or confectionery.

Articles of food in the preparation of which such substitutes are employed should not be labeled as if they were prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves. For instance, a preparation intended to imitate vanilla extract should be designated by its true name, as "Imitation Vanilla Extract," or "Imatation Vanilla Flavor," and ice cream flavored with imitation strawberry flavor should not be designated as "Strawberry Ice Cream," but as "Imitation Strawberry Flavored Ice Cream," etc.

A food product must not, under the law, be mixed with any other substance for the purpose of concealing damage or inferiority.

A vegetable which is not naturally sweet cannot be sold as one which is naturally sweet by mixing with sugar or sucrose without violating the law, unless the addition of sugar is plainly indicated on the label; however, in cases where no deception is intended or practiced, the mention of the presence of a sugar substance is not required.

All chemical dyes and preservative substances, such as boracic acid and borax, salicylic acid and its salts, benzoic acid and its salts, sulphurous acid and its salts, and formaldehyde, are prohibited under the law in food and food products, on the ground that they are poisonous and deleterious to health, provided, that sodium benzoate in limited quantities, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent. may be used in preservatives for the present.

LIQUORS.

The term "blend" or "mixed" as applied to articles of liquor in the pure food law means the blending or mixing of liquors with like substances, but they must be actually identical; that is to say, whisky with whisky and wine with wine, etc., "so as not to injuriously reduce or injuriously lower, or injuriously affect its quality, purity or strength." And such blending or mixing should be so stated and declared upon the label, as for instance, straight whisky will be labeled as such—a mixture of two or more straight wines will be labeled "Blended Wine," or "Blended Wines," etc.

A mixture of straight whisky and ethyl alcohol, provided there is a sufficient amount of straight whisky to make it genuinely a "mixture," will be labeled as "Compound of," or "Compound with, pure grain distillate."

Imitation liquors, within the meaning of this act, must be labeled as such.

If any substance (allowed by this act) is mixed with coffee, tea or any spice, it must be so stated so as not to deceive the purchaser. As, for instance, in case of a cereal preparation sold for or used as a substitute for coffee, it must not be termed "cereal coffee," as it is held that, since the product mentioned is not a coffee it cannot properly be called coffee, or if cereals are mixed with the coffee it cannot be termed "coffee," or "cereal coffee," but either product must be designated "Imitation Coffee," etc.

WHAT IS FOOD?

The term "food" as used in this act shall include all articles used for food, drink, liquor, confectionery or condiment by man or other animals, whether simple, mixed or compound.

Food shall be deemed adulterated in its manufacture, within the meaning of this act, in any of the following cases:

(1.) If any substance has been mixed or packed or mixed and packed with the food so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality, purity, strength or food value.

(2.) If any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article of food.

(3.) If any essential or any valuable constituent or ingredient of the article of food has been wholly or in part abstracted.

(4.) If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained in any manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

(5.) If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient.

(6.) If it consists in whole or in part, of a filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal or vegetable unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal, or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter; provided that an article of liquor shall not be deemed adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded if it be blended or mixed with like substances, so as not to injuriously reduce, lower or affect its quality, purity or strength.

(7.) In case of confectionery: If it contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substances, or poisonous color or flavor, or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health, or any vinous, malt or spirituous liquor or compound or narcotic drug.

No substance may be mixed or packed with a food product which will reduce or lower its quality or strength. Not excluded under this provision are substances properly used in the preparation of food products for clarification or refining, and eliminated in the further process of manufacture.

Only harmless colors may be used in food products. The term "blend" applies to a mixture of like or identical substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients used for the purpose of coloring and flavoring only.

SUBSTITUTION.

A color or flavor cannot be used or employed to imitate any natural product of recognized name or quality.

When a substance of a recognized quality commonly used in the preparation of a food product is replaced by another substance not injurious or deleterious to health, the name of the substituted substance must be stated on the label.

When any substance which does not reduce, lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength, is added to a food product other than that necessary to its manufacture or refining, the label shall bear a statement to that effect.

When an article is made up of refuse materials, fragments or trimmings, the use of the name of the substance from which they are derived, unless accompanied by a statement to that effect, shall be deemed in violation of this act. Packages of such materials may be labeled "pieces," "trimmings," or some similar appellation.

The terms "mixtures" and "compounds" are interchangeable, and indicate the results of putting together two or more food products.

These mixtures or compounds shall not be imitations of other articles, whether simple, mixed or compound, or offered for sale under the name of other articles. They shall bear a distinctive name and the name of the place where the mixture or compound has been manufactured or produced.

A mixture or compound shall be deemed misbranded if the label be incomplete as to the names of the required ingredients. A simple product does not require any further statement than the name, or distinctive name thereof.

LABELING AND BRANDING FOODS

The law provides under this head:

That the term "misbranded" as used herein shall apply to all articles of food, or articles which enter into the composition of food, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such article, or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to any food product which is falsely branded as to the county, city and county, city, town, State, Territory, District of Columbia or foreign country in which it is manufactured, or produced.

Food and liquor shall be deemed mislabeled or misbranded within the meaning of this act in any of the following cases:

First. If it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article of food.

Second. If it be labeled or branded or colored so as to deceive or mislead, or tend to mislead the purchaser, or if it be falsely labeled in any respect, or if it purport to be a foreign product, tend to mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents shall have been placed in such package.

Third. If in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

Fourth. If the package containing it or its label shall bear any statement, design or device regarding the ingredients or the substance contained therein, which statement, design, or device shall be false or misleading in any particular.

Fifth. When any package bears the name of the manufacturers, jobbers or sellers, or the grade or class of the product, it must bear the name of the real manufacturers, jobbers or sellers, and the true grade or class of the product, the same to be expressed in clear and distinct English words in legible type, provided, that an article of food shall not be deemed misbranded, if it be a well-known food product of a nature, quality and appearance, and so exposed to public inspection as not to deceive or mislead nor tend to deceive or mislead a purchaser, and not misbranded and not of the character included within the definitions 1 to 4 of this section.

The possession of any adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded article of food or liquor by any manufacturer, producer, jobber, packer or dealer in food, or broker, commission merchant, agent, employee or servant of any such manufacturer, producer, jobber, packer or dealer, shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of this act.

AS TO DRUGS.

That the term "drug" as used in this act, shall include all medicines and preparations recognized in the United States Pharmacopeia or National Formulary for internal or external use, and any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease of either man or other animals.

The standard of purity of drugs shall be the United States Pharmacopeia and National Formulary, and the regulations and definitions adopted for the enforcement of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, shall be adopted by the State Board of Health for the enforcement of this act.

Drugs shall be deemed adulterated within the meaning of this act in any of the following cases:

First. If, when a drug is sold under or by a name recognized in the United States Pharmacopeia or National Formulary, it differs from the standard of strength, quality or purity, as determined by the test laid down in the United States Pharmacopeia or National Formulary official at the time of investigation; provided, that no drug defined in the United States Pharmacopeia or National Formulary shall be deemed to be adulterated under this provision if the standard of strength, quality or purity be plainly stated upon the package thereof, although the standard may differ from that determined by the test laid down in the United States Pharmacopeia or National Formulary.

Second. If the strength or purity fall below the professed standard or quality under which it is sold.

That the term "misbranded" as used herein shall apply to all drugs, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design or device, regarding such article or the ingredients or substances contained therein which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to any drug which is falsely branded or labeled as to the county, city and county, city, town, State, Territory, District of Columbia or foreign country in which it is manufactured or produced.

Drugs shall be deemed mislabeled or misbranded under the meaning of this act in either of the following cases:

First. If it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article.

Second. If the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed, in whole or in part, and other contents shall have been placed in such package, or if the package as offered for sale at retail or wholesale, fail to bear a statement on the label of the per cent. of volume of alcohol, or the quantity of any morphine, opium, cocaine, herein, alpha or beta eucaine, chloroform, cannabis indica, chloral hydrate, acetanilide, or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein, except when prescribed by a licensed physician, licensed dentist, or licensed veterinary surgeon.

The term "package" as used in this act shall be construed to include any phial, bottle, jar, demijohn, carton, bag, case, can, box or barrel or any receptacle, vessel or container of whatsoever material or nature which may be used by a manufacturer, producer, jobber, packer or dealer, for inclosing any drug.

The percentage of volume of alcohol present in drug products shall be set forth on the label, and the quantity of any morphine, opium or cocaine, etc., as provided in the act, used in manufacturing other preparations, should be stated on the label.

In no case can a preparation be named after an ingredient or drug which is not present. The word "compound" should not be used in connection with a name which in itself or together with representations or designs accompanying the same would be construed as a form of misbranding under the act. But if a mixture of drugs is named after one or more, but not all of the active medicinal constituents (not vehicle) present in a preparation, "compound" can be used in connection with the name, provided the active constituent after which the product is named is present in an amount at least equal to that of any other active medicinal agent present. The amount of ingredients present (excepting alcohol, which should be stated in per cent.) shall be given in grains or minims, and if it is desired, the metric equivalent may be given in addition.

The act does not require the formula of drug products to be given on the label, but requires only that the quantity or proportion of ingredients enumerated in the law and derivatives and preparations of the same, shall be clearly set forth on the label or labels of all preparations used for the treatment or prevention of disease either internal or external, for man or other animals. This includes sample packages as well as regular trade packages. All drug products and their labels must conform to the act, whether the formula is or is not given on the label.

It is prohibited to sell or offer for sale a food or drug product bearing no label upon the package or no descriptive matter whatever connected with it, either by design, device or otherwise, if said product be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article.

In conformity with the National Pure Food Law, Section 22 of the act provides as follows:

"Section 22. No dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act, when he can establish a guaranty signed by the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer or other party residing in the United States from whom he purchased such article to the effect, that the same is not adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded within the meaning of this act, designating it. Said guaranty to afford protection, must contain the name and address of the party or parties making the sales of such article to said dealer, and an itemized statement showing the articles purchased; or a general guaranty may be filed with the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture by the manufacturer, wholesaler, jobber or other party in the United States and be given a serial number, which number shall appear on each and every package of goods sold under such guaranty with the words 'Guaranteed under the food and drugs act, June 30, 1906.' In case the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer or other party making such guaranty to said dealer resides without this State, and it appears from the certificate of the director of the State Laboratory that such article or articles were adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded, within the meaning of this act, or the National Pure Food Act, approved June 30, 1906, the District Attorney must forthwith notify the Attorney-General of the United States of such violation."

A guaranty of the manufacturer under the national law will not avail him under the State law. Every wholesaler, jobber or manufacturer in California who sells his products in California, is advised to prepare something after the style of the following affidavit and forward the same to Dr. N. K. Foster, secretary of the State Board of Health, and obtain a serial number for his product:

"State of California, County of Los Angeles, ss.:

"I (we) the undersigned, do hereby guarantee that the articles of foods (or drugs as the case may be) manufactured, packed, distributed or sold by me (us) (specifying the same as fully as possible) are not manufactured, adulterated or misbranded contrary to the State pure food (or drug) act of March 11, 1907.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this ...... day of .... 1907."

(Write here name and place of business of wholesaler, manufacturer, dealer, jobber, or other party.)

The law intends that the dealer shall not be prosecuted if he shall establish a guaranty signed by the person from whom he bought the food or drugs. Hence all retail dealers in food and drug products will, after the first of the year, in order to escape prosecution under the law in case food or drugs are found in their hands manufactured, branded or labeled contrary to the law, demand from the manufacturer a guaranty that the product purchased by him is manufactured in accordance with the State pure food or drug act, as the case may be.

Consumers of food products and purchasers of drugs manufactured in California will understand that after January 1, 1908, any article of food or drug they purchase, if not guaranteed under the State pure food or drug act, they purchase at their own risk as to purity.

COAST INDUSTRIES.

Good Money for Wheat.

THREE steamers have departed from Tacoma, Wash., the past week, and left behind them $800,000 for grain with which they were loaded. The three ships carried away 637,647 bushels of this year's crop of Washington wheat, valued at $618,097—a sum which indicates anything but hard times for the farmer and people of the State. Leading grain exporters of Tacoma estimate that there will be 100 wheat ships dispatched from Tacoma this season.

Olives in San Diego County.

According to C. M. Gifford of San Diego, the year's crop of olives, locally, will rival any previous crop raised in Southern California for several years.

This year the quality as well as the quantity of olives seem to be the best that nature, assisted by man, could produce and the olive growers are expecting to fill two hundred pickling vats once every two weeks at the olive works.

This will require an aggregate of over 15,000 gallons of olives every two weeks, now easily in sight, according to Mr. Gifford, who is considered authority on the olive situation in that section of the State.

The Gifford olive works will employ over twenty-five persons during the season and expect to put out 10,000 cases of olives, each case containing two dozen quarts and 8000 gallons of olive oil.

Great Lumber Output.

Four hundred sawmills, operating in the Spokane country, will cut this year, according to advices to hand, from 1,250,000,0000 to 1,300,000,000 feet of lumber, having a commercial value of $17,000,000, and it is estimated that from 42 to 45 per cent. of the manufactured product will be marketed in local territory. The lumber is chiefly white, western and red pines and larch, with a sprinkling of other woods. These mills and camps give employment to no less than 35,000 men at wages averaging $3.50 a day.

The lumber products are shipped by rail to various parts of the United States, some going to the Atlantic seaboard, while the bulk is delivered to the Central Northern States. The heaviest shipments are to the territory west of the Missouri River, but a fair percentage of the higher grades of lumber is sent to the Eastern States. To transport this yearly output requires the use of more than 60,000 cars, or 3000 trains of twenty cars each, or a single train reaching more than 400 miles.

The recent great fire at Hakodate, Japan, cost $5,000,000, with $2,000,000 insurance.

FIELD CAPTAIN.

SCOUTS FOR PRESIDENT.

Hitchcock Looks After Administration's Politics.

Active Commander of United States Service.

Plain Birds Lured Him Into Public Life.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Birds, ordinary birds with feathers on them, lured Frank Harris Hitchcock into the public service. Lured is the right word.

Frank H. Hitchcock,
Assistant Postmaster General.

Just now Mr. Hitchcock is the chief assistant of the Postmaster-General, besides being the confidential and roving ambassador and captain of scouts to the political end of the administration. Next year his tracks, openly bold or stealthy, will be seen in much of the vital news bearing on the nomination and election of a President.

But Hitchcock would be a coming man anywhere and no reasonable prophecy would be inconsistent with his possibilities. The homely virtues and qualifications needful to success are his—talent, eagerness, and education. To these should be added patience and a buoyant spirit.

There is a liniment compounded in Washington, which is freely rubbed on the lame and hesitating confidence of the public at certain inclement and rheumatic seasons of each administration. It is an old and standard remedy, and is thought to be gently and pleasantly efficacious in all parts of the country. However, the people of this city only grin and wink at one another whenever it is rubbed on them. They know the formula, which reads something like this:

"Secretary So and So, as usual, is heels over head in business. The first man to reach his office in the morning, he toils steadily all day and far into the night. Indeed, his avidity for hard and sustained effort is so great that huge bales of papers are sent to his home, so that he can scan them through, annotate and classify them, while dressing, shaving, and eating his hurry-skurry breakfast, which usually consists of eggs and toast or plain bread and milk," etc.

Nevertheless, Hitchcock works. He really does. "How many vacations do you take?" I asked.

The effacement of self is said to be one of the signs of both modesty and genius. There is where Hitchcock is sound and strong. "I hustle," might be on his banner, if he had one, "and say as little as I can about it." So he is captain of the scouts. Furthermore, spread over the country are 200,000 postmasters, letter carriers, and clerks. All of them are his friends. Many are his partisans. He has adjusted their salaries, abolished their fines, and opened to them promotions and good markings. His captaincy, then, means something.

RATHER LISTEN THAN TALK.

"Why," and the answer to the question was another revealing torch to his character, "didn't you follow in the footsteps of your father and become a clergyman?"

"Well, my disposition from the first was to listen and let the other fellow talk. My father's life was always comfortable and he was happy in his work. I had no prejudice, therefore, against his calling, but never thought of taking it up myself."

"Not long ago you made a tour of the South and later traveled some in the West. It was stated that your business was largely political?"

"So it was, in a sense. I am an earnest and active Republican, but at the same time I think I am conscientious in my humble efforts to improve the public service, especially where it directly touches the people. With me, and I say it in modesty, public business comes first. Nevertheless, I remember all the while that the man who is useful to his country, likewise serves his party by fortifying it in popular esteem and lengthening its days of power and influence. Consequently, whatever any one in office may do to hasten the delivery of mails, let us say, or to improve the postal service in a certain region, can, in the very nature of things, be as-

TAFT BRANCHES WAVING HERE.

DESCENDANT OF FAMILY TREE LIVING IN SAWTELLE.

Pioneer of the Town Which Has Grown up by the Soldiers' Home is from the Same Stock from Which Came the Present Secretary of War and of Peace.

At Sawtelle, beneath his own vine and fig tree, dwells Rev. S. H. Taft. And both the vine, which is of grape, and the fig tree are of his own propagation. Incidentally, the Sawtelle pioneer and the present Secretary of War are descended from the same stock.

The Taft Family Tree, and Rev. S. H. Taft of Sawtelle, one of its branches.

Rev. Mr. Taft prizes among his possessions a large sized copy of the Taft family tree, and a glance at the multifarious branches of this tree is clearly indicative that race suicide is farthest from the thoughts of the male members of that old and honored family. A review of the Taft genealogy shows that to one son there were born nineteen children, to another twenty-two, while to a third there were thirty. Descended from the first member who crossed the water from England more than 220 years ago are Secretary of War Taft, and Rev. S. H. Taft of Sawtelle.

Robert Taft, the founder of the Taft family in America, came to this country between 1670 and 1680 and, purchasing a large tract of land from the Indians, settled near where Uxbridge, Mass., now stands. On August 12, 1874, there was a reunion of the members of the Taft family in America. This was held at Uxbridge and, seated in the large tent at the dinner given on that occasion, were more than 1500 Tafts. Among the number was Mr. Taft of Sawtelle, who at that time secured a copy of the Taft family tree.

According to this tree, Secretary of War Taft is descended from the first Robert Taft's second son, Robert. His lineage may be traced from that point on the tree where a white cross has been graven on the limb.

Rev. Mr. Taft of Sawtelle is descended from Benjamin, the fifth son of the original Robert, and the California branch of the Taft family tree is readily carried out from a point on the fifth, or uppermost limb, as indicated by a black square. Frederick H. Taft of Santa Monica is a son of Rev. S. H. Taft, and Robert the first was the great great great great great grandfather of both Frederick and Gen. William H. Taft. How far removed these two may be as cousins is a problem with which the students of family trees may struggle to their hearts' content.

On the occasion of the family reunion held thirty-three years ago, in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the landing in America of Robert Taft, the address of the day was delivered by Judge Alfonzo Taft of Cincinnati, father of the present Secretary of War and Peace, and himself occupying the same post in the Cabinet of President Grant.

How narrowly Judge Taft escaped the Presidency has never been accurately figured out, but when he was candidate for Governor of Ohio he was defeated by a margin of one vote by Rutherford B. Hayes, who became Governor and stepped from the capital at Columbus to the larger one in Washington City.

A Brilliant Southern Woman.

Among the brilliant women of the South high rank is given to Mrs. M. E. Henry-Ruffin of Mobile, Ala., who has received from St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, Md., the degree of doctor of literature, being the latest one of her sex to whom any institution of learning has paid that honor. Mrs. Ruffin is the daughter of the late Thomas Henry, a banker of Mobile, and the widow of Frank G. Ruffin of Richmond, Va. Since her husband's death she has led a most retired life; but in spite of this fact, the recognition of her scholarship in many languages and literatures is general throughout the South. When her latest work, "The North Star," appeared it received unanimous praise for its depth of research and beauty of diction, and won for the writer a letter from King Haakon and Queen Maud of Norway, commending the book for its splendid pictures of the early Norsemen. The great library of Paris, the Bibliothèque Nationale, has placed Mrs. Ruffin's picture among those of writers of eminent distinction throughout the world. Her story in verse, "John Gildart," which came out about seven years ago, was highly praised by the critics, who compared it to the work of several great poets. Some reviewers even called this poem "the American epic." Mrs. Ruffin has six children, and in spite of her absorbing literary activities, she 's a devoted mother and a capable homemaker.

SCOUTS FOR PRESIDENT.

cused, and properly, of working for his party. That is exactly the kind of politician I should like to be.

"I do not hesitate to admit that I have always been a party man. While a student at college I went into the wards of Boston, where I helped to canvass the precincts and get the voters to the polls. I was chosen to be a delegate to conventions, and on such happy occasions took a lively interest in all that occurred."

"Is politics a proper pursuit for a gentleman?"

NEED OF MORE GENTLEMEN.

"I think so, certainly. The more gentlemen we have in politics the better. Inherently, work of a public nature is not bad for those who do it, nor for those for whom it is done. It appears to me to be both honorable and needful. In their effort and value to the world, I should name c[illegible]men first, then physicians, and after them politicians, as you would doubtless call them. I assure you there are a good many gentlemen in politics, and more are getting in all the time."

To quickly develop his story, I said: "You were born in Ohio?"

"At Amherst, a little sandstone town in the north end of the State. My family moved to the West, however, while I was an infant, and until I was ten years old lived in Wisconsin, my father's last charge being in Milwaukee. We then went to Boston, where I grew up, and was prepared for entrance to Harvard."

"Who paid your bills at college?"

"My father."

"Why did you become a government clerk?"

"I had expected to attend the law school at Harvard, but came here, temporarily, as I thought, to be chief clerk to the man who was superintending the construction of the new postoffice building. I wanted to observe the process of government and to make a little money. From my earliest boyhoodI had loved to study birds and animals. A rich man near my home in Boston had a large estate on which there was an aviary, and I spent much time in the woods and country trapping birds for him and my own collection. I went college with the law in view, but took all the biology I could, simply as a personal matter.

"Shortly after coming to Washington I heard that men were wanted by the Bureau of Biological Survey, in the Agricultural Department. I attempted the examination merely to see what it was like and to test my knowledge of a subject that had always been very attractive to me. Only a few candidates appeared, and, to my astonishment, I was one of those who passed the examination. A week or two later I was notified of my appointment. I didn't want to confess that I had taken the examination as an experiment, and that the whole affair, so far as I was concerned, was a biological frolic. I was in an unpleasant position, don't you see. In my opinion, it was a serious matter for a young man to trifle with the government. So I gave up the job I had and went to the Agricultural Department."

"And abandoned further thought of law?"

STUDIED LAW AT NIGHT.

"Oh, no; but I put it off. My new work satisfied me and so did my surroundings. I made the acquaintance of Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court, told him what I meant to do, and he invited me to attend one of his lectures on constitutional law at George Washington University. I heard him, and that led me to study law in this city, going to classes in the evening and paying my own way as I went along.

"I was still delighted with biology, and took up the seals in Alaska, much to my advantage later in another department. But more biology would do me no good as a lawyer, and I asked Secretary Wilson for something else. Presently I was sent to the division of foreign markets, which was precisely what I wanted, and, good fortune following me, I was eventually put in charge of the work. Now, biology is largely a matter of observation. You go to the fields and forests to study animals and birds, and thus train your eyes and ears, as well as your mental perceptions. I have long since abandoned birds—I have been rather busy with other things—but as I walk home at night I listen for their notes in the air, whereas you, perhaps, do not hear them.

"Without thinking about it one way or the other, I carried by biological methods of study into the subject of foreign markets. I visited our seaports and saw ships loaded with grain for Europe and learned how cotton was handled on the wharves. Then I went inland to the farms, and followed wagons of wheat and corn through mud to the hubs to the primary markets, or nearest towns. I concluded that America in its competition with other agricultural countries must improve the conditions and lessen the expense of wagon transportation. I am not an orator, but I talk about good roads whenever I can.

"I also went to Europe, and watched our cargoes as they were received and unloaded. American grain on the way to foreign markets is not uniformly inspected in this country. It ought to be. The grading of a shipload of corn at Newport News, in Virginia, for example, may be wholly unlike the grading of a cargo at Galveston, Tex. Abroad these conditions were misunderstood, and there was dissatisfaction. I explained the situation as well as I could, and tried to get information that would be helpful to our own people.

WILSON GAVE HIM HIS CHANCE.

"Now, Secretary Wilson, bear in mind, gave me the chance to do things in my own way. That is his practice toward all of his men. Specialists are sent over the world to investigate and learn new methods, and to search for seeds and plants which will improve the state of the American farmer. So there is much enthusiasm in the Agricultural Department and a great deal of original and useful work. I have deep affection for Secretary Wilson."

"By this time, I suppose, you were in the government to stay?"

"No; I was specializing, as I thought—getting knowledge of a peculiar kind for the law business I expected to build up in the future. I had met George B. Cortelyou while he and I were students at the law school, but the acquaintance had not been intimate. When he was taken into the Cabinet and put at the head of the newly-created Department of Commerce and Labor he asked me to be his chief clerk. I like to organize work, and, therefore, took the place. Then the campaign of 1904 came on. Mr. Cortelyou quit the Cabinet to be chairman of the Republican National Committee, and at his request I went with him to New York.

"I resigned my place in the government, removed myself, in short, from the classified service, and said farewell to public office. I would help Mr. Cortelyou. If the Democrats elected Mr. Bryan I would practice law; if they didn't I would take my chances with the new Republican administration. There is a fascination about public life, which I shall not attempt to analyze. Mr. Cortelyou, as Postmaster-General, invited me to be his First Assistant. I returned to Washington to round out my career, don't you know, and am still engaged in that pursuit."

"After your experience would you advise a younger brother to enter the service of the government?"

"As a career?"

"Yes."

PERMANENT OFFICE HOLDING.

"That is a hard question to answer. Besides, I haven't a younger brother. Let me reply to your inquiry in this way: If I were the father of two sons I would be willing to give John to the government, but I would send William somewhere else. Under present conditions there is a bar to the man who reaches a certain place in the public service. The higher positions, which are political, are not open to the clerk in the ranks. Members of the Cabinet and their assistants come from the outside and go when there is a change in the administration. In England, on the contrary, every man in the government has an opportunity to reach the ministry or to become an under secretary."

"Do you think there ought to be a permanent office-holding class in the United States?"

"I believe in doing public business with the same care, economy, and organization that are necessary and usual in private business. Permanency of tenure, or the keeping of trained men in their places, is essential for efficient work in the government and out of it. You might say there is a permanent office-holding class on a great railway or in a large manufacturing establishment. But is it dangerous to either enterprise? Assuredly not. A railroad could not be operated if everybody was periodically turned out of his place. Retaining men in governmental service undoubtedly establishes a professional office-holding class, but you must remember that it is in no way monopolistic. There are entrances and exits.

"While a Cabinet officer can dismiss an incompetent employé, transfer him, or reduce his pay, he cannot appoint another man when there is a vacancy in his department. It is impossible, in other words, to remove John Smith in order to make room for William Brown. It is true that Smith can be put into the street, but the only way for Brown to get his place is to pass a civil service examination, go upon the eligible list, and take his chances with a hundred or a thousand other aspirants who have qualified themselves as he has done. The public interest, you see, is thoroughly safeguarded against 'pernicious activity,' and good men are in no danger of losing their employment. But there ought to be further legislation. In my opinion, a small percentage of every officeholder's salary should be put into a fund as a pension for his old age. If that were done, incapacitated clerks and others could be retired from service, promotion would thus be opened to the younger men, and something safe and definite would be assured to all of them."

A TRIBUTE TO THE SERVICE.

"Notwithstanding laws, executive orders and public opinion, can't the office-holding class of the government be secretly and effectively employed in politics?"

"I don't see how that can be done. Persons in the classified service—and they belong to all political parties—are neither required nor expected to work in politics and they are fully informed as to their rights."

"Which place in the public service have you liked the best?"

"I can't say. I have liked them all, and each has seemed to be the best at the time I had it. Biology was fine, as I have said; so were foreign markets. I entered the Department of Commerce and Labor in some personal doubt. Secretary Wilson cautioned me to be prudent, to consider the matter very carefully. Again I was satisfied. I had all I could do, and every day was too short for the matters in hand, but the pleasure in helping to put a new kind of business in motion was great. I also liked the politics of a national campaign and the atmosphere and personality of the men who came from all parts of the United States. But nothing is more stimulating than the postoffice. Think of the mighty stream of mail, into which flows swift rivers, as in cities, and little brooks, as in villages, and then of the thousands of splendid fellows throughout the United States who keep the channels open day and night. Why, if the men of the department didn't work like heroes, regardless of hours and circumstances, there would be a flood that would paralyze all business and cause tremendous loss."

Except the President, Mr. Hitchcock sees more strange men on business than does any government officer in Washington. He broke six engagements before he found time to talk with me, and then I had to meet him at 10 o'clock in the night. He really works.

BIG CAN CONTRACT.

The can contract made by the California Fruit Canners' Association for five years with the American Can Company expires with December 31 of this year. This contract is one of large proportions, involving 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 cans a year, and figuring in money somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 a year, or a little over. A report has it that the California Fruit Canners' Association is looking into the matter of manufacturing its own cans independently, but it has, however, asked for bids from a number of can makers in the matter of a new contract. Pending the completion of negotiations, very little information is, naturally, available of an authentic character.

OLIVE FACTORY AT REDLANDS.

J. C. Kubias has begun the erection at Redlands of a large olive oil factory and canning plant. He will put in new machinery and increase the output of his factory to 10,000 gallons of olive oil and 100,000 gallons of pickled olives. He says that the crop in that section, which is handled almost exclusively by him, will be larger than last year, when it was considered heavy. Prices will be the best in several years.

READING.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

There are four classes of readers. Those of the first are like the hourglass, and their reading, being on the sand, it runs in and runs out, and leaves no vestige behind; a second is like a sponge, which imbibes everything, and returns it in the same state, only a little dirtier; a third is like a jelly-bag, allowing all that is pure to pass away, and retaining only the refuse and dregs; the fourth is like the slaves in the diamond mines of Golconda, who, casting aside all that is worthless, obtain only pure gems.

One's reading is, usually, a fair index of his character. The temptation of reading is usually strongest at the period when the education of the schoolroom is about closing. If the mind be now awakened to a manly independence, and starts on a course of vigorous self-culture, all will be well. But if, on the other hand, it sinks into a state of inaction, indifferent to its own needs and to all the high ends and aims of life, then woe to the man. For few, very few, ever arouse themselves in mid-life to a new intellectual taste, and to an untried application of their time and powers to that culture for which the Creator formed and endowed them.

The advice in regard to reading only the best selected works leads me to say, read slowly. We sometimes rush over pages of valuable matter, because, at a glance, they seem to be dull, and we leap along to see how the story, if it be a story, is to end. We do everything in this age in a hurry; we demand not only fast horses, but fast writers, fast preachers and fast lecturers. Said a noted preacher in one of our large cities: "I work in a hurry; I sleep in a hurry, and if I die, I expect to die in a hurry." This is the history of much of the present reading.

No one can too highly appreciate the magic power of the press, or too deeply deprecate its abuses. Newspapers have become the great highway of that intelligence which exerts a controlling power over our nation, catering the every-day food of the mind. Show us an intelligent family of boys and girls, and we will show you a family whose newspapers and periodicals are plentiful. Nobody who has been without these private tutors can know their educating power for good or evil.

A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper. Why? Because he reads of names and things which are familiar, and he will progress accordingly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Take away the press, and the vast educating power of the school, and the college would soon come to an end. Or, look one moment at the immense influence a single writer has had upon an age, or upon the world—Shakespeare in creating the drama; or Bacon in founding different systems of philosophy.

Who may estimate the influence of Charles Dickens upon society, when, by the magic of his pen, he touched the under world of poverty and want and sin, over which the rich and the gay glided on, not knowing or thinking what was beneath their feet, and marched all this ghastly array of ragged and hungry children and sorrowful women and discouraged men, and the famished forms from the poorhouse, and the ugly visage of the criminal, into the parlors of wealth and culture, and there had them tell the story of their woes and their sufferings. Take one single writer of our own land—Harriet Beecher Stowe. The single tale of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" stirred the heart of this vast nation to its profoundest depths. At the simple movement of her pen, this vast world moves along the lines not only of thought and sentiment, but of principles and justice. W. D. COWLEY.

Prices of Chino Ranch Land and Its Possibilities

See The Exhibit of Chino Products at Our Office

You can buy good land at Chino, with water delivered in cement pipes, at $200 an acre—we give you one share of water stock with each acre of the land purchased. Other Chino lands just as good, but not under irrigation at $100 to $150 an acre. These are in the Chino Artesian Belt, where water can be had and no well was ever known to fail.

Terms on all Chino tracts are one-fourth cash, balance in one, two, three and four years at six per cent. interest.

Make your first payment on your tract, develop it intelligently—you'll find it will not only make you a good living, but the income from it will take care of all subsequent payments. Many ranchers at Chino have paid, or are paying for their land this way.

They are making big profits in Alfalfa, Sugar Beets, Potatoes, Onions, Walnuts, Apples, Oranges, Peaches, Apricots, Melons, Small Fruits and Berries, at General Truck Farming and with Eggs and Poultry.

Good home markets at Chino, at Pomona, at Ontario, or in Los Angeles for all that can be raised. And no "experimenting" to do—the man of ordinary common sense need fear no failure at Chino. MOTHERLY IS INCUBATOR.

INDUSTRY OF ARTIFICIALLY HATCHING CHICKENS.

Institution at Gardena That Turns Out Live Chickens at the Rate of Two Thousand a Week. The Woodlin Hen a Rival of the Living One.

The chicken hatchery at Gardena is probably one of the oddest of the institutions to be found in Southern California. factory, which is now in operation, has a capacity of eggs and under the motherly of M. A. Scofield, is turning out chicks at the rate of 140,000 per year. Each week more than baby chickens break through their shells and breathe the air of sunny California.

When the eggs are first sorted for incubation into the giant incubator, that show any peculiarity of size, or formation are cast aside. eggs are usually non-fertile or they do produce chicks, the birds either weak or deformed. Those that have raised bands around them, those with elongated ends, and that have rough shells are rejected. eggs and those dropped, having small rounded of calcareous matter attached to the shell, are likewise refused admission to the incubating quarters. an egg of this kind is started on the twenty-one day journey, if it hatches at all—which seldom the result is a misformed that seldom lives beyond a few One four-legged monstrosity hatched and lived several days. This chicken had but one but in all other respects the fowl the appearance of being two birds together.

the eggs are first placed in the big nest they are greeted with degrees of heat, and this during the first three days, the eggs a chance to become warmed through and regardless of shell thickness. this heat is lessened a trifle: the third day each egg is turned. This is not done through any that the movement is es- or because from time immemorial the original mother of chickens used to use her bill in re- the eggs that were in process of incubation beneath her spreading wings. The philosophy of the turning it gives the embryo chick exercise in the surrounding albumen and the chick-to-be from adhering to the shell, as it might do but for movement. Experience has demonstrated that the percentage of the is considerably less when the are not turned with regularity at all.

the eggs have been in the incubator for a week they are given a sorting. A man who is proficient in handling them can generally from the appearance or "feel" at stage in the process whether the is fertile. In case of doubt the is placed in a good light at the end of a cone of dark color. through the egg the interior of the fruit of the hen can be as distinctly as if an X-ray had applied. In a fertile egg the embryo known as the "red spider" as a small red mass resembling a spider, seemingly afloat in albumen sea. The infertile egg spider. These eggs are the or pushed eggs, and sold at 50 per cent of the demanded by fresh eggs. They rot if kept in the incubator simply dry out. At the of the second week the eggs on of the incubator are once tested. Those that show no evidence of approaching life are removed and sold as food for chickens. After the third week any eggs that fail to come up to the required standard removed and buried. Select eggs the second week's rejection are sold at cents per dozen to persons buy them as food for their little chicks. After the process of incubation has been completed the empty are carried away and roasted, being much sought after by poultry who use them as a relish for hens—and thus perpetual motion is established, the same shells in course of events returning to hatchery, surrounding a new egg, a coming prize winner at poultry show.

as the chickens break from shells that have confined them, drop between the slats of the egg and fall upon a soft cushion of straw. Here they remain for eight hours, until thoroughly when they are ready for shipment. They require no feed for three and the journey to their new is made on an empty stomach. in a box and closely huddled together the little birds are good travelers. There is straw in the bottom of the box to retain the animal while a covering of loosely woven affords ventilation. By the the journey is ended the chicks developed a hearty appetite and ready to begin life under new conditions.

EASTERN CLOCK CO.

Sixteen years ago the Eastern Clock Company started in business in a 15 x 60-foot room with the avowed intention of "staying in business." Five years later the company was reorganized and named the Eastern Outfiting Co.—and still we had no intention of "selling out." When our branch was started at 633 S. Main St., and we built an extensive warehouse at Aliso and Vignes streets, still we decided to "stay in business." A year ago today we moved to our present store—six floors, each 90x150 feet—with the intention of staying in business just as long as we were giving a dollar's worth of furniture in exchange for a dollar. And now we have no idea of going out of business. Unlike many other furniture houses in this city we are not advertising "Closing Out" and "Selling Out" sales in order to deceive you. We are here to stay! Trade with the store that will not deceive you. Take advantage of the bargains offered in this Sixteenth Anniversary Sale of ours.

No. 608

Not only does the Glenn Pool differ in natural characteristics from other oil fields, but the peculiar conditions imposed by the Federal government in its efforts to protect the Creek Indians, who own the land, have been the cause of many other distinctive features. For instance, the land is practically all leased from the Indians, and the government decreed that no well should be drilled within less than 200 feet of the division line. As each lessor desired to get as close as possible to his neighbor's oil, all the wells have been drilled on this 200-foot line. This makes the rows of wells just 400 feet apart. The oil men elected to place the locations at about the same distance in the other direction, so that the whole field presents to the eye a geometrical figure of exact lines. In other fields the wells have been drilled haphazard, wherever was deemed best.

There has been but comparativly little land speculation. If the land had been purchasable, it is probable that it would have been cut up into small parcels and sold over and over again, as has been the case in other oil fields, where rich strikes have been made. But here no land owner could sell his property, with the exception of a very few negroes, who had allotments in the field. The Indians were permitted to lease their lands, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, for a period of fifteen years, and the minors might lease their land until their majority. The assignment of a lease must have the approval of the government, and is such an intricate affair that quick transactions of the purely speculative sort are well-nigh impossible.

The most thrilling part of the romance of Glenn Pool is that is was found by such a lucky chance. If Bob Galbreath, who drilled the discovery well, the Ida Glenn No. 1, had choosen his location a hundred feet further east, the great Glenn Pool might never have been known. Certainly it would not have been found at this time. The limits of the pool have been sharply defined by the dry holes which have been sunk just outside its limits on the east, north and south. The western limit has not yet been found, but the oil sand is pinching out to the westward, and the field probably will extend but little farther in that direction. No oil has been found to the eastward of the original well, and a dry hole was the result of Galbreath's exploration in that direction.

Bob Galbreath was born in Ohio. Although Ohio is a great oil State, he knew nothing of the oil business until he came to Indian Territory in 1901, and began work in the Red Fork field, fifteen miles north of here. He had settled in Oklahoma City in 1897 and engaged in the real estate business with two partners. In the year 1901 the firm sold a $1,000,000 worth of property, and Galbreath took his share of the profits, $20,000, and came to Red Fork. He went down to what is now the Glenn Pool, and was struck with the pecularities of the geological formation. He was so sure that he could almost smell the oil. He tried to secure a lease, but the land had not yet been allotted, and the Department of the Interior would not permit any leases to be made. He went back to Red Fork and kept drilling wells, but without success. After three years he was enabled to get a lease on the property of a little Indian girl, Ida E. Glenn. But by that time Galbreath had gone broke. He couldn't get enough money to sink the first well. He went to many of his friends, but one by one they turned him down.

His faith was strong, however, and he persisted until he succeeded in getting Frank Chesley to go in with him and see it through. Chesley was a practical oil man, too, and they drilled the well together. On the morning of November 22, 1904, they found that they had drilled 1438 feet, and were far below the level of the Red Fork sands. It looked hopeless, but Galbreath gave the order to go on to 1600 feet. Within an hour Chesley had struck oil sand, and the next morning the oil shot over the top of the derrick. The well had come in for eighty barrels a day. The next well was drilled 1600 feet to the southwest, and came in for 800 barrels a day, ten times as good as the first. That was the beginning.

Now there are 850 producing wells in the pool, and many more being drilled, so that there are a thousand "rigs" on the field; "rig" being oil talk for above-ground evidence of a well, the principal feature of which is the derrick. Scattered about are 330 great steel tanks, and no end of wooden tanks. These great steel tanks hold an average of 35,000 barrels each. Each tank costs $11,000 to build, so that there are now almost $3,500,000 invested in steel tanks here. These tanks are being finished at the rate of one each day, and the new ones are being filled as rapidly as they are erected. Most of these tanks are owned by the Standard Oil Company, or some producer who will ultimately sell to the Standard. The others are owned by the two independent pipe-line companies and by individual producers. This storage of oil on a large scale is also being practiced in other Oklahoma fields.

The adult Indians who own oil lands are credited with their 10 per cent. royalty when the oil is turned over to the pipe-line companies. The money is paid over to the Indian agent at Muscogee and he, at certain intervals, pays it to the Indian. The minors' share is held by the government in trust for the little Indians. When they reach the age of 21 years they will have this money, the leases on their land will expire, and they may enter the battle of life well armed with the sinews of modern warfare.

George Ade, Hero.

"Charles Warren Fairbanks shall not be allowed to have an exclusive right to Indiana heroism," says John T. McCutcheon in Appleton's Magazine for November. "George Ade helped to save his little nephew from a watery grave in a cistern. The boy was lost and the relatives were in a frantic state of agony. They searched all around and finally decided to probe the cistern for news of the absent one. George was appointed a committee to go down and make a few submarine investigations in the cistern.

"The water was about eight feet deep and the weather was bitter cold. But George went down, and by holding his breath submerged himself and felt around with his feet along the bottom. Ever and anon he would come up gasping and in a hollow unnatural voice, such as is heard in cisterns, would issue bulletins on his progress. He was nearly frozen.

"In the meantime the boy had been found under a bed, where he had crawled and had gone to sleep. The relatives swarmed in to rejoice upon his neck. They spent an hour in felicitations. They talked so fast they telescoped their words.

"All this time a frozen hero was coming up and going down in the cistern without encouragement from the loved ones at home, until finally some one remembered, and he was rescued."

NEW YORK CITRUS MARKET.

ORANGES FROM JAMAICA IN.

FOREIGN FRUIT IS VERY GREEN AND VERY ACID.

Reported That Island Is Attempting to Obtain Tariff Concessions, Claiming That Duty of One Cent a Pound Has Virtually Ruined Trade With This Country.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. — Jamaica oranges have made their appearance in market, and are selling at about $6 per barrel, made sound. The fruit is very green and very acid, but many prefer it that way. They say it is a welcome change from the old oranges, which are generally sweet, and, in instances, rather disposed to be insipid.

Receipts so far have been relatively small, but they are increasing all the time, and promise to be of considerable importance within a week or two. There are generally liberal receipts of Jamaicas in ample time for Thanksgiving, and that means distribution not later than the middle of the month.

According to information from Jamaica, the orange crop is of fair size and of generally good quality, though no better than usual, as a whole. Some attempt is being made to cultivate some of the groves, and the influence of this effort is seen in the improvement of the fruit. Some is of larger size than ordinarily, and the skin is more pleasing, but these are the only changes so far observable.

It is reported upon good authority that Jamaica is attempting to obtain concessions in duty, pointing out that the discrimination of the 1-cent per pound tariff is sufficient so to reduce shipments to this country that the trade is virtually ruined. The tariff isn't the only difficulty, but the enforcement of the Dingley tariff seems emphasized because of the tremendous reduction in the quantity purchased in this country. Formerly 125,000 barrels were shipped here in a season. Last year not over 10,000 barrels came, and this year receipts are not likely to exceed that figure. Prices are so low that importers make nothing but a loss, and consequently refuse to undertake the business.

Undoubtedly it has been a severe loss to Jamaica. It couldn't well be otherwise, but it will be admitted by even the most ardent and enthusiastic of England's supporters that self-preservation and development are important elements of commercial supremacy, and that the American protection of the home-grown orange is perfectly legitimate. England would do the same if circumstances permitted; but commercial considerations are so widely different that Jamaica can never hope for much assistance in building up a trade in oranges with this country.

A few Jamaican oranges will always be brought to this country. They come between seasons, and for a few weeks are the only fresh oranges obtainable. After that they must compete with the early navels from California and the first shipments from Florida. They can never do this successfully. The Jamaican orange can never take the place of either, though there is something extremely refreshing about the first arrivals of Jamaicas, even though they are so sour and in some instances virtually green.

New lemons are arriving from Sicily, and are offered at auction. They are still green, but they bring higher prices than the old fruit, and some buyers will have nothing else. Green lemons are at least sound and hard, a consideration not without its attractions, after the serious difficulties which have arisen in the lemon market during the past few years.

So far offerings have been relatively small, but receipts are large enough to reduced demands for old lemons and to force the market for old fruit down. Larger cargoes are expected shortly.

As a whole, fruit is somewhat quiet, with the exception of grapes. Immense shipments of Almerias have come from Spain, and are still coming. Great quantities of Tokays and Malagas are coming from California, while Concords and Niagaras are unusually plentiful. The result is that one can buy excellent grapes for substantially what he chooses to pay.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The Western Passenger Association has decided to issue mileage books containing coupons good for the transportation of any one presenting it on any road in the association. The lines in Western Passenger Association territory are those within these boundaries: The Missouri Pacific, between Kansas City and St. Louis; the Illinois Central, between St. Louis and Chicago; the lines between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis, and thence to Sioux City and Omaha, and both banks of the Missouri River to Kansas City. The mileage books will be on the basis of 2 cents a mile, and will be good even in States where the roads may legally charge 2½ and 3 cents a mile.

President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad said in his annual report that his own stock in the company cost him 175 and upward. The market value of the stock is now around 135.

The managers of the big railroads in New York and vicinity, excepting the Pennsylvania, are western men. Among the list of the executives of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road, the president, C. S. Mellen, is from the Northern Pacific; John F. Stevens, the first vice-president, is from the Great Northern; E. H. McHenry, the second vice-president, and Mr. Mitchell, the purchasing agent, are also from the Northern Pacific. Mr. Campbell, another vice-president, is from the Oregon Short Line, and T. E. Byrnes of Minneapolis is in charge of matters in Boston.

The monthly report of the Pennsylvania Employés' relief fund east of Pittsburgh and Erie shows payments for September of $100,459.34, and make total disbursements aggregating $16,998,415.62 since 1886.

The Philippine Railway being built under Philippine government concessions has already twenty miles of track in operation. The total length of the road will be 266 miles. Contracts have recently been placed in this country for eighty box cars and fifteen passenger coaches.

The new western classification, applicable on all lines west of Chicago, and in effect since October 1, has a significant new rule which should be taken notice of by a certain class of small shippers. It appears to have been adroitly slipped in by the transportation companies and passed unwittingly by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It reads as follows:

"Where the classification provides rates for articles in tank cars, it should be understood that such rating does not carry any obligation on the part of the carrier to furnish tank cars in case the carrier does not own or has made no arrangements for supplying such equipments."

This may affect oil shipments on this Coast.

W. P. Gore, the blind nominee of the Democratic party for the United States Senate of the new State of Oklahoma, recently addressed the delegates to the farmers' congress on "Farmers and Legislation." Among other things, he favored free farming utensils.

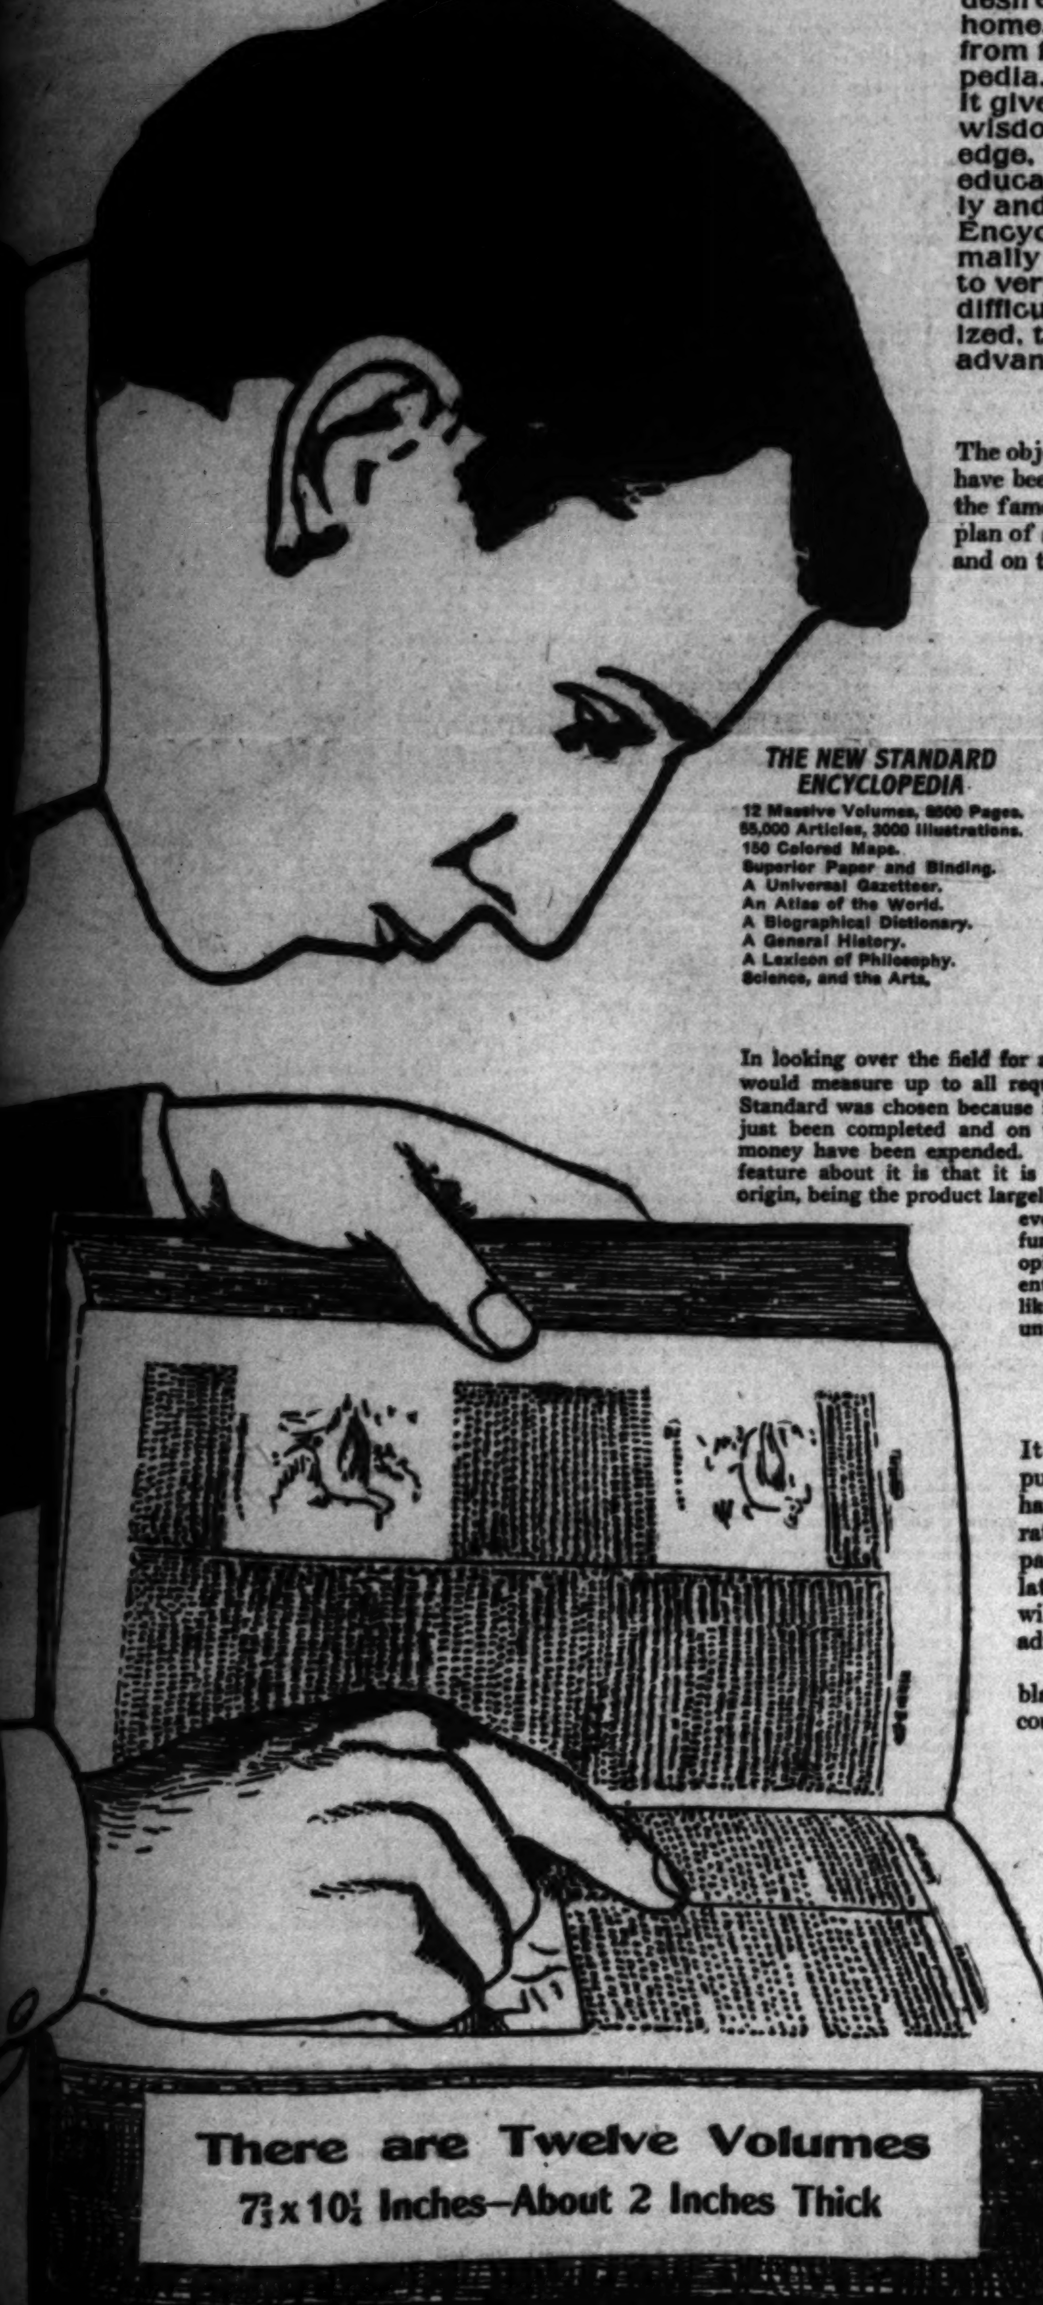
THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY

ANNOUNCES

THE GREAT CO-OPERATIVE ENTERPRISE

Another great educational enterprise has just been launched. In recognition of the ecessity for an Encyclopedia in every home, arrangements have been made to istribute a special restricted edition among the readers of this paper. We believe the wide dissemination of Knowledge; Knowledge is the key to Success. The an that KNOWS is the man that gets ahead. Nowadays there is no chance for ny one who is not well informed—who does not keep abreast of the times.

The average person has only one source of general information—an Encycloedia. Here it is that complete and definite knowledge on any subject may uickly be found, written in words that all can understand.



THE TIMES

desires that there should be an Encyclopedia in every home. Not one of those cheap, trashy affairs, rehashed from foreign sources, but a first-class American Encyclopedia. Such an Encyclopedia is a whole library in itself. It gives in condensed and digested form the collected wisdom of all time. It is a veritable storehouse of knowledge, by the aid of which any one can acquire a liberal education. It answers every question quickly, thoroughly and in the most interesting manner. Heretofore good Encyclopedias have been put on the market at abnormally high prices, ranging from $80 to $120; prices which to very many were prohibitive. It is to overcome this difficulty that a great Co-Operative Club has been organized, through which the readers of this paper can take advantage of a Unique Educational Offer.

The object of the Club is to eliminate the middleman, hence arrangements have been made with one of the leading publishers for an entire edition of the famous "New Standard Encyclopedia," which will be supplied on a new plan of sale. This work is being distributed at a price within the reach of all and on the most convenient terms—only a few cents per day.

A Superb Reference Library

ITS CONTRIBUTORS

This magnificent reference library is the work of America's greatest specialists and educators. Its editors and contributors number many of the most prominent men in our national life, such as ex-President Grover Cleveland; President Hadley of Yale University; Charles Emory Smith, former Postmaster General; William R. Merriam, Director of the Census; the late John Hay; Edward Everett Hale; William J. Bryan; the late Fitzhugh Lee; Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor; Charles C. Nott, Chief Justice of United States Court of Claims; Senator Robert M. La Follette; and nearly 200 others.

WHAT PROMINENT MEN SAY

WILLIAM J. BRYAN: "A model reference work. Without surplus words or unnecessary space, it presents a vast amount of information."

CONGRESSMAN CHAMP CLARK: "I prefer the New Standard to any other. It is an ideal work."

JOHN MITCHELL: "I have examined the New Standard and find it very satisfactory in every respect."

SENATOR DOLLIVER, Iowa: "The most complete work of its kind for general use with which I am familiar. It is invaluable to the student, and a constant inspiration and help in the pursuit of knowledge."

Best for the Home

In looking over the field for an Encyclopedia that would measure up to all requirements, The New Standard was chosen because it is a work that has just been completed and on which vast sums of money have been expended. The most important feature about it is that it is purely American in origin, being the product largely of American scholarship. It is also written in simple, clear and readable style. Other encyclopedias are adapted particularly to the learned scholar or professional man who desires technical information on various subjects, but the New Standard is entirely different in this respect. Its articles are not technical, dry or hard to read, and while they contain all the facts, everything is presented in such a clear and interesting manner as to invite further reading. In this Encyclopedia all time-consuming details and weighty opinions are left out—it gives the facts and the facts only in the most readable, entertaining fashion. Every member of the family will enjoy an Encyclopedia like this; it will be used where older and more technical works would lie untouched on the shelves.

Write Today

It is impossible in this limited space to describe fully the plans and purposes of the Club, and the plan of sale whereby members may have the entire library delivered to them at once, and pay for it at the rate of a few cents a day. If you are interested, write today for full particulars. Do not put it off until tomorrow; tomorrow may be too late. Only a restricted edition has been contracted for. The demand will be large, the Club sets rapidly taken. Prompt action is therefore advisable.

This Club was organized for your benefit. No one will be to blame but yourself if you do not get an Encyclopedia now, while the opportunity is here. Tear off the coupon and mail to us today. An opportunity like this may never occur again in your lifetime.

From the Portland Oregonian Jan. 6, 1907.

The New Standard Encyclopedia, edited by William A. Colledge, Nathan Haskell Dole and George J. Hagar. Illustrated, 12 volumes. The University Society, Incorporated, New York City.

Think of the residue, the kernel, of 100,000 books boiled down and condensed into one dozen handsomely bound volumes; 8800 pages; 55,000 articles; 100,000 topics; 150 colored maps; 3000 illustrations; the assistance of more than 200 experts and specialists in every department of human knowledge! The figures both fascinate and stun one, for it is difficult in a short examination to grasp the value and immensity of these statistics. In a word, this is a mental vision of the new Standard Encyclopedia, without doubt the most up-to-date, complete, convenient American encyclopedia that can be bought for the money, go where you will.

If you shut your eyes for a moment and try to remember the old-fashioned encyclopedia of just a few years ago, memory calls up a picture of dusty, neglected volumes generally found reposing on a top shelf, cobwebby and rarely disturbed; or so grand and imposing that they were without discussion placed in a bookcase in the "best" room of the house, a room used on such state occasions af funerals, christenings and marriages. Indeed more than one suddenly wealthy man in that recent generation ordered so many yards of encyclopedia to match the yardage of his mahogany bookcase. But times change, and books change with them, especially encyclopedias. The later must be up-to-date to be of any use. And in viewing many of them—for a long time— it must be concede that the best for general use in the home as well as the office, for men as well as women, and for college, school and newspaper use, is the new Standard Encyclopedia, published by the University Society, Incorporated, New York City.

Surely no other encyclopedia in existence numbers among its contributors or revisers so many eminent specialists. For instance, the article on "Census" was written by William R. Merriam, Superintendent of the Twelfth Census; "Arbitration," by Benjamin F. Trueblood, probably the best posted man in the United States on this subject; "Aguinaldo," by the famous Philippine author, Ramon Reyes Lala. The minister from Argentine writes on that republic. Dr. Henry Clay Vedder contributes the article on the "Baptist Church," William Jennings Bryan and ex-President Cleveland write a history of the "Democratic Party," Maunsel White, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, writes on "Armor Plate," the article on "Bridges" is by John Sterling Deans, chief engineer of the Phoenix Bridge Company, the subject of "Electricity" is fully treated by Professor John Trowbridge, of Harvard University, and the articles relating to the various cities and states of the Union are by the Mayors and Governors of the States themselves. The other names on the list include those of William Edward Story, professor of mathematics, Clark University; Cyrus Edson, M. D., bacteriologist, New York City; A. Monell, engineer of tests, Carnegie Steel Company, Pittsburg, Pa.; Alice Freeman Palmer, ex-President of Wellesley College; Seth Low, ex-President of Columbia University and ex-Mayor of New York City; George Haven Putnam, publisher, New York City; Robert Thomas Hill, United States Geological Survey; John Fiske, historian, Cambridge, Mass.; Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California; Luis Di Cesnola, director Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City; Charles Emory Smith, ex-Postmaster-General of the United States; Secretary George B. Cortelyou; J. L. Gillis, State Librarian, California; Wu Ting Fang, former Minister from China; Granville Stanley Hall, president Clark University; George Herbert Palmer, professor moral philosophy, Harvard University; Monroe Smith, professor of jurisprudence, Columbia University. Thus it will be seen that the articles in the encyclopedia are from authorative sources, which makes them immeasurably superior to those in the ordinary encyclopedia, usually compiled by an underpaid literary staff and in most cases being merely a rehash of some old and obsolete work.

Then the list of subjects is unusual and of a quality and description not generally met with in one work. In the desire of the editor to be modern in the best sense of the word—here are a few of the subjects ably discussed: Imperialism, Philippine Islands, Port Arthur, printing by electricity, flying machines, radium, submarine photography, Servia, unionism, labor legislation, insurance, Transvaal Colony, railroad consolidation, American locomotive, Roentgen rays, Tibet, Santo Domingo, psychical research, civil service, Panama Canal, Venezuela, arbitration, modern battleships, forestry, irrigation, Japanese-Russian War, compressed air, air brakes, electric traction, interstate commerce, Trans-Siberian Railway, bacteriology, automobiles, armor plate, Japan and China, Artic expeditions, trusts, wireless telegraphy, submarine navigation, airships, socialism, artificial ice, ice-breaking ships, Korea and Manchuria, photography in color, typesetting machines, etc.

The Standard Encyclopedia leads. The busy man and woman in this well-informed age will look on these volumes as being ideal for ready reference. Illustrations, paper, type and literary matter are excellent.

NEWS OF MINES AND THE MINING INDUSTRY.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interests will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

An Interesting Specimen.

CRESCENT (Nev.) Oct. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The undersigned miner and prospector in Crescent mining district, Lincoln county, Nevada, anxious to know the character of mineral in the sample sent separate accompanying this, respectfully asks examination by your department and an answer in due course.

The rock is from a deposit or lead close to Crescent.

Does it contain platinum? If not, what is it, giving its heft? I presume it carries silver too, but, as it is a new kind of rock to us here, we are puzzled. Respectfully, J.J.

ANSWER: A few years ago some mineral was brought to the Denver laboratory of the writer by Capt. D. J. Hutchinson, now of Los Angeles. The material was obtained from a mine owned by ex-Atty.-Gen. Toll.

More of the mineral was obtained and forwarded to associates in Philadelphia, Pa., Washington, D. C., and Paris, France. It was a new mineral—carnotite—a double vanadate of uranium and potassium. With it ratio-active photographs are readily obtained.

Now comes your single, small sample, a mineral of decided interest, in that no such specimen is known, i.e., in chemical constituents and mineral crystallizations. Sufficient postage has been forwarded to you in the hope of obtaining material enough for further study.

The sample contains no platinum; its fracture is sub-conchorded and shelly. It occurs natively massive. Color varies, from a dirty, citron green to yellowish pink and gray. The specimen is pseudomorphic in part. Luster splendent, resinous and in part dull. Very sparingly disseminated (throughout the mass) are three Anglesite (lead sulphate) forms. Crystals of wulfenite (molybdate of lead) yellow and red, with traces of uranium and calcium phosphate. Lead is present, as also, silver, gold, cinnabar and realgar. Chemical reactions and other physical characters need not now be given; meanwhile, be satisfied with it as lead phosphate.

Hubnerite.

FRESNO, Oct. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herewith find sample of mineral found 90 miles northwest of Tonopah, 54 miles southwest of Austin, 60 miles northeast of Uina and near the towns of Phonolite and Duluth, Nevada.

This mineral can be found in large quantities scattered over an area of about three miles wide by four miles long in a gold, silver and lead country. No one seems to pay much attention to this mineral in this district. Is it tungsten, and if so, what is it worth? In what quantities would this mineral have to be found in order to make it a paying proposition?

Thanking you in advance for your kindness. Respectfully, L.L.T.

ANSWER: We will repeat one line that occasionally appears in these columns: This department of The Times is responsible for samples submitted only, and in no wise vouches for "big finds" so often reported. Your sample is hubnerite (manganese tungstate) and is made up of 50 per cent. hubnerite. In other words, two tons of the ore represented by the sample will easily yield "68 per cent. tungstic acid of commerce" worth at locality where mined and concentrated $500 per ton concentrates.

You state that "this mineral can be found in large quantities," etc., and then ask for information as to paying propositions.

If you have 12 to 18-inch leads of the material it will pay to mine and concentrate. The mining boys in the territory indicated should "sit up and take notice," and right here, let it be stated that we have no time to answer the scores of letters received from "ore brokers."

Iron Ore.

VALDEZ (Alaska) Oct. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you some tin and iron mineral on which I have had a number of expert reports. Many of these are too technical (in words) for the average Englishman.

May I respectfully ask you to give (in your opinion) the cause of my not being able to enlist capital from tin producers? I, undoubtedly, have the ore. Yours truly, G.T.

ANSWER: Your sample is "discombobulated" with too much iron.

Auriferous Pyrite.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The piece of quartzite in this package is from a large vein ten miles east of Goldfield. I had it assayed and it went $12 per ton ore.

I think that there is tin in it but some of the men here say there is none. Will you please describe it if another mineral. Yours truly A. H.

ANSWER. There is no tin in the sample of trap rock by you submitted. The very minute metallic lustered specks appear under the microscope as pyrite (iron disulphide) carrying gold values.

Wolframite.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Specimen found in northern portion of San Bernardino county. I believe it to contain tungsten. R. D. H.

ANSWER. Your belief is a true one—provided specimen with piece of cord around it and your letter is the one you refer to.

This specimen is wolframite and is exactly like that of Osceola, Nev. On the reverse side of the sample brownish hubnerite appears resembling that of Dragoon Mountain, Arizona. Part of the sample yielded on analysis 74.10 tungstic acid. Iron protoxide 18.90. Manganese protoxide 4, silica 3 per centages as stated. Balance of sample will be retained for identification of locality stated.

MINING CONGRESS.

Proposed Amendment of Land Laws to Protect the Mineral Interests.

Following is a list of the delegates appointed by Gov. J. N. Gillett to the American Mining Congress, to be held in Joplin, Mo., November 11, 1907: D. M. Riordan, Winthrop, Shasta county; W. H. Holabird, Los Angeles; J. H. West, Needles; Frank Monaghan, Santa Ana; Daniel Murphy, Los Angeles; B. M. Newcomb, San Francisco; Dr. C. T. Deane, San Francisco; H. A. Blodgett, Bakersfield; W. W. Word, San Francisco; C. T. Hutchinson, San Francisco; Lewis E. Aubury, State Mining Bureau.

A paper dealing with the necessity of a change in our land laws has been prepared by State Mineralogist Lewis E. Aubury, to be read at the congress. In this paper Mr. Aubury will show that large portions of the public domain which are mineral in character are being absorbed by the timber grabber, the stockman, the homesteader and the scripper, and in order to protect the mineral interests of the country he suggests that on all patents for land, other than mineral, which may hereafter be issued, the mineral rights shall be reserved by the government, and that separate patent shall issue to the miner after he has complied with the necessary requirements.

NEVADA.

MILLS WANTED BY GOLDFIELD.

BREAKING GRIP OF THE SMELTER TRUST.

Mines Cutting Down Shipments Because Smelters Refuse to Make Returns in Reasonable Time—Consolidated Adheres to Dividend Programme—Merger of Leases.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 8.—Publication of a rumor to the effect that the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company had decided to substitute a quarterly dividend of 25 cents for its originally adopted plan of a ten-cent monthly distribution is followed officially by the announcement that the dime-monthly policy will be regularly adhered to. The first dividend, amounting to $360,000, was paid on October 25, and the second of the same size will be paid on November 25 to stockholders of record on the 15th of this month. Monthly disbursements of $360,000 mean an annual dividend of $4,320,000.

Because for some time it has been impossible to get returns on ore shipped for some fifty days after consignment, and for the further reason that the smelter trust now blandly declares that it will settle at its convenience, vouchsafing no guarantee as to time, the Consolidated is mining only a minimum of rich ore, at the same time pushing dead work and development operations and casting about for milling facilities to handle its tonnage against the day when its own reduction works shall be ready for service. Before long actual construction of the Consolidated mill will begin. Its capacity at the start is to be 350 tons per day, with provisions for a material enlargement shortly thereafter. The Combination mill is disposing of about sixty tons daily, and the Kinkead plant twenty tons. Before long it is likely that the Ollinghouse works at Wadsworth, just east of Reno, will be pressed into service. The capacity of that plant is easily 250 tons. The aggregate capacity of these three mills therefore will run to about 10,000 tons per month, and when supplemented by the new company mill the number of tons possible to treat will be more than doubled. Meanwhile, negotiations have been opened for the leasing of a fifth plant, the Best & Belcher mill, at Virginia, which is equal to the disposal of 150 tons of ore in a day.

Mohawk is sinking its main working shaft and lowering the winze from the 450 level, having withdrawn its entire force from the high-grade stopes and confining its labors to development.

Combination is being made to yield only about seventy-five tons of high-grade a day, a little better than enough to keep the mill busy.

Red Top has curtailed its production to the approximate capacity of the Kinkead mill, whither its yield is carted for treatment.

Jumbo has granted to Diamondfield Jack Davis a lease on its Grizzly Bear claim, and to M. A. Maher and associates a lay on two blocks of the Jumbo claim.

Victor has let a lease on block No. 7 to E. H. Newland.

The Goldfield Rosebud lease on the Consolidated's O.K. fraction caught the upper rim of the Florence Syndicate pay shoot at a depth of 400 feet, and is now hurrying to the 500 level for lateral exploration of the same vein. The Rosebud on Consolidated joins the syndicate on Florence, and the two workings are connected.

Productive leases on the Jumbo Extension are still closed down, awaiting a decision of the apex problem, to be solved by a joint survey being made by the Consolidated and Jumbo Extension and by arbitration, with no resort to law.

The Mohawk Florence lease on Jumbo Extension's Poleverde claim has become the property of the Nevada Goldfield Lease Company, a merger of the rights of the Mohawk Florence, Mohawk Gold Bar and Mohawk Daisy companies. The consolidated corporation will continue work on acquired leasing rights on the Combination Fraction, Daisy, Gold Bar, Florence, Jumbo Extension, C.O.D., Consolidated, Spearhead, Belmont and the Victor Wonder in Wonder district. It also owns outright claims in Montezuma district.

A million dollars has been produced by the Little Florence lease, and $2,000,000 worth of ore remains blocked out within its lines. Little high-grade is being shipped now, because of the unfavorable smelter conditions, but as much as ever is being mined and piled on the dumps under guard.

Warner-Stewart's Syndicate lease on the Florence is now proved the peer of the Little Florence, having tapped the extension of the same ledge. At a depth of 409 feet, 175 feet northwest of the lease's main shaft, an eight-foot ledge, five feet of which averages $301.60 and eight inches assaying better than $1500 the ton, has been struck. The diggings are able to hoist 100 tons daily of such ore, and are storing it at the works until there is a change in smelter terms.

Free-gold ore is present in an upraise from the 235 level on the lease of the Florence L. & M. Co., there being four inches of ore that is good for $8000 the ton. The workings, being continued for the 500 level, are now 375 feet deep, and up to the time of this strike have been shipping a product that ranged in value from $75 to $100 the ton.

Shipping will soon be the order at the Nevada leases on the Florence, which has fine ore in its bottom level, 500 feet.

High-grade streaks have been cut by lateral work on the 100, 200 and 250 levels at the Queen Florence lease, which is now sinking from the 375.

Combination Fraction, which has a record of a half-million dollars' production, has leased its main workings for eighteen months to the Nevada Goldfield Lease Company, which agrees to convert the single shaft to double compartment and to extend it from the present 465-foot level to a depth of 1000 feet.

S. Walter Geddes, who resigned his office with the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company, is serving the Daisy syndicate as superintendent. The Daisy has six shafts in shipping ore and now has made a rich discovery by an upraise from the southwest drift on the 210 level from one of the company workings. Two feet of quartz at this point reveals an average value of $560 per ton.

SEARCHLIGHT MINES.

Rich Ore in Quartette Lower Levels Some New Machinery is Installed.

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Nov. 8.—One detail of the present development of the Quartette is the exploiting on the lower levels of an excellent grade of milling ore that is forty to fifty feet across; to one side of this is four feet of high-grade, or shipping ore. Accompanying the high-grade ore are several inches of what might be termed superlative high-grade. The last is a crumbly white quartz that can be crushed with the fingers, and appears to run half gold. A very pertinent reason why the Quartette does not indulge itself in a 200 to 300-stamp mill instead of only forty, is the inability, as yet, to get sufficient water for that purpose. It has been a buyer of water for some time of the Duplex and Cyrus Noble mines. Its own Drake shaft, out on the bottom, now down 250 feet, is supplying some, and this is being rapidly deepened in the hope that it will ultimately furnish an ample quantity. The new shaft is completed to the 800 level, and yesterday upraising commenced from 800 to 800.

The new plant of the Philadelphia-Searchlight is now completed and in operation. A new engine-house has been built, in which is set up an engine, compressor and dynamo. The engine is a double opposed Lambert, and rated at seventy horse power. The compressor, a 10x12, supplies four drills. The dynamo is a twelve-kilowat, and furnishes lights for the entire property, a line having been run to the Black Dog shaft, also. In addition to the equipment enumerated, the property has two hoists, one on the Lodi and the other at the Black Dog shaft. In the Lodi shaft sinking has been discontinued at a depth of 500 feet, the limit of the hoist. A twelve-foot station is being cut, after which a crosscut will be run back to the vein. Indications are that the distance to be run will be very short, as the bottom of the shaft is all in quartz.

At the Pompeii the new pumping engine is in place and the old pump has been removed from the shaft. It will require four or five days before the larger pump can be installed and sinking started. A contract calling for 100 feet has been let. The work will start at a depth of 335 feet, and will take the shaft down on its present pitch.

Pending possible lawsuits, the Searchlight Mining and Milling Company has practically suspended all operations. Boundary disputes having arisen between the company and Messrs. Ward and Watkins, and also with the Big Six M. and M. Company, it is possible that the courts will be called upon to settle the affair. Under ground, the last work done fully confirmed all that has been said and published regarding the new ore to the east. It seems that this ore lies parallel to the vein worked, separated by a hard rib. When this rib was broken through, from four to five feet of new ore was exposed several hundred feet in length, for which an average of from $12 to $15 is claimed. Furthermore, the work done indicated that it grows better with depth, the best of it being in a winze sunk a few feet below water level.

RAILS INTO PIOCHE.

Great Tonnage Ready for Shipment. New Bonanzas in the Old Camp.

PIOCHE (Nev.) Nov. 8.—Yesterday was a memorable day for this camp. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the last rail was laid to the Pioche Terminal. Today two trains arrived, the station agent has established his office in a box car and the road is open for freight and passenger business. Tomorrow a regular schedule goes into effect. We are to have one train for passengers each way daily. It will require several weeks yet to ballast the track between here and Panaca. Until that is accomplished the passenger service will not be as reliable or as satisfactory as it will later. About a quarter of a mile of side track has been put in, but even that will be wholly inadequate to hold all the freight cars already waiting between here and Caliente to be hauled up here.

Deal Bros. and Mendelhall, the contractors on this branch as well as on the Las Vegas and Tonopah Railroad, are now grading a track to connect the narrow gauge road of the Nevada Utah Mines with the broad gauge at the station, so that freight can be transferred directly to their cars to be hauled up on the hill and to their mines at Jack Rabbit. This company is going to put in bins at the station and already has out an enormous tonnage to be handled by the railroad as soon as these preliminaries are accomplished. It has reduced its force at the old mines on the hill. It is given out that this will be temporary, and that the reason is because of the recent slump in silver and lead. No one here believes that present conditions in the metal market will be of long duration, but while both metals are down so low the Nevada Utah will sacrifice less if it ships only the Jack Rabbit ores.

The Susan Duster and the Prince are working right along and the management is highly elated over recent developments. On the surface the Prince was quite a low grade mine, and its average ore is still low, but the deeper it gets the more rich sulphide ores are encountered. Some recently opened runs up in the thousands of ounces to the ton. All this lends much color to the theory that a zone of enrichment will be encountered with great bonanzas as the mines approach the water level. An entirely new ore body was recently opened in the Susan Duster. If present indications are not deceptive those two properties are going to be worthy successors to the great mines which made Pioche famous nearly forty years ago.

The Boston and Pioche, which recently purchased the Yuba East, is working in a body of high-grade ore which will be ready now to furnish regular shipments to the railroad. It has several properties which were quite famous in the early days here, and there can be no doubt that this company is to play a very important role in the activity to follow the arrival of the railroad.

Col. W. B. McSherry of the Lincoln-Nevada, has organized a company to take over the Old Page and Panaca property. E. Greenwood, who floated the Lyndon Mines, and who is at present superintendent of the Lincoln-Nevada, has secured a bond from Mark Church on the Page and Panaca, and last week the colonel's new company, known as the Ohio-Nevada, made the first payment of $6500. It is understood that the bond calls for $25,000.

The strike recently made in the Mendha has proven to be even more extensive than the management realized, when the ore body was first opened. It is a fine grade of silver lead ore and was found at considerable distance from the main vein, which, hitherto, has furnished all the ore from this property. It looks as if the Mendha has moved into the great mine class.

The Bristol Consolidated, which closed down when copper fell to 12 cents, has not yet been reopened, but W. C. Brace, the manager, whose office is in Denver, has sent in word that work will, without doubt, be resumed at an early day. This is another property which belongs in the great mine class. During recent months several bodies of high-grade silver ore have been developed in that property. This company owns a group of claims, and while some of them have been noted producers almost from the earliest days of Pioche, not half of the ground has been prospected. For many years it furnished enough ore to keep both the silver mill and the smelter at Bristol in constant operation. It is quite likely that before any more ore is shipped from it, a tunnel will be run through to the Jack Rabbit side of the range and the ore delivered to the narow gauge cars of the Nevada Utah, to be hauled in them to the railroad here. Hauling this ore in freight wagons around by Bristol and over the summit to the railroad at Modena, Caliente and lately Panaca was a very wasteful process, but with a tunnel and railroad here, as soon as silver and copper get back to normal values, this should be a very lucrative property.

Over forty new buildings have already been erected with lumber hauled in by wagons, but the real period of construction for Pioche is to come. We have two lumber yards here, with strong connections, and we are promised lumber at very reasonable prices. Among the structures now going up is a hotel to have about thirty rooms, which will add very much to the comfort of the traveler.

Owing to the lateness of the season and general financial conditions throughout the country, it is probable that railroad day will be postponed until sometime in the spring.

Pioche has felt the disturbance due to the panicky state of the money market perhaps as little as any place. Our bank has kept open every day and has not once availed itself of the privilege offered by the legal holidays proclaimed by the Governor. Still the effect has been apparent in many ways. When the great centers are paralyzed no member entirely escapes. Several enterprises, which were to be inaugurated immediately, have been held up awaiting the restoration of general confidence. Still the people are very optimistic. They know the resources of the country and are content to wait a little longer if need be for the good times sure to come.

STOCK FLUCTUATIONS.

Only One Goldfield Stock Shows Any Advance Over Last Year's Value.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 17.—Red Hills is the one stock of twenty-four recording sales on the first week of November in 1906 and 1907 which closed higher in market value this year than last. Its closing quotation on that week a year ago was 15½ cents, and on the corresponding week of this year 20 cents, showing an advance of 29.03 per cent. The remaining twenty-three stocks recording sales both years in this corresponding week suffered an average decline of 58.08 per cent. The net decline in prices for the entire market in this period was thus 54.45 per cent.

Of the overwhelming majority of losers, Jumbo Extension most nearly held even, descending from 74 cents to 70 cents, only 5.41 per cent. Second, third and fourth best were Red Top Extension, Commonwealth and Crackerjack.

A Bullfrog security, Lige Harris, fell the greatest distance of all the active stocks, closing at 7 cents last year and at a half-cent the same week of this year, a loss of 92.86 per cent. The next three worst declines were suffered by Eureka, 90 per cent.; Original Bullfrog, 87.88 per cent., and Sandstorm, 78.67 per cent.

ARIZONA.

HUMBOLDT IS HARD HIT.

CLOSING OF SMELTER CAUSES DISTRESS IN CAMP.

Expensive Promotion of Mine Being Investigated—Gold Strike at Haqua Hala—Conditions in Southern Copper District—Extensive Improvements for Gold Roads.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Nov. 8.—The situation at Humboldt has been a serious one since the closing down of the smelter. A large and prosperous camp had developed at that point, favored by the trade of the workmen at the smelter, and by that of hundreds of miners and teamsters who came with ore from hundreds of near-by mines. A feature especially lamentable was that the workmen were not paid their last month's wages, though there is little doubt that their accounts are good, and that all such debts will be settled in the near future. It is reported that attachments have been put upon the smelting works aggregating over $500,000. This is understood to be outside a large amount owed for ore shipments. Attachments even have been placed upon a carload of concentrates on a railroad siding near the works. The merchants of the locality, hard hit because of the failure to receive their monthly payments from their patrons, are closing out, and indications are that the place will be nearly abandoned very soon. Yet the smelter is considered absolutely indispensable to even gold and silver mining in this locality, and it would be financial folly not to operate it, without consideration of its copper-reducing equipment.

EXPENSIVE PROMOTION.

Not far from Humboldt is the property of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, on which William A. de Long, and other stockholders are trying to secure an accounting from the New York promoters, who have been extravagantly advertising the mine for more than a year. It is alleged by De Long that the promoters have profited about $500,000 in floating the stock of the company, and that the total sales have been more than $1,000,000. In bare commissions and for advertising the stated expenditures have been $300,000. The stock, $10 par, has fluctuated all the way from $14 down to $2.75. It is asserted that no more than $100,000 has been expended upon the property, while the late Walter A. Logan of New York, seemingly the head of the promoting syndicate, was paid counsel fees of $36,000. The property was advertised largely on the strength of the reputation of Prof. George A. Treadwell, one of the best-known mining men of the Southwest, who, for years, was superintendent of the Old Vulture mine, and who lately has come into prominence through suing Senator William A. Clark for an accounting of the receipts of the United Verde Company of Jerome, in which company Treadwell is the owner of a few shares. It does not appear that Treadwell has profited very much by the transactions that have been made around his name.

GOLD AT HARQUA HALA.

On the 400-foot level of the Golden Eagle claim at Harqua Hala, a crosscut has been driven about ten feet into a new ore body, which is represented as simply sprinkled with gold. The ore is being sent by tramway to the mill at Harqua Hala, about a mile distant. Fifty stamps are being run the larger part of the day and night, and as soon as additional boiler power is secured the mill will be run continuously. The company also is renewing work on the old Bonanza mine, with the hope of striking another ore body, such as made its former owners millionaires. About 100 men are now employed at the mine and in the mill.

GRAND CANYON COPPER.

Down in the Grand Cañon, about twenty-five miles west of the end of the Grand Cañon Railroad, some remarkable ore is being taken out on property worked by W. W. Bass. In a tunnel lately run, more than fifty feet of high-grade glance and red oxide copper ore has been cut in true-fissure ledges that run parallel to the river. The ore is taken up to the ledge of the cañon on burros, and thence shipped by wagon to the railroad.

GOLD ROADS PRODUCT.

The Golds Roads mine of Mohave county now is developed to the depth of 800 feet, and shows continuous high values throughout. About every two weeks, a $25,000 bar of bullion is brought into Kingman and shipped. The present milling plant is expensive to operate, and inadequate and necessarily is run by gasoline power. The company is to secure electric power from a point on the railroad, and is to replace its present reduction plant by one which shall haye a capacity for 10,000 tons a month. New equipment is to be placed in the mine as well, making a large saving of expense and fully doubling the productive capacity of the property.

DIPS, SPURS AND ANGLES.

Several Pittsburgh capitalists lately visited the property of the Glorioso Gold and Copper Mining Company in the Harcuvar Mountains, north of Wendendale, and returned expressing enthusiasm over the mine, stating that a large amount of capital would be available for its further development as soon as they returned East. The property is one located by L. J. Court, one of the oldest and best-known prospectors of the Southwest, and is generally considered one of the most promising in all Arizona. There are several large mineralized dykes that carry shipping ore from the very surface.

An eighty-ton cyanide plant has been completed on the property of the Buffalo-Arizona Mining Company in the Black Cañon district, and the capacity of the present five-stamp mill is to be doubled within a few months.

Owing to a cave-in in the workings of the Stoddard mines, near Mayer, mining activities in that locality have been transferred for a time to the Stoddard-Binghampton mine, five miles distant, where a new and important camp has sprung up, and where the mines are being developed with all vigor.

G. W. Ruffner has bonded the Silver Cord mine in Black Cañon district, a property which has been worked for over thirty years, and which now is to be explored at a considerable depth. It is expected that ore shipments will be begun very soon to the smelter at Needles.

Thirty miles northeast of Winslow, ten miles south of the Navajo Indian Reservation line, has been found gold and silver ore assaying over $150 to the ton. This locality has heretofore been considered almost barren of the precious metals.

South of Holbrook, around Pinedale, development work has been commenced on a number of coal seams. The product is said to be far superior to that of Gallup, and it is believed that the deposit will be shown worthy of the construction of a railroad to it from hte main line of the Santa Fé.

PIMA AND PINAL.

President Rose of the Twin Buttes Company has begun the work of reorganization at the camp near Tucson. The mines are to be under the management of Capt. William McDermott, and the railroad management will be separate, under charge of David L. Stinson. Only the pumps are running at the camp, but Rose states that he believes operations will be resumed within a very short time.

Bonds to the value of $200,000 have been issued by the Paymaster Consolidated Mining Company, a Pima county organization, partly for the purpose of paying back debts and partly for the purpose of paying for additional mining ground.

Work has been closed down on the property of the Jacinto Mining Company in Pinal county, where a number of miners and other employés are understood to be still waiting impatiently for the coming of their pay.

CUTTING DOWN EXPENSES.

The most rigid economy is to be exercised at Cananea when work is resumed on the great mines of the Greene-Cananea Mining Company. A large number of high-salaried officials will be dropped. The Mexican miners, who have been drawing from $2.50 to $3 a day, will be reëmployed at $2 and American miners will probably be shaved 50 cents a day in wages. At the smelter, automatic feeders will dispense with the services of several hundred men.

SOUTHERN COPPER CAMPS.

The Shattuck-Arizona property at Bisbee has dropped a large number of men, owing to the refusal of the smelters to handle its ore product. The Copper Queen smelter at Douglas is handling practically no custom ore, and the Old Dominion smelter at Globe will take no more than 100 tons daily, a drop from 250 tons heretofore received from the Shattuck.

Assurances are given by the London-Arizona Company that the flurry in copper will make no difference whatever in the great plans of that corporation for the development of its mines around Winkelman, Pinal county.

One of the concentrating mills at Kelvin still is running, though the Kelvin and Ray camps have been almost abandoned because of the closing down of mining operations. It is told that the Kelvin-Calumet Company can make copper for less than 11 cents a pound, and, though there is very little margin at the present prices, operations will be continued in the expectation of better days to come.

A large body of high-grade sulphide ore has been found on a claim of the Arizona-Sultana group of Riverside, one mile from Kelvin, at a depth of 185 feet.

According to J. B. Bourne of Mammoth, preparations are being made to erect a smelting plant on Copper Creek, not far from Winkelman. In the same district the Calumet-Arizona Company has purchased a large amount of ground, which it is exploring by means of two working shafts and several diamond drill outfits.

It is reported that Los Angeles capitalists will soon begin the erection of a custom smelter on the Gila River, at Price siding, on the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad, a few miles east of Florence.

SOUTHWEST DISTRICTS.

Humboldt Smelter to Resume Operations—Gold Strike at Salome.

YUMA (Ariz.) Nov. 10.—Two features of this week in Yuma county mining circles were the purchase of three big placer claims in the San Pablo district by the Consuela Mines Company of Los Angeles, and the filing of record by Senator George H. Barker of Pasadena of a deed from Fred Amavisca and Albert E. Soderman to the Felix Mayhew Free Gold Company for the full premises of the Amavisco strike.

Yavapai county interests have recovered from what backset was experienced through the temporary closing of the smelter at Humbolt. The manager of that plant announces that he will resume operations November 12 and he has kept his official staff about him, preserving his organization as far as possible. The London-Arizona people have ordered a survey of their property with a view to selecting a site for a big smelter. New machinery, including an electric power plant, will be installed on the Haynes Copper and White Horse mining companies' claims at Jerome.

Final payment in the sum of $14,000 has been made to the Chancellor Gold Mining Company by H. W. Fientke, who assumed control April 1 under bond for the Spec Mining Company. Mr. Fientke is having a big dredge boat constructed and will build two others, the idea being to operate one dredge at each end and one in the middle. The property consists of 160 acres of land in the Lower Lynx Creek section. It is known as the Clarke estate, having been farmed for twenty-five years by John Clarke, who died ignorant of the rich deposits and of a quartz vein on the place carrying high gold values.

The Mildred Gold Mining Company, Weaver district, Dan Genung, manager, has purchased a new boiler and hoisting engine to be installed at once on a claim eight miles east of Congress Junction. At a depth of eighty feet they have a pay streak of iron sulphide ore two feet in thickness and averaging in gold $40 a ton. They have eight claims on the westerly slope of rich hill from the summit of which a Mexican is said to have gathered $500,000 gold in the latter sixties. At that time the discovery caused a great rush to the spot, and placer mines around the base of the mountain are now said to be yielding about $20,000 a year, but are worked at a great disadvantage for lack of water.

Salome has sprung a considerable gold excitement. While hunting quail in the low schist foothills four miles west of the northern Yuma county town, Fred Brill, "Red" Brummer and Charles Subers picked up a piece of quartz float rich with free gold. Later they returned to the spot and found a large piece of iron-stained quartz richer than the float. Immediately they located several claims on the quartz lode near there, believing that the float must have come from that point. New locations are being made daily and the hills are full of people. This strike is north of the new Griffin strike. It is full of diabase and diorite dikes which cut the schist in many directions and are attended by many stringers, blowouts and ledges.

Six feet of galena that will run 40 per cent. lead has been struck in a winze on the Fountaina, in Mohave county. A new mill is nearing completion on the Ora Plata. The Vanderbilt mill's roaster to oxidize ore from the Idaho goes into commission this week.

ROUND MOUNTAIN.

One of the New Rich Gold Districts of Southern Nevada.

Round Mountain is a new mining district fourteen miles north of Manhattan, which promises to develop into one of the big camps of Southern Nevada. The placers yielded $60,000 in forty-eight days to the labor of ten men, operating dry washers, and are so rich that it has been found profitable to expend $35,000 on a pipe line to bring in water for hydraulic working. The quartz veins have been prospected to a depth of 250 feet, showing six feet of $75 ore, and three Huntington mills are in operation. Tonopah miners expect great things of Round Mountain.

ROARING RAWHIDE.

Some Very Remarkable Reports from a Booming Mining Camp in Nevada.

Rawhide, in the Regent district northwest of Tonopah, Nev., is a silver-gold camp only five months old, but it has a population of 1000 and is growing rapidly. Here are a few Rawhide items gathered by the Goldfield Chronicle:

The Proskey lease started work one day and commenced sacking ore the next day that goes over $1000 to the ton.

One-half interest in a centrally-located claim sold for $15,000 cash. Fourteen sacks of very high grade shipped from one lease today, probable average, $5 per pound.

Two new strikes assayed $20,000 and $28,000.

First corporation, now being organized, includes nine claims of very rich ground and called the Rawhide Con-

Owing [illegible] for this variety, it [illegible] the western markets [illegible] than the Deglet Noor. The home of the Merakrer is near Tunis.

Other varieties in bearing are the Tedalia, a very early date, of large size; the Kesba, A'Orshet, Bent Kabala, all from the Mzab oasis in Southern Algeria. An excellent date is the Tenaseen. A palm in bearing at the Mecca station for the first time is yielding over forty pounds. Palms from Biskra, in Southern Algeria, are the Rhazee, Kenteshy Degia, Kesba and the Horra, which is considered to rank next to the Deglet Noor.

One of Mr. Johnson's favorites is the Rhars date. This is of large size, over two inches long and of excellent flavor. The Rhars dates, produced at the Tempe, Ariz., station, where there is an orchard in commercial bearing, sold last season through the Territory, at 50 cents a pound. This variety is early and in Mr. Johnson's judgment, will be very profitable, although it cannot compare with the Deglet Noor's exquisite flavor.

A fifteen-year-old Rhars date palm at Indio has this year produced more than 300 pounds. Although a price of 50 cents a pound for this variety cannot be maintained when in competition with the Deglet Noor, yet 25 cents will probably be a low selling price for a number of years.

At Yuma and Tempe are date orchards owned jointly by the United States and the Territorial government. In the Imperial country a private company has a twenty-acre orchard in bearing at Keber, and at Brawley there is a forty-acre orchard of seedlings, which yield dates next season. Both the Imperial and Coachella valleys have a number of small orchards of an acre or more.

The Mecca date palms began to bear at two years of age, but will not reach full yield until five or six years old.

Connoisseurs are divided in their taste as to date which, broadly speaking, are of two classes, semi-dry and moist. The Deglet Noor is of the moist variety, while the Rhars is semi-dry. Semi-dry dates are considered better shippers, and are of firmer texture than their rivals, while they keep their flavor longer. The best dates retain flavor for a year, but the ordinary kinds lose much of theirs in a month and a half.

At the Mecca orchard, sample dates of all varieties are being shipped in small boxes to the Bureau of Plant Industry at Washington, where they will be placed on exhibition. Thirty dates of the Taziwob variety, originally from the Mzab oasis, weighed half an ounce apiece.

Much has been written about the necessity of the date palm being well supplied with water, but experience has shown that a remarkable degree of drouth may be withstood. At the Durbrow ranch in the Coachella Valley, eight date palms which have been deprived of water for more than a year bore excellent crops of fruit this season.

In the East there are thousands of varieties of dates, each oasis having some kinds peculiar to itself. It is possible that as dates do not produce true to seed, some varieties may be discovered among the seeds sent out by the United States government that may be superior to even the Deglet Noor. The fact that the male tree from which the pollen was taken may be of a different variety renders it unsafe to depend upon the seed when the suckers may be obtained, even at the difference in price.

In the East it is not uncommon to see date palms in orchards in depressions known as sunken gardens, where the ripening dates may receive the full benefit of the blinding glare of the sun, sheltered from the wind. In imitation of these the government is preparing to excavate similar gardens at Indio, where the temperature record, since the formation of the Salton Sea, has exceeded that at Mecca.

Vast numbers of quail, with a fondness for dates, have compelled the government attachés to protect the date bunches with wire screen. On some palms as many as five or six bunches may be seen, each weighing from six to ten pounds.

It is no inconsiderable task to care for a date orchard. When first set out, the suckers must be watered every day until well started. At the time of blossoming, the female flowers should be pollenized within a day or two after opening. As each flower opens at a separate time, constant watching is required. Pollenizing is done by tying a sprig of the male flower within the female blossom, leaving nature to do the rest. One male palm will furnish pollen for as many as 200 trees.

Last year American candy makers ordered from the French exporters 1,000,000 pounds of high-grade dates, which they were unable to secure. At an average yield of eighty pounds to a tree—which the experts say may be expected, and fifty trees an acre, 20,000 acres of date orchard would be required to fill that demand alone.

Comparatively unknown to the American palate are the exquisite dates of the Sahara oases. The Arabs consume the greater portion of the product, for dates form today, as they have for centuries, a staple article of food on the great desert of the East. It is in the introduction of the eastern dainties into the United States that the Department of Agriculture has made such an excellent beginning.

Is there another crop that will yield as much net profit to an acre of ground? The value of a five-year-old date orchard is estimated to be $2000 an acre, and the annual profit, with a vast market, from $250 to $1000 an acre.

ARE YOU HONEST?

Conduct of Employees Regarding the Use of Time as Well as Property.

Are you honest? This is a pointed, personal question, and the man who reads it will probably get red in the face, warm under the collar and have a strong desire to pummel the writer of this article. Hold on, my irate friend, and read all the way through. Perhaps you may find something that will benefit you. You may not acknowledge that you have been hit, but you will admit the fact in your own heart and that is all I wish.

Now, I know that you have been entrusted with large sums of money by your employer and you have invariably accounted for every cent of it. I know that you pay your bills, and that you would scorn to take anything of value that did not belong to you. I admit all that, but there is something more. Honesty is a big word, and it means more than people generally suppose.

Let us delve into the matter a little. You and your employer have entered into a contract and each party, if he is thoroughly honest, will stick to his side of the agreement. Your employer agrees to pay you a certain sum each month for your services. He expects you to be on time at 8 o'clock, to take only one hour for your dinner and to devote the rest of your time, until 6 o'clock, to the work he gives you. Do you do this or do you saunter in, five or ten minutes late every morning? Do you make it a rule to take only the allotted hour for dinner, or do you further infringe on your employer's time a few minutes each day? Do you work steadily all day or do you allow your mind to wander about, thinking of the social engagement you have on hand for the evening? Do you make a practice of having your friends drop in to see you during business hours to discuss the good time you had the night before, or do you tell them plainly that such discussions must be reserved for another time?

Answer these questions fairly and squarely, without evasion, and you will know whether you are thoroughly honest or not. Don't try to wriggle out of it by saying you keep your work up, and that is all that is necessary. It isn't. Your employer pays you for a certain time. To him "Time is money," and if you can finish your work in less than the allotted period, the rest of your time should be spent in finding something else to do. You may say that such a course would only cause you to do somebody's else's work, and he would loaf on you. Perhaps he would, but that doesn't settle the question of your being thoroughly honest.

There is much more to be said on this subject, but I shall defer that until another time. Just swallow this pill, and, after you have digested it, you will be in better shape for another dose of the same medicine.—[Spare Moments

THE STRENUOUS LIFE.

We Get Used to Hurrying in Business and Carry It Into Vacations.

The strenuous life in America is not confined to a business or money-making career; it appears in our pleasures, says Success Magazine. Americans do not seem to be able to enjoy themselves, even, without hurrying up. At our pleasure resorts we see men hurrying and hustling, as though they were late for a train or right in the rush of business. We become so fitted, so accustomed to the American pace that we cannot slow down, even when we quit work. We do not seem to know how to do anything in a leisurely way. The same high pressure that we put into our business and professions is evident in our play. We get so used to "stepping lively," hurrying for an appointment or for trains, rushing our business, that we cannot go slow and take things easy when we have leisure.

Not long ago I was trying to convince a London merchant of the superiority of the American way of doing things, and was telling him how much more progressive, enterprising and pushing we are. He simply smiled and said: "What of it? We Englishmen do not envy you. We believe in living, in enjoying as we go along. The lunch-counter is not popular in London. We believe in taking our time to eat and talk with our friends, and have a good time. What if Americans do make more money? They drop down with some disease, are stricken with apoplexy, or die of paresis right in the prime of life. We do not call that success. That is foolishness. They lack that contentment, that poise, which marks Europeans."

The American youth hurries to the man, hurries his education, hurries his meals, hurries his work, hurries everything relating to his career, hurries his life, and he cannot understand why he cannot hurry his happiness.

WHAT SHALL SHE DO?

WOMAN'S FIELD OF INDUSTRY.

INVESTIGATION TO FIND HER BEST OCCUPATION.

Report Prepared by National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education—Her Most Profitable Occupations Are Classified and Enumerated.

What is the best occupation for the woman in industry is the topic discussed in an exhaustive report prepared by a special committee of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education.

The report defines a desirable industry for women as one which pays a living wage; which does not deaden the natural powers, nor reduce the individual to the position of a mere machine, which develops that kind of efficiency which will be of value to the woman as a home-maker; which must not be detrimental physically or morally. With these definitions as a test, the report continues:

"The manufacturing industries in which women are largely employed may be classified in three divisions:

"(1.) The industries which appear to be least desirable are paper mills, cotton mills, cordage and twine mills, confectionery and paper-box plants, and packing of all kinds. These employ 19 per cent. of wage-earning women in manufactures in the United States.

"(2.) The industries which are doubtful as regards desirability are hosiery and knitting mills, woolen and worsted mills, and silk mills, employing 8 per cent. of the women.

"(3.) Industries which promise opportunities are the manufacture of all kinds of clothing from cotton, woolen and silk goods, when carried on in factories or in strictly high-grade work-rooms; the manufacture of boots and shoes, gloves, straw hats, jewelry, and printing and publishing. The proportion of women in manufacture found in those is 64 per cent. in the United States.

The third group seems to be the best hope of the woman wage-earner. In this, the most important industry, may be grouped under the one classification of the manufacture of clothing from cloth or other prepared materials.

"In the manufacture of shoes, the occupations of women are distinctly that of stitching and finishing. It is apparent from a personal investigation of five large firms that from one-fourth to one-half or more of the employés receive $10 and upward; that from one-fourth to one-third receive less than $8, while one-fifth to one-third of the wages are more than $12, and one-twelfth to one-fifth range from $15 to $20. Judging from the women actually employed, it is evident that this occupation affords opportunities for a fair proportion of its employés to advance to a good living wage. The operative has the outlook of advancement into other machine trades which are more lucrative and stimulating, such as glove-making, straw-hat making, and fancy-waist making.

"Other trades having similar occupations are in the manufacture of fur, leather novelties, and gloves. In fur making the most skilled operatives on special machines are required. They receive $14 to $18 a week.

"The great industry of clothing machine operating presents one of our most difficult problems. It is open to attack from all sides, and yet it now employs the largest number of women in the best group of industries, and the proportion continually increases.

"Millinery and dressmaking are the industries in which there is the greatest opportunity and which require the highest grade of ability. In both millinery and dressmaking one finds the demand so much in excess of the supply, and employers so dependent on the less skilled help as a source for their higher positions, that one need not hesitate to make every effort to prepare workers for these trades.

"There are four industries which do not come under the needle trades, but in which women are employed—the manufacture of flowers and feathers, of gold and silver articles, printing and publishing, and salesmanship. These we have called the undeveloped trades for women, since there seems to be in them promise of a future for women."

GETTING A BAD NAME.

Little Things in Daily Life That Prevent a Workman Being Promoted.

"Johnson and I entered the service of the company at the same time. That was ten years ago and Johnson has been promoted until he is an official while I am getting very little more than I did at the start. I don't understand it."

Have you ever tried to understand it, my friend? Have you ever looked at the matter from your employer's viewpoint? Furthermore, have you ever heard the old saying, "Give a dog a bad name and you may as well kill him?"

Now you gave yourself a bad name with your employer at the start and that is why you have remained at a standstill while Johnson was promoted. Johnson was on time every morning, ready for work at 8 o'clock.

You strolled in a few minutes later and, by the time you were prepared to go to work, it was 8:30. Your employer noticed this but he did not say much about it. Nevertheless you gained for yourself the name of being a tardy man.

Then, Johnson worked steadily all day long and managed to do his work accurately. You, being half an hour behind time, tried to catch up by rushing things. As a result, you made mistakes. These came to the notice of your employer and he placed the word 'careless' against your name in his mental record.

Finding out that the rushing process did not work, you worked slower and remained at the office a half an hour after all the other clerks had left. This enabled you to do your work right and stopped the complaints about your carelessness, but your employer put you down as being a slow man.

Now, when the subject of promotion was discussed by your employers, Johnson, being regarded as prompt, accurate and fast, was pushed forward, while you, having gained the reputation of being tardy, careless and slow, were deemed unfit for more important work. You were good enough, despite your shortcomings, to fill the minor places, but you were not considered good enough to be promoted. That is the reason you are struggling along in the same old rut while Johnson is an official.

You can only rid yourself of the name you bear by making every effort to be punctual, accurate and quick. It will require time and patience but you must stand that as you are responsible for the condition of things.—[Spare Moments.

Industrial Independence.

LABOR UNION'S UNWILLINGNESS TO INCORPORATE IS COWARDLY—PUNISHMENT FOR STRIKERS.

AT THE conference in Chicago of the National Civic Federation, Don C. Seitz of the New York World spoke upon the incorporation of labor unions. A responsible corporation, he said, well managed and financially strong, is a benefit to the community. A labor union, incorporated, conservative, industrious and whose main object it shall be to see that its members are competent, that they shall always be employed and that they shall do their work well, is an equal benefit to the community. A labor organization that is predatory, the prey of politicians and a victim of designing agitators and imported agitators, is a nuisance and ought to be displaced. Incorporation would bring this about and the Civic Federation can perform no greater task than urging such a movement to completion.

"For the labor union organization as a business institution, I have entire respect, but it seems to me that the unions are fast going beyond it. When I read the letters of Mr. Gompers and other leaders or heads of labor organizations as sent to various labor conventions they sound to me like utterances of petty princes defying the community at large, and snapping their fingers at the laws and the Constitution with its guarantee of equal rights and demanding privileges that are denied others, because they represent 'organized labor.' They frankly array themselves against the community. We have seen the same thing done by capital in trust and railway transactions, and we have seen the unorganized people rise and show their power of resentment and regulation. Shall we soon see the same thing against the labor trusts? I think so, unless wisdom and moderation take the place of existing policies in labor organizations. When the labor question becomes oppressive it does more damage than when the dollar becomes oppressive. It not only does more damage to the community at large, but it damages itself. When one set of men bind themselves together and say that they will only work under certain conditions involving not only hours and wages but the manner in which they shall work and the amount they shall produce, they become something apart from the community and to an extent a menace. Their motive is, of course, laudable in its beginning. They wish to better themselves. But it is not brotherly and not patriotic. It is simply and purely selfish. Being therefore a selfish effort, it should be regulated as such, and the labor union should be compelled to put itself in the situation of the ancient guild and become a corporation. Men of dollars cannot combine unless they incorporate and show a visible responsibility for their acts. It is only the workingman who is free to do as he pleases, without any responsibility at all in the majority of our States. If a corporation does anything that is wrong in a business or in any other way, it is legally responsible to the extent of its assets. But the labor union may be as wanton as it pleases, may break faith and men's heads with equal recklessness, and make the excuse that it is a union. This does not seem to be either American or right. It is not fair and the unions show their weakness when they almost unanimously set their faces against incorporation. They do not want to be responsible for what they do.

Union Men Go to Prison.

The sentence of three Chicago labor leaders to a four months' term of imprisonment, pronounced more than a year ago, for contempt of court in violating a strike injunction, has been affirmed by the Supreme Court of Illinois.

The three men who must serve a term in the Cook County Jail are John Hake, Charles Anderson and Frank Sporka. The opinion was announced by Justice Vickers. Hake, Anderson and Sporka were held to be in contempt of the Superior Court of Cook county and sentenced for the violation of an injunction granted by the court upon the application of M. Born & Co., manufacturing tailors, against the United Garment Workers of America, the Chicago Coat Seam Pressers' Union, the Brotherhood of Custom Cutters and Trimmers of the Trade, and other local garment workers' unions and their officers.

The Appellate Court sustained the lower court, and the Supreme Court affirms the Appellate Court decision on the ground that there is no reversible error in the record.

Frank McGee of Worcester, Mass., New England business agent for the Iron Molders' Union, has also been sentenced to one year in the New Haven County Jail on a charge of intimidating workmen at McLagen & Co.'s manufactory in New Haven, Ct.

The sentence was imposed by Judge William Bennett in the Court of Common Pleas. McGee had come before the court on appeal from a penalty inflicted in the Police Court, where he was first tried. In the Police Court Judge Richard H. Tyner fined McGee $200 and sentenced him to jail for two years. Judge Bennett cut out the money penalty and knocked off one year in jail.

Other Unionites Enjoined.

One of the most sweeping injunctions ever issued against organized labor was granted at Philippi, W. Va., October 24, by Federal Judge Dayton.

The injunction temporarily restrains John Mitchell, president; T. L. Lewis, vice-president, and the directors of the United Mine Workers of America from organizing or interfering in any way with 1000 non-union miners employed by the Hitchman Coal Company, the Glendale Coal Company and the Richland Coal Company, located in the Wheeling district.

The Efficiency of Labor.

The following from the Iron Age expresses the views of a large percentage of manufacturers and other employers of labor throughout this country:

"The gravest evil from which this country is now suffering, graver by far from the exaggerated dangers from monopolies or from freight rebates, is the decline in the efficiency of labor. It finds expression in slouchy work on the part of those who know how to do better, and poor work on the part of those who have never been taught, or are incapable of learning. To the more serious defect of lowered quality is added the troublesome feature of lessened quantity. It is a curious fact that the one question above all which is uppermost in the minds of manufacturers and other employers of labor, and which is privately discussed by them with helpless iteration, is so rarely touched upon in public utterances. The hope of developing some remedy is the only consolation to employers when they face the prospect of a decline in the volume of business."

This lack of efficiency is one of the fruits of that kind of labor-unionism which seeks only to establish a labor trust, through which employers may be coerced into granting higher wages and consenting to a reduction in the number of hours to constitute a day's work.

It is so not because necessarily less work can be done in the smaller number of hours, or because the results achieved are less commensurate with the wages paid or the cost of labor. It is so because the aim of the labor trusts is not merely to work as few hours per day as possible, but also to accomplish as little as employers will show themselves willing to accept. There is no effort to achieve anything, but rather to keep from achieving, under a blind notion that if the men employed do less than they could do without overexertion, room will thereby be made for still more laborers.

This spirit dominates the labor-unionism of England, and to it as much as to anything else English industries owe their inability to compete with those of Germany. Its presence in the United States is less pronounced than in England, but it has shown itself here in numerous ways, and unless checked it will undermine the industries of this country just as it is now undermining those of Great Britian.

Englishmen are going to Germany to find work, a fact not commonly known, but none the less a fact. It is because the check upon English industries has reduced the quantity of work to be done and thus forced men into idleness. Instead of providing work for more laborers, the inefficiency of English labor has so increased the cost of production in comparison with the prevalent cost in Germany that many of the men once employed are deprived of an opportunity to work.

In the skilled trades efficiency can be promoted by raising the standard of skill. The country needs more trained and educated mechanics. It especially needs greater opportunity for the native genius of American boys and men to find expression and application in the skilled trades. Throw open the trades as the professions are now open to all who may desire to enter, and let compensation be graded according to efficiency, and then, so far as the skilled trades are concerned, there will remain little ground for complaint of the kind under consideration.—[Denver Republican.

Labor Slow to Learn Its Lesson.

There has been a strike of trolley car employés at Yonkers which is of more than local interest because it is typical. There was a demand for increased wages, which is always entitled to fair consideration, and which should be made a subject of free consultation and of arbitration whenever practicable if there can be no agreement. But whether there is agreement or settlement by arbitration or not, dissatisfied workmen have the right to give up their employment unless bound by contract. They have the right to leave it individually, and they have a right to leave it collectively, or to "strike," but there the inalienable right ends. They have no right to prevent others from working or to interfere either with the right of employers to hire others, or with their property or their business. This is just as elementary and indisputable as the right to leave work as individuals or to "strike" work in a body.

These Yonkers street railway workmen, in addition to demanding an increase of wages, demanded "recognition of the union" and the employment of a Yonkers man as superintendent. The superintendent lived in the Bronx. He had a right to live there; the company had a right to employ him and let him live there, and it was quite right in not considering such a demand. As to recognizing the union, that has come to mean dealing with an organization outside of the body of employés concerned in a particular dispute and submitting to its authority, and it is used as a means of forcing the "closed shop," that is, excluding from employment all who do not belong to the union and submit to be ruled by the decrees of its officers or committees. Here again a fundamental principle of equal rights is involved. There can be no such discrimination between union and non-union workmen, and no such curtailment of the right to hire either or both, or of either or both to be hired and to work on equal terms, without a violation of that fundamental principle of inalienable rights upon which our institutions are founded.

Having made these demands and entered upon their strike to enforce them, these Yonkers men were not content to exercise their own right to cease work and leave the company to get along without them or come to their terms, but began at once to attach its property and to assail those who consented to work for it on their own terms, causing riot and disorder in the streets. This is always a fatal error and must at once alienate the sympathy of all law-abiding citizens. It almost always leads to failure, as it has in this case, and it weakens the support of labor-unionism. One of its worst effects is demoralizing the timid and the demagogical to whom the enforcement of law is intrusted, but the time is coming when truckling to lawlessness and disorder will be a source of political weakness instead of advantage, as much when organized labor indulges in it as when it has a different source. When labor unions are willing to recognize the equal rights of all and to abide by the laws framed for the protection of equal rights of person and property, they may rise to a higher plane and promote progress, but they are slow in learning the lesson.—[New York Journal of Commerce.

Eight-Hour Law Class Legislation.

A dispatch from Poplar Bluff, Nov., says the telegraphers' eight-hour law has received a second solar plexus blow—this time at the hands of Judge Shepard of the Circuit Court of that county.

Prosecuting Attorney Green brought suit to recover a penalty of $1000 from the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company, alleging the railroad company had violated the law of 1907 by requiring several of its telegraph operators to work more than eight hours a day. Counsel for the railway company filed a demurrer on the ground that the law is class legislation.

Judge Shepard upheld the demurrer, finding for the railway company, and dismissing the action of the Prosecuting Attorney.

Judge Bradley of the Warrensburg Circuit Court made a similar ruling some time ago.

Declare for Open Shop.

The representatives of every industrial plant in Kenosha, Wis., have taken steps for the formation of a manufacturers' association. The principles of the convention as made public practically declare for an open shop in every plant in Kenosha.

The new order will affect [illegible] men, and the plants which have signed the agreement have an annual pay roll of more than $5,000,000. The announcement of the formation of the association came as a surprise to labor leaders, who declared that within a few weeks there will be [illegible] men striking in the city.

The new association has arranged to open a central labor bureau, with paid men in charge, to attend to the work of getting men to man the machines in the factories. Thomas B. Jeffrey, long noted as a fighter against union labor, was elected president of the new association.

HENLEY
THE SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC
355 S. HILL 355 (Cor 4th.)

He tells you what business you are best adapted to and what days and locations are lucky for you. He recognizes none as his superior. This remarkable psychic power has won for him a reputation that has been accorded to but few.

Many people visit a psychic when it is too late to reap the greatest benefits from his advice. It is more important that you have a reading of your present and future life now, and if indications are evil you are warned in time to counteract them. Knowledge of the future is the only safeguard of life, you should learn what is before you. If you are ambitious, if you wish to be a success, Henley, the master adept, will tell you just what the future holds in store for you; he reveals the future in a wonderful manner. He is a wonderful adviser in all affairs of life; he can put you in possession of the correct information you desire so much. A life reading will save you many heart-aches, business failures, unwise marriages, accidents and a ruined and wasted life.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 332 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
336½ S. SPRING ST., near Third,
THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.

A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY.

A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences, through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand and in the Horoscope, combined with large experiences, trained judgment, etc. The palm shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here.

WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, THE GREAT SINGER, WHOSE HANDS WERE READ AND HOROSCOPE CAST BY PROF. ALTHOUSE, writes and says: "I was greatly surprised to find HOW MANY OF YOUR WARNINGS WERE WELL FOUNDED, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la grippe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted when reading my hand and horoscope. I think YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, editor Swastika Magazine, writes and says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides, and I feel certain that you are able, through your accurate and scientific knowledge of these sciences of human life and culture, to guide and direct to the best possible advantage, the lives of those who apply to you for advice. I wish you every success in your work."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, David Starr Jordan, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, SOUSA, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Caruso, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, MME. GADSKI, Sembrich, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Anna Held, Lillian Russell, William Desmond, Blanche Hall, Paul de Longpre, and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.

Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, all kinds of diseases, the constitution, how best strengthened, when weak; tells all about love—whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner, shows deaths, divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs, and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents, what best adapted for; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of limbs, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

LOW FEE 50 CENTS.

THE ACKNOWLEDGED ADEPT AND RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY OF HINDOO PHILOSOPHY AND OCCULT MYSTERIES MAKES A REMARKABLE STATEMENT. "YOUR GREATEST WISH CAN BE REALIZED—YOU WOULD NOT DESIRE A THING IF YOU WERE NOT CAPABLE OF ATTAINING IT."

I KNOW HOW TO CONTROL AND USE THAT POWER FOR YOUR SUCCESS AND MINE. IF YOU WISH TO SUCCEED IN ANY BUSINESS UNDERTAKING CONSULT ME. I can put you on the right road. If you desire to win in love or be reunited with one from whom some trouble or estrangement separates you, I CAN AND WILL HELP YOU TO GAIN THE DESIRE OF YOUR HEART. Are you tired of being poor and living a "from hand-to-mouth" existence? If so, COME TO ME AND I WILL SHOW YOU A BETTER WAY. Life is not half so much of a mystery as some people would have you believe. If you had studied more into nature's laws and learned the lessons there revealed you would know better WHY SOME PEOPLE SUCCEED AND OTHERS FAIL. There is a good reason, just the same as THERE IS A REASON why water will run down hill more easily than it will run up hill. I CAN EXPLAIN THAT REASON to you. I AM SUCCESSFUL MYSELF. I do not make this claim in the spirit of a braggart or egotist, but to enable you to appreciate what I can do for you. Low fee 50 cents.

THERE ARE SO-CALLED SEERS WHO MAKE GREAT CLAIMS OF WHAT THEY CAN DO FOR YOU WHEN UPON INVESTIGATION THEIR SURROUNDINGS AND EVERY ACTION WOULD CONVINCE ANY SENSIBLE PERSON THAT THEY ARE INCAPABLE OF HELPING THEMSELVES. THERE ARE ALSO COUNTERFEIT DOLLARS, IMITATIONS OF THE GENUINE. HERE ARE GOOD DOCTORS AND BAD ONES AND A FEW HONEST LAWYERS. JUST SO WITH PSYCHICS; THERE ARE A FEW GENUINE AND A GREAT MANY IMITATIONS. "JUDGE ME BY MY WORK." MY EXTENSIVE PATRONAGE AND GREAT SUCCESS ARE THE ENVY OF ALL COMPETITORS. I AM NEVER IDLE. MY MOTTO IS, "WORK AND WIN." I HELP MY PATRONS TO SUCCEED, ATTAINING THEIR VARIOUS AMBITIONS. THAT IS WHY I HAVE SO MANY OF THEM AND WHY EACH ONE RECOMMENDS ME TO THEIR FRIENDS. LOW FEE 50 CENTS.

The All-Wise Creator did not endow you with high ideas, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love craving within your heart without at the same time placing within your reach the means of attaining these desires. If you are in trouble of any kind or not satisfied with your condition in life, come to me and I will make this clear to you. I have helped others. I CAN HELP YOU. Positively NO CHARGE if I fail to TELL YOUR NAME IN FULL, your occupation, what you called for, anything you wish to know. NO FEE IN ADVANCE AND YOU PAY NOTHING UNLESS PERFECTLY SATISFIED. FOR SALE—

P. I. CO., 707 S. SPRING.

Second week of G. A. Sale.

We were glad to get acquainted with so many of you poultrymen last week. But the expected happened; our competitors were somewhat exercised. On a few articles they met our prices, and in one case, just to show what they could do even if they lost money, "they went us one better." Of course we want them to sell some goods but we want you to come in this week and get acquainted, too. To induce you, last week's prices will be continued, except those made slightly lower.

West Coast Egg Food, 10 lbs., 35c; $2 cwt. Don't forget that some egg foods weigh but 25 to 30 lbs. per sack.

Beef Scraps, very best, 7 lbs. 25c; $2.90 cwt. Will sell cwt. or buy a carload at that figure. This sale is regardless of cost, just to get acquainted. But it positively

CLOSES NOV. 16.

Don't come around after that and expect G. A. prices. Our regular prices are as low as the lowest and our goods as good as the goodest. We keep open store this week until 9 o'clock, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. Purchases of $1 or more, delivered free.

How about incubators? Come and see the IMPROVED PACIFIC. You will like it and will like the price—especially this week.

I AM ONE OF THE OWNERS OF A GOLD mine in Arizona. We have developed the property at a heavy expense and paid all the bills ourselves. We have over $75,000 in ore ready for a mill and need your help to buy a mill. Can you spare $100 or more for six months to loan on this property to help us build this mill? Your money will be secured by the entire mine and mill, and we have refused an offer of $50,000 for the property as it now stands. Your money will be returned in six months and you will also receive an interest in the property for the use of this money. I believe every hundred dollars loaned on this property now will return you $500 within the next twelve months. We only need $3000 to complete the mill, as we have part of the machinery now, and you cannot afford to delay if you have the money to use. Call on me or write to MR. FOREST, Hollenbeck Hotel, Monday or Tuesday, and I will prove all my statements to your satisfaction. 11

LOCATE AND OWN YOUR MINE—An expedition is being organized to "prospect" a new and rich mineral field. It will be thoroughly equipped and in charge of an experienced and reliable miner. A limited interest in the above expedition is offered upon the same terms as would "grub-stake" an ignorant and unreliable prospector. Satisfactory city references given. Address PROSPECTOR, Y, box 172, TIMES OFFICE. 10

ANARCHISTIC.

CAREFULLY CONCEIVED PLOT TO KILL CZAR.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 9.—What is believed to have been a carefully conceived plot to take the life of Emperor Nicholas, while he was en route from Peterhof to his winter palace at Tsarkoe-Selo, today, was frustrated by the vigilance of the guards.

Early this morning a guard discovered six men trying to cut the wire of a semaphore at Livogo station, at the junction of the railroads to Peterhof and Tsarkoe. The guard attempted to arrest the men, but was fired upon and wounded. The shots aroused the officers and guards at the station and several volleys were exchanged between the outlaws and the soldiers, the former escaping without injury.

The police profess to be unable to understand the attempt to cut the semaphore, as such an act could hardly work any harm to the Czar's train, which was due to pass a few hours later. It is generally believed, however, that the outlaws intended to prevent the use of the signal, with the object of bringing the train to a stop at that point. No arrests have been made.

GEN. BOOTH SAILS.

Head of Salvation Army Purposes to Colonize South Africa.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two platoons of Salvationists were on the American Line pier this morning to see Gen. William Booth sail away on the St. Louis.

Departing with the head of the Salvation Army were Alexander M. Nicol, editor-in-chief of Salvation Army publications; Col. E. J. Higgins, assistant secretary to the foreign office of the organization, who arrived on Saturday week on the Lucania; Brig. Fred Cox, private secretary to the general, and Col. John Lawley, traveling secretary to the chief.

At about fifteen minutes before sailing time there arrived an automobile, in which were Gen. Booth, his daughter, Commander Eva Booth, head of the army in the United States, and his grandson, Christopher Booth-Tucker.

Five minutes before the sailing hour, Commissioner Nicol invited the interviewers to see the general. Shaking the hand of each, Gen. Booth gave all a "God bless you."

"I don't know just when I shall be back," he said. "Yes, there will be something new and novel in the campaign in South Africa. It will be a plan of colonization, the greatest since Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt."

The general said his trip here had been pleasant and useful.

SHOPLIFTER MAKES MISTAKE.

Girl Tells Pitiful Story to Police, but Admits She Was Arrested Before.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The curtain was rung down today on the melodrama of "Marian Hurley, the Shop Lifter," at a most affecting point in the action. The young woman had just claimed that she would undergo any punishment if the news of this, her "first offense," could only be kept from her poor parents, and the time was ripe for sobs and plying of handkerchiefs by the sentimental, when for some reason, the heroine forgot her lines.

"Marian" admitted that her right name is Amy Clark, and that her home is in Denver. She said that she, with her "pal," Dorothy Clark, had been arrested in Colorado City for shop lifting several times. She declared she and Dorothy, who had worked together for three years, had left Denver three weeks ago, she coming to Chicago and her companion going to New York.

The girl declared that her father, Lester Clark, was a contractor of moderate means, in Denver, and her mother died three years ago. Her father is now in Europe.

PRESIDENT IS INTERESTED.

May Wrestle With Japanese Expert After He Witnesses Latter's Exhibition.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hitachiyama, the champion wrestler of Japan, arrived in Washington today, and was the guest of Ambassador Aoki, at an informal entertainment this evening. On Monday afternoon he is to give an exhibition of the Japanese wrestling game, "sumo," at the White House before the President and a select company of diplomats and Cabinet officials.

"Sumo" is to wrestling what jiu-jitsu is to boxing, and Mr. Roosevelt is said to be so much interested in it that he has notified Hitachiyama he will probably take him on for a round or so after the champion's exhibition with his partner.

This number of the programme has been kept secret. The champion and his manager refused to discuss the likelihood of an international match, but smiled and said, "Wait and see."

VOLIVA BUYS 7000 ACRES.

Many Families from Zion Will Take up New Abode Near Las Vegas, N. M.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Wilbur Glenn Voliva, the self-appointed leader of Zion, who has been deposed by his people and the Federal courts, will lead those who followed him out of Zion to the attractive country around Las Vegas, N. M., where his agents have closed a contract for 7000 acres.

As rapidly as they can dispose of their property here, the Volivans will depart for the Southwest. It is hoped to settle 2000 families there within two years and begin a model city.

The tract contains marble, iron, copper, zinc, lime, lumber and clay in large quantities. The full extent of the wealth of the tract is not known. Primarily the colony will devote itself to agriculture, but it is the intention to build up a new Zion, so there will be employment of a diversified nature for all.

Twenty families will start for their new home at once. Voliva intends to build factories, stores and establish a newspaper, and the city is to be self-governing.

Storms, accompanied by torrential rains, have again caused floods in several parts of Italy and a number of vessels have been wrecked in the Mediterranean and Adriatic seas.

SOCIETY IN ECSTACIES.

Princess Marie Bonaparte's Trousseau Costs Over Three Hundred Thousand Dollars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Society is in ecstacies over the superb trousseau of Princess Marie Bonaparte, which has cost $325,000. Of this sum the filmy, lacy lingerie alone cost $75,000. The trousseau has been on exhibition for a week and Paris has rolled its eyes heavenward and talked itself almost breathless. Together with the gowns were exhibited some of the Princess's jewels.

The coveted order for making the gowns fell to the lot of a new firm, which in a few years has made a reputation for the beauty of its designs and finish of its creations. Naturally, older established firms of dressmakers are greatly disappointed. The value of the orders given to this one firm alone is $100,000.

Several of the Princess's trousseau frocks are in empire style, and one very striking evening dress is in a soft shade of electric blue, made in fine voile de soie. It has a long tunic or overdress, falling from high waistband and finished with a deep border of embroidery carried out in cut beads of dark blue and gold. The small empire corsage consists mostly of a handsome Venetian point lace, ending in points on either side of the bust, showing the high draped empire sash in two tones of soft blue satin.

BOARD OF MISSIONS IN DEBT.

Preachers Determine to Pay Off More Than $100,000 Liability by Business Policy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the Board of Foreign Missions is more than $100,000 in debt was developed at today's session of the board now meeting in this city. The treasurer, Rev. Homer Eaton, brought the matter before the board, and the manner in which the conditions could be met provoked an animated discussion.

Dr. A. B. Leonard declared that an unwise appropriation of $144,000, which was taken from the foreign mission fund and given to the home missions last year, is responsible for the debt. It was finally decided that the church should adopt a business policy and conduct its affairs according to the rules of business integrity, such being the suggestion of Bishop John M. Walden, who said:

"We have the debt and the missionaries; well, let's provide for both."

Just how the money is to be raised did not develop. Tomorrow the visiting bishops will preach in the various Methodist churches of the city, and the business of the session will be resumed Monday.

POMMERN'S SUCCESSFUL SAIL.

Lands in Outlying District of the Bronx After Passing from Philadelphia.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The big German balloon Pommern, winner of the recent international balloon contest, which ascended today at Philadelphia, carrying Dr. Julian P. Thomas, Mrs. Thomas, Capt. T. T. Lovelace, Oscar Erbsloeh of the Aero Club, and Lieut. Robert Henderson of the battleship Missouri, descended tonight in a sparsely-settled outlying district in the Bronx. The landing was effected safely.

Leo Stevens, of New York, the pilot of the balloon, and Frederick S. White of New York, a photographer, who accompanied him, said that their voyage was a pleasant one.

CUTS DOWN BILLS OF JAPS.

Canadian Official Will not Allow Claims for Damages from September Riots.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Nov. 9.—The bills of the Japanese for damages to property and consequent damages resulting from the September riots, aggregating in all a trifle over $13,000, will not be paid in full.

Mackenzie King, who has been conducting the official inquiry, had no other alternative than to apply the pruning knife, in view of the character of the evidence adduced. The amended claims as allowed will total about $10,000.

Wholesale rates and no retail prices of goods will be applied. On Monday Mr. King will hold the first sitting in connection with the new inquiry he has been instructed to undertake respecting the immigration of Orientals to Canada. The witnesses will include railway and steamship officials.

POWERS TO BE TRIED AGAIN.

LEXINGTON, (Ky.) Nov. 9.—For the fourth time, Caleb Powers will be put on trial at Georgetown, Scott county, Monday, for alleged complicity in the assassination of William Goebel of Kentucky in 1900. The report has gone out that Powers will ask for a continuance of his trial when the case is called Monday, until Gov. Willson, a Republican, can take his seat, but Powers denies this, and says that he will demand an immediate trial Monday.

HARD FIGHT.

CHAMPS TAKE ANOTHER GAME.

Bergman Blows up and the Looloos Win.

Umpire-Pitcher Karns Quits Field in Disgust.

Big Leaguer Johnson to Be in Final Contest.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After twelve innings of crabbing, the Pickwicks were beaten in the twelfth inning because of Bergman's blow-up, darkness and threatening rain. The Looloos scored four runs and unbalanced the score of 4 to 4 which had held since the eighth. Karns's reign of miserable umpiring was terminated in the ninth, when he walked off the field, too enraged to talk, after a dispute in the middle of the diamond with Manager Palmer over a questionable decision. Clements, another local man, replaced him, and a new pitcher will succeed him in the morning game tomorrow. Clements immediately got the local fans sore at him by refusing to call the game in the twelfth after Los Angeles had won it. Clements insisted that it was still light enough for the Pickwicks to take their turn at bat, and the side was put out in one-two-three order.

Los Angeles was given a hard rub by the San Diegans today. Bernard was on second, but Cravath is still duck hunting and Hogan played in the field. Nagle twirled, and had some bad innings, which helped the locals. Both teams scored one in the second, Los Angeles on two singles and a walk, and the Pickwicks on two errors and a wild throw by Brashear. Los Angeles led by two runs after the fifth, in which Bernard started things with a three-bagger. Carlisle was hit by Bergman and stole second. Brashear bunted on the squeeze play, scoring Bernard, and Ellis scored Carlisle on a sacrifice hit. Easterly hit to center and it looked like more runs, but Brashear was caught at the plate on an attempted double steal. Carlisle was caught off third in the seventh, but Los Angeles managed to tally again, anyhow, Dillon scoring from second on Easterly's hit.

The Pickwicks scored twice. Nagle hit Shaw and Langdon sent him to third with a hit. Hanrahan scored them both with a two-bagger, and the auto horns tooted for fifteen minutes. The score was 4 to 3 and a three-bagger by Clynes in the eighth followed by a single by Hartley, tied the score. Easterly was nailed at the plate in the ninth when he tried to run in on a passed ball, and the score continued even until the twelfth.

Here hits by Dillon, Brashear, Easterly and Hogan coupled with errors by Hanrahan and McCarthy in the growing darkness, let in four runs for the Looloos. Lebrandt caught in place of Meyers, who smashed a finger in the Friday game. He made the first run for the Pickwicks in the second inning, with one shoe left near second base, where it had fallen off. Nagle was hit on the kneecap by a hot grounder in the fifth, but was able to finish the game.

Two games will be played tomorrow, with Johnson in the box for the Pickwicks in the afternoon.

HARVARD DEFEATED.

Carlisle Indian Team Plays Very Brilliant Game and Rattles Crimson Eleven.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Nov. 9.—The memory of previous defeats was forgotten today in the victory of the Carlisle Indians over Harvard by a score of 23 to 15. For versatility of play, the Indian team has not been equaled on Soldiers' Field since the new rules went into effect. Forward plays, delayed kicks and cross passes followed each other in rapid succession until the Harvard players became bewildered and seemed utterly unable to stop the march of the Indians toward their goal. The visitors scored twice in the first half and twice in the second, and four times on brilliant rushing. The Harvard points were made on two touchdowns and a goal from placement by Capt. Parker.

Each of the touchdowns was made on fumbles by the Indians directly in front of their own goal line, so that it was comparatively easy for the Crimson players to push the ball over for a score.

One of the Harvard goals from touchdown was missed by Little. Mount Pleasant, the Indian quarter, kicked three out of four attempts. He ran with speed and his selection of plays was well varied. His most brilliant effort was his dash of 75 yards through the end of the Harvard eleven for a touchdown shortly after the beginning of the second half. The play was one of the most sensational seen on Soldiers' Field for many years.

The Indian's quarter caught a Harvard punt on his own 35-yard line and dashed straight for the assembly of players. It seemed a hazardous play, but he proved too slippery for the Crimson men and went through the greater portion of the Harvard eleven like a greased pig, and then, shaking himself clear, he eluded Newhall, who stood between him and the goal, and then dashed for the line.

The other three Indian touchdowns were made through their success in carrying off the forward pass.

The Indians won the toss and chose the west goal, with the sun and wind behind them. Burr kicked to the Indians' 3-yard line. After a run back of seventeen yards, a fumble gave the ball to Harvard on the 33-yard line. Another fumble gave the Indians the ball again on the 25-yard line. The Indians scored a touchdown and kicked goal. Score: Carlisle 6, Harvard 0.

A fumble in the kick gave the Indians the ball on their 50-yard line.

The Indians carried the ball into Harvard's territory, and there a forward pass, although it was fumbled, gave them the ball on Harvard's 25-yard line. Another forward pass sent the ball to the 3-yard line, and on a rush Carlisle placed it over the line for a touchdown. Mount Pleasant kicked goal. The playing time was seven minutes.

After play was resumed Carlisle made two brilliant runs, but was penalized and forced to kick to Harvard's 40-yard line. The Crimson team tried the center, with only slight gain, and then kicked into Carlisle's territory. After the Indians had kicked to the center of the field and Harvard had rushed the ball back ten yards, a Harvard kick sent the ball to the Indians' 3-yard line, when it was fumbled and a Crimson touchdown resulted on the next play, a goal following, and the score was tied.

The next ten minutes were occupied with brilliant playing by the Indians, and another of their forward passes placed the ball on Harvard's 20-yard line.

The Indians soon scored another touchdown and Mount Pleasant kicked goal. Score: Indians, 12; Harvard, 6.

Palmer soon kicked a goal from placement. Score: Indians, 12; Harvard, 10.

The first half ended with the score: Indians, 12; Harvard, 10.

WEST POINT LOSES.

BADLY BEATEN BY CORNELL.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WEST POINT (N. Y.) Nov. 9.—Cornell and West Point met for their initial battle on the gridiron here today, and the Ithacans routed the army by a score of 44 to 10. Cornell had the ball at the end of the first half, with a score of 6 to 4, but the soldiers changed this early in the second period of the game, when Philoon got through for a touchdown and Beavers kicked the goal. This placed the army ahead, 10 to 6, but during the remainder of the game the Ithacan team outplayed the local men, who, after having a touchdown and a goal scored against them, were forced almost at the last minute to a safety, which finished the scoring.

Cornell won the toss and chose the south goal. Beavers kicked off for West Point to Cornell's 15-yard line. By a series of forward passes Cornell carried the ball down the field until Watson for Cornell made the first touchdown, and Waldes kicked goal. Score: Cornell 6, West Point 0.

Beavers for West Point made a drop kick and scored a goal. Score: Cornell 6, West Point 4.

In the second half Walders kicked to Bever in the 30-yard line. In an exchange of punts the ball was kicked out to Cornell's 30-yard line.

Mountford took Morris's place for West Point with the ball on Cornell's 30-yard line. Philoon blocked Walders's kick, and went over the line for a touchdown. Beavers kicked the goal. Score: West Point 10, Cornell 6.

Ayres was replaced by Hayes and Bowen went in for Moss for West Point. Cornell lost the ball on West Point's 15-yard line. On the kick-out Gardner made a fair catch but Cornell failed the goal. On a long forward pass Van Orman carried the ball over for a touchdown, Walders kicking goal. After this it was all Cornell.

Score: Cornell 12, West Point 10.

Princeton Is First.

PRINCETON (N. J.) Nov. 9.—Princeton showed a complete reversal of form today against Amherst, and did not score a touchdown until the last minute of play, although Harlan had previously scored two field goals from the 35 and 25-yard lines. The final score was 14 to 0, in favor of Princeton.

GANS OUT AGAIN.

Colored Fighter Would Battle Once More With Nelson, as Money Is Needed in Baltimore.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joe Gans's retirement from the ring was merely a bluff. Joe now makes the announcement that he will take on Battling Nelson in a finish fight for the largest purse offered, provided that he receive 75 per cent. of the purse, whether he wins, loses or boxes the Dane to a draw, which are the same conditions which he was compelled to give Nelson when he fought at Goldfield, fourteen months ago. As two big purses have already been offered them to fight, they may be matched.

Declaring that Harry Wright, her husband, had beaten her and threatened to kill her, Mrs. Wright of No. 421 Wall street, asked the police at Central Station this morning to send an officer to protect her. Patrolman Cook went to the house, and found that the woman has sustained numerous lacerations and bruises about the face and body. Wright could not be found, but the patrolmen of all districts were instructed to arrest him. Cook left the house with the avowed intention of securing a revolver and returning to kill his wife, it is alleged. The cause of the quarrel is not known.

W.C.T.U. CONVENTION.

NASHVILLE (Tenn.) Nov. 9.—The second days' session of the Women's National Christian Temperance Union opened today with an increased attendance, fully 400 delegates being in their seats when the president called the convention to order. The feature of this morning's session was the discussion of the question of an amendment to the constitution permitting evangelistic workers to be represented on the Executive Committee.

Seven men, said to be members of the Western Federation of Miners, were arrested at El Paso today on a charge of attempted jail delivery. While a deputy constable was transferring to the county jail Hayes Wimberly, charged with attempting to counterfeit clearinghouse certificates, the seven men started for the officer and his prisoner. Police reserves were called and the men were arrested.

DR. McLAUGHLIN'S ELECTRIC BELT A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Oh! the grinding, nerve-rasping pain! The tender, aching muscles, the swollen, burning joints, the stiffness, the soreness. "Oh, rheumatism, ye thousand devils, how gladly would I part with you." And he swallows a drug, which the devils like, and the rheumatism marks him for its own. He becomes a chronic drug shop after awhile, and you can tell him by the knots on his hands.

When you feel that grinding pain in your joints you can appreciate the feelings of a man burned at the stake or having his bones broken and twisted on the rack. It is merciless, sleep-destroying, agonizing. It lets up at times for an hour or two, only to turn loose again more pitilessly than ever. It leaves one joint and moves to another with doubled intensity.

It eats up all your vitality, exhausts your patience, and unless you conquer it by using electricity, which is the only remedy on earth that will cure it, it may reduce you to a chronic rheumatic cripple, with joints enlarged, twisted and deformed, and strength enough only to limp around.

Rheumatism gives many warnings and it is easy to cure if you begin in time. When you feel the first stiffness in your knee joints, shoulders or back, if you attack it then you can easily drive it out of your body. But if you let these "come and go" pains come often they will settle down and stay with you. Cure them at first and you will be saved much needless suffering.

You can cure rheumatism by removing the cause. Now you know that the cause is in the failure of the kidneys to filter the blood. The kidneys are weak. They need strength, and they get that only from Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt. You could take all the drugs that were ever made and they would not give your kidneys an ounce of strength.

My Electric Belt is a body battery of cells which pumps a stream of electric life into your nerves and vitals while you sleep. It dissolves the uric acid in the blood and drives it through the circulation, back to the kidneys, which, by the help of my Electric Belt, are enabled to cleanse the blood of its poison and free the system forever from rheumatism.

No pain can exist in a body charged with electric life. You can have no rheumatism, no weakness, no inactive parts, because the life generated by this grand force gives health and strength to every organ.

Your Electric Belt has cured me of rheumatism, cramps and general debility, and none of these troubles have returned since I stopped the treatment.

I am 64 years old, and feel as strong and well as I did at 40.

to be spent on these about half of it, or go for labor. There must large army of mechanics and their helpers engaged in the building trades in Los Angeles to call for such an expenditure in the slowest month in so many. Leaving out the Sundays, it means $20,000 a day paid out to wage-earners occupied in building inside of the city of Los Angeles. At an average of $4 a day it represents wages for 5000 people. While wages are very high, the average is scarcely $4. The probabilities are that with helpers and mechanics there are as many as 6000 people in this slowest month in the year earning a good living in building homes for the rapidly-growing city.

What Will the Money Flurry Do?

Remember, this month's business done through the building inspector does not represent the actual present activity, but rather indicates what may be looked for in the immediate future. During the previous months more permits were taken out than in October, and the money to go into the buildings was a considerably larger sum each month than the million dollars for the month just passed. The reflections above stretch well on toward the end of the year, and would insure a very considerable amount of building activity if the money flurry should cause an absolute cessation of taking out permits. These permits that have been taken out are provided for, and the financing of the work all carefully looked to before the permits were issued. The money to pay for the labor and material is in the banks, and is subject to check, and every check will be honored unless events utterly unforeseen and not to be thought of should occur in this country of ours, so exceedingly full of wealth. The month of November may show a considerable slacking in new permits. It would be practically impossible to finance any great undertaking in the present condition of the money market, or any large number of small enterprises. Everybody will have to go a little slowly and catch new breath during this enforced holiday, so to speak. But it would act only like the rest one's body gets in sleep over night to prepare it for the work of the next day by renewing impaired energy. If there are fewer permits issued for a few weeks, it will mean that there must be a greater rush done in building when the flurry is over.

The Tourist Army.

The low passenger rates in force upon all the transcontinental railroads for a considerable time past have poured in here a steady stream of new people. The last day of the rates brought a veritable army into the city of Los Angeles. In spite of the close condition of the money market East there will be something like the usual influx of tourists during the whole winter. It is inconceivable that the present conditions at the East are to continue at all indefinitely, and just as soon as confidence returns to the people generally money will loosen up and people will move as customarily. Los Angeles is prepared to take care of a moderate number of newcomers for a little while, but if we cease building even for a fortnight, the result would be the crowding of every occupancy in town fit for a human being to live in. Naturally, this would be followed by a building boom more active than ever before.

Farming Land Inquiry.

While these newcomers make Los Angeles their objective point at first and while they mostly congregate here for days, weeks or months, a great many of them are destined eventually for the country. The demand for farming lands is active right now and has been when the money pinch was most severe. A great many of these newcomers bring their money in a wallet tucked into their "inside pocket" or in a belt around their loins. They bring the actual money with them, and are not dependent upon bank checks in any way. The real estate men who are engaged in selling country property find the demand is decidedly active for this. The profits to be reaped from farming of many kinds in Southern California are getting to be so well known that practical farmers look upon them as the best form of investment in the world. The impression is very general that these lands are by no means dear at the present time and that they will never be cheaper, nor will they remain as cheap as now for any great length of time.

Now the Time to Buy.

The Times wishes to reiterate and emphasize the views expressed in this department almost every week for some little while past that now is the time to buy. Whether an investor is looking for a vacant lot on which in the future to build a home or whether he is looking for property improved for a residence or a piece of farming land, right now is the time to buy. In every form of real estate it is a buyer's market and no man not pressed by some necessity should think of offering anything for sale at the present time on any terms short of the prices ruling during the past six months. The water had been squeezed out of all the poor propositions before the summer set in, and property had got down to a fairly reasonable level of intrinsic value based upon actual earning capacity. These conditions are not changed by the temporary flurry in the money market. They are permanent conditions. Population must continue to grow here. The lands have not lost their ability to produce crops. The population is here to consume the products of all our acres. Prices are good and the profits of farming great. The buyers know that there are here and there persons who are driven by necessity to let go on almost any terms. They are watching with the eyes of a lynx to "spot" the biggest bargain in the market and immediately that is seized upon by the shrewdest person who has money to buy. They are wise in doing this. They are getting property cheaper than it could have been bought for a month or two or three months ago, and cheaper than it will be again in a little while, when the flurry is over.

HUGE MEXICAN RANCH BOUGHT.

SYNDICATE ACQUIRES TITLE TO MANY ACRES.

Rosario and Descanso Ranches, Lower California, Purchased for Three Hundred Thousand Dollars. Rich in Oil and Minerals—Will Be Colonized and Developed.

The Main Realty Company reports the sale of the property known as the Rosario and Descanso ranches, situated in Lower California, Mex., for $300,000. The ranches are only a short distance from San Diego, and begin at the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, and extend along the ocean, with a beach frontage of forty miles. There are 108,826.48 acres in this tract, all of which is fertile and especially suited for agricultural and grazing purposes. There is said to be more than sufficient water for the entire ranch, and it is considered, by those who ought to know, as the choicest large tract of land in all of Mexico.

The California Syndicate, of which George Noble Todd is the president, is the purchaser. The papers are now in escrow with the American National Bank at San Diego.

Oil has been found on this property recently, and is said to be illuminating oil of a natural refined quality, while asphaltum or crude oil is found oozing from the rocks in many places. Reports that there are also many valuable gold, silver and copper mines on this property are common. These are said to be well developed; in fact, to such an extent that shipments are made to the smelters at San Francisco and Seattle. It is announced that the property will be stocked with cattle, colonized, oil wells drilled, and its rich copper, gold and silver mines developed by the California Syndicate.

This land will grow and produce anything that is grown in California, it is said. The finest of oranges, bananas and rubber trees are found there, and it will be but a few years, in the opinion of the purchasers, when this property will be as valuable as any in Southern California.

IN COMMERCIAL SECTION.

Chapman Brothers Building Store and Loft Building on East Third Street.

Constant building activity in the commercial section of Los Angeles has been a phase of construction work throughout the year. One of the last large store and loft buildings to be planned in the section east of Main street down near Central avenue is the three-story brick and timber building now under construction at Nos. 461-69 East Third street for the Chapman Bros. Theo Eisen is the architect.

A drawing of the building appears on this page today and shows a structure of the most modern type in this classification. The lot is 100 feet square. The building has a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 95 feet. There is no basement. Interior work is of heavy timber construction. It will be used for wholesale purposes, the east one-third of the building having already been rented to Earl Cowan Company, tea and coffee merchants, for a period of five years. The building will cost about $15,000, and will be completed in about two months. The owners, Chapman Bros., are a well-known real estate firm, and are also well known through their connection with a series of magnificent orange groves at Fullerton, Covina and other Southern California points.

Numerous Sales of High-grade Orange Groves Reported—Transfers at Pomona, Claremont, Upland and La Verne—Many Newcomers Settling in Suburban Districts.

J. O. [illegible]cell of Pomona reports a brisk demand for orange groves at Claremont and Upland. During the past week he has sold for James Monroe, at Upland, ten acres in Washington navels to Dr. Grant of Pomona for a consideration stated at $13,000.

E. Kerford of Upland has sold to A. Mann a choice ten-acre ranch set to Washington navels for $15,000.

E. A. Miller of Upland has sold to J. Gillespie of this city ten acres of oranges near Upland for a stated consideration of $12,000.

Ernest Brooks of Claremont transferred to Thomas A. Smith of Pomona a twelve-acre place on Harrison avenue, Claremont, for a stated consideration of $18,000. All these sales were for cash.

Through the Gillen & Smith Realty Company, Harry F. Pratt has sold his twenty-acre grove at La Verne to J. A. Rominger. There are fourteen acres in young Washington navels, three acres in lemons, and six acres vacant. The ranch is improved with good new five-room cottage. Cement pipe lines carrying cañon water and half interest in good pumping plant, also are included in the deal.

The property is located on one of the finest avenues of La Verne, in that famous district. The consideration is $12,000 cash. Mr. Rominger purchased for investment.

Through the same agency F. E. Trask of Los Angeles has sold his three-acre grove at Ontario to G. B. Richmond of Pomona. The grove is set to large fifteen-year-old Washington navels and is supplied with cañon water. The consideration is $2000 cash. Mr. Richmond bought for investment.

H. H. Magill of La Verne has sold his ten-acre ranch to William Harrison, through J. A. Fitch of Pomona; stated consideration $9000. One-third of this ranch is in lemons, the balance in oranges. There is also a residence and barn.

R. R. Wherry has sold his thirteen-acre orange ranch on San Antonio avenue, one mile west of Claremont, to J. B. Richards of Pomona for $19,-500. A five-room dwelling and barn were included on the ranch, which is set out to fifteen-year-old navels. The irrigation is furnished by the Claremont Coöperative Water System.

H. D. Roe has sold his orange ranch one mile south of Claremont to S. H. Bowler of Chino. It includes ten acres of twelve-year trees and a six-room dwelling and barn. The sale was consummated at $12,500. Irrigation furnished by the Del Monte Water Company.

A. M. Robertson has bought of C. R. McAdams six lots on Ramona street, Hemet, for a consideration of $1000. J. O. Duckett has sold his two building lots on State street to S. I. White. It is reported that Mr. White paid $650 for them. R. W. Pierce has disposed of his ten acres of partially improved property on Florida avenue to L. G. Seeley. It is said that $2500 is the price paid.

J. P. Stark has today sold his fifteen-acre alfalfa ranch at Lordsburg, to Rev. A. J. Hixson of Upland; stated consideration, $6800. Rev. Hixson was formerly the pastor of the Brethren Church here, and will return here to reside. He has purchased several lots and will erect a handsome residence. Mr. Stark will move to Imperial.

Architect W. J. Saunders has drawn plans for a two-story frame building to be erected at 2691 San Marino street, for himself. It will consist of two three-room apartments, each provided with patent beds, buffet, kitchen and baths.

CORNER OF COUNTRY.

REALTY ACTIVE IN SAN DIEGO.

CONTINUED BUILDING IN CITY OF BAY AND CLIMATE.

Valuation of Permits Nearly Two Million for Year—Several Important Property Sales—Plan Hundred Thousand Dollar Schoolhouse. Erecting Many Handsome Homes.

Building permits in San Diego have reached the $1,900,000 mark, and predictions are made that at the close of the year the $2,000,000 notch will be passed. The number issued during the month of October aggregated over $100,000, which was greater than for the entire twelve months of 1901, and half as much as was represented in the permits issued the following year. The record for the first seven days of November, however, shows a falling off, compared with the corresponding period of last year, totaling only $22,425, for twenty-one permits, as against $26,-685, in 1906, for about the same number. Last year at this time the permits aggregated $2,514,210, the amount having been swollen from the fact that the permit for the U. S. Grant Hotel calling for $800,000 was included in the list.

In spite of the financial troubles the real estate and building business continues fairly active. During the week the city board of education called for bids on plans and specifications for the construction of a reinforced concrete, or brick school building at the corner of Twelfth and E streets, which it is estimated will cost about $100,000. It was also announced that the Gassen-Pauley brick building on Fifth street, between B and C streets, was to be four stories instead of three, as was originally planned.

Fifteen houses are in process of construction on University Heights, exclusive of the twenty-five which are being erected in the Hillcrest tract, at the head of Fifth street, where the building restrictions insure the construction of handsome buildings.

An important purchase of the week was that of Maj. Lockett, U.S.A., who is now on his way home from the Philippines, the deal having been closed by this well-known army officer for the seven-room residence at Fifth and Walnut, having a 150-feet frontage on Fifth street, and 100 feet on Walnut street. The consideration was $12,000.

An eleven-room house on Fifth and Laurel, with a lot having a frontage of 100 feet on Laurel street, and running back 200 feet to Fourth street, has been sold this week for $16,000, and will be improved with a handsome residence.

G. D. Langdon has sold to Mrs. Louis Reed a lot with a sixty-foot frontage on Albatross street, between Robinson and University avenue, for $2200; twenty lots at La Jolla have been sold to D. G. Jones for $2800; Commissioner George F. Mahler of the Board of Public Works is building a $3500 residence on Maryland street, between Meade and Monroe streets; H. G. Meyers is building an $8000 residence on Second street, between Maple and Nutmeg streets, which is to be one of the finest homes in the city. Mrs. Ora Sheffler has purchased a lot at Upas street and Ivy lane for $2500. Ella Reinhardt bought the southeast corner of Twentieth and E streets, for $2650.

SELLS RAYMOND-AVENUE HOME.

Concession Made in Price to Enable Family to Join Seller—Several Sales Near San Pedro.

The modern ten-room two-story residence at No. 2419 Raymond avenue has been sold by S. B. McLenegan to C. C. Kohlmeier for a reported consideration of $9250. The sale was made through the agency of I. W. Hollingsworth & Co. The house is one of the most complete of any in the section, having been constructed under the personal direction of the grantor. Taking into consideration the location and character of the property the price is considered moderate, and it is stated that a considerable concession was made by Mr. McLenegan because the latter was in business in the northern part of the State and wished to remove his family to his present location. The lot has a frontage of 66¼ feet and a depth fo 155 feet.

The same company reports the sale of the west half of lots Nos. 120 and 121 of the Lomita tract, comprising ten acres of land, to A. S. McSwain of Long Beach for $3500. The north half of lots Nos. 86 and 87 in the same tract, consisting of eight acres, for $2800, to A. B. Payne. The purchasers of this acreage will use the same for truck farming, for which this tract, owing to its superior soil, abundance of water and convenient shipping facilities, is particularly adapted.

SAN FERNANDO LAND DEAL.

Wilson Ranch, Five Miles East of Town, Sold for Hundred and Twelve Thousand.

Another big San Fernando land deal was reported last week. This was of the sale of the Wilson ranch, about five miles east of the town of San Fernando, to Dr. F. A. Bissell, a wealthy cotton grower of Texas, for a reported consideration of $112,500. The grantor is C. Q. Stanton of this city.

There is a total of 750 acres of land in the ranch. Of this number 390 acres are grain and hay land, while the remaining 360 acres are set to apricots and peaches.

The buyer purchased the huge ranch as an investment, and it is stated that he has plans already prepared for building a modern cannery to handle the great output of fresh fruit from the ranch. He is the owner of a large vineyard at Roscoe, and owns property at Burbank. The deal has been pending for some time.

The price which was paid for the land is at the rate of $150 an acre. The deal has not been entirely closed, but a large cash payment is said to have been made, and it is possible that the final papers will be signed within ninety days.

It is reported that the average yearly yield of fruit from this ranch has been 400 tons of apricots and 300 tons of peaches. Last year, when the deciduous crop was light in all sections, the yield from the Wilson ranch was ninety-three tons of apricots, which sold at $100 a ton, and 145 tons of peaches, at $37.50, or a total of nearly $15,000 for the fruit, in addition to the large yield of grain.

Here is a fine home, located just a block from the car line, in a fine growing neighborhood; in fact, within a block of Arlington and Washington sts.

Absolutely in perfect condition; less than six months use has left no mars; it has polished floors, built-in bookcases, fine hardware; you would search throughout West Adams Heights in vain to find a greater bargain in every respect. House is practically new, and situated among other nice homes, with well-kept lawns, flowers and palms; a neat, natty home, owner is very anxious to sell. This property can be bought on terms—in fact, for $800 or more down and easy monthly payments.

The popularity of the bungalow as a home seems to be greatly on the increase in this city, and we find the demand for this class of residences to be almost in excess of the supply. When we have a good one like the one offered below, it's been our experience that it does not stay on the market long.

Here's a description of it; it is situated on a lot 40x135 to an alley, in the Westlake district; was built but a short time ago; it has six large rooms; quartered oak, polished floors, attic and cellar. It's only a short distance from the business center (close in) and among some of the finest homes in the city.

The house cost $3000 to build; we estimate the lot worth $4000; the property is cheap at $6500. For a short time we can offer it at $5750, which is a Bargain Day price.

This house has a large, broad cemented porch with cement steps leading to an imposing oak entrance with cut-glass side lights. The finish of the entire lower floor is of selected hand-rubbed quarter-sawed oak, with a paneling in all of the rooms 5 feet 8 inches high. In the living-room there is a large brick mantel in old gold finish, while the walls are of imported leather with a beamed ceiling. The side walls of the dining-room are hung with rich imported tapestries, and there is a wide plate rail, while the beamed ceilings are in a very heavy effect; there is also a fine built-in buffet. The attractive den has walls finished with velvet paper and a built-in writing desk. The kitchen and pantry are complete and modern in every respect, with all the necessary appointments, the linoleum is already on the floor.

Upstairs are four charming sunny bedrooms tinted in restful soft colors. The floors are of rock maple, polished like a mirror. The bathroom is modern and convenient. This will make an ideal home for someone. Call and let us show it to you.

Located near the corner of Hobart Blvd. and Washington—one of the best sections in the entire city—is this beautiful home built on a lot 60x150 feet on high ground. It contains ten very large rooms and an attic and has a concrete foundation under the entire house, besides a large concrete cellar, 16x16 feet equipped with a modern 36-inch furnace. This house contains 67 windows and has a handsome sun parlor 16x22 feet. There is a charming den 16x16 and a reception hall 14x26. Two features that add greatly to the general effect of the living-room are the big 4-foot Grueby tiled fireplace and the big windows with built-in seats. The dining-room is 16x22 with handsome buffet, beamed ceilings, paneled walls and plate rail. The kitchen and pantry are enameled in white with nickeled hardware. There is a screened porch containing laundry trays, vegetable bins, clothes chute, etc. The servant's quarters have baths, toilets, clothes chute, lavatories, etc. There are five large bedrooms (3 in front) enameled in white; two bathrooms finished in white enamel with plumbing nickeled where exposed. FOR SALE— SAY, YOU.

ARE YOU A 4-PER-CENTER?
IF SO, WHY?

For example, you have $3000 at 4 per cent., it brings you $120 per year; if you will buy any place I offer you as a good buy for $3000 you can rent it for $360 per year, which is almost three times as much as you would get as a 4-per-center. If you have only $1000, divide all figures by 3; if you have $30,000, multiply by 10, and the amount will be in proportion. Again, there is lots of satisfaction in being able to do as you please with what belongs to you.

A good house never says "Nothing doing for six months."

Moral: Buy one of our bargains. They are in the city; don't go to the woods to buy property. Sidewalks in front don't make a lot worth what an acre should sell for. Buy where people live now, or you may be dead before the city reaches your property. Get your money as soon as possible and buy one of our bargains in the city and make money.

The bank gives you 4 per cent., they get 7 per cent.; the man they loan to invests in real estate and makes immense profits; take for example the "Childs property" on Main st. Mr. Huntington bought it for $220,000 about five years ago, and refused $2,500,000 last spring. Don't that beat interest? Huntington don't loan money, he borrows yours; there are hundreds of cases where the profits have been just as great. A great many have said, "I am afraid to invest, we might have a panic in the East and that would kill Los Angeles." WELL, WE HAD IT, DIDN'T WE? And the best city on earth—Los Angeles—is still doing business at the old stand. Even if we did have a panic, if the investor wins, you lose 4 per cent., if he loses, you lose the whole thing. In other words, you take all the chances anyway, and get none of the profits.

ARE YOU AWARE

THAT A LOT IN VICTORIA PARK COSTS NO MORE, IN MANY INSTANCES LESS, THAN A SMALLER LOT IN AN ORDINARY TRACT?

THIS IS BECAUSE THE SYNDICATE OWNING VICTORIA PARK ARE NOW SELLING LOTS AT VERY LOW PRICES. THEY INTEND TO GET MUCH HIGHER PRICES FOR THE LAST HALF OF THE LOTS, AFTER ALL IMPROVEMENTS ARE COMPLETED AND A NUMBER OF HANDSOME RESIDENCES ARE BUILT.

WE TAKE IT FOR GRANTED THAT YOU KNOW IN A GENERAL WAY ABOUT VICTORIA PARK, ITS LOCATION ON WEST ADAMS HILL, ITS CURVING HUNDRED-FOOT DRIVES, TO BE LIGHTED BY WROUGHT IRON AND STONE ELECTROLIERS, ITS LOTS 60x150 FEET WIDE, MANY OVER TWO HUNDRED FEET DEEP; ITS THIRTY-FOOT PARKING, WITH CONTINUOUS ASPHALT PAVEMENT TO THE BUSINESS CENTER; ITS FINE LIST OF PURCHASERS OF HOMESITES WHO WILL BUILD EXPENSIVE RESIDENCES; YOU HAVE HEARD OF THESE POINTS IN FAVOR OF VICTORIA PARK, BUT THERE ARE MANY OTHER ADVANTAGES WHICH YOU SHOULD CONSIDER IF YOU WANT THE BEST OBTAINABLE HOMESITE AT THE PRICE OF A POOR ONE.

IF YOU WANT A LOT AS AN INVESTMENT, OR

IF YOU INTEND TO BUILD NOW, WHILE LABOR AND MATERIAL ARE LOW, SEE US, OR MR. F. E. ATWOOD, AT THE VICTORIA PARK OFFICE. TAKE PICO OR WEST SIXTEENTH-STREET CAR.

This is a money-making opportunity for all who are wise enough to embrace it. It is an especially big chance at present prices. Remember that Belle Vernon has 5 car lines and a car every 5 minutes and is only 20 minutes from the Huntington Depot. Remember that this is in a section where values are steadily going up and people who have money to invest are planting it right there in full confidence that it will make money fast. When your acre becomes too valuable for home and garden, you can cut it up into lots and sell each lot for more than the whole acre costs you now.

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."
This financial flurry can't last long. Farmers all over the country are rich, crops fairly good, prices high, manufacturers have orders ahead to keep them busy for another year. People who want work are employed at good wages. Los Angeles is marching right along, notwithstanding the "Gamblers' Panic." Work is progressing rapidly on the North Hill st. tunnel. Manager Gabel of the L. A. P. says they will be completed within 4 months. When this is done Sunset Blvd., from the Sisters' Hospital to Capitol Hill will be within 6 to 12 minutes from 4th and Hill. Much of this property is very choice, very close in, very cheap. About 1-4 to 1-3 as much as property the same distance out in other directions. Sure to double in value when tunnels are completed and Sunset Blvd. paved. Good plan to BUY NOW and get in on the GROUND FLOOR. For BARGAINS in the northwest see the RANNELLS LAND CO., 127 N. SAFE INVESTMENT.
The safest investment is real estate.

When well bought it is the safest place to put your money.

It's bound to advance in a growing city like Los Angeles.
True, it may be slow for a short period.

But it will enhance in value and make you more money than any other forms of investments.

Los Angeles is growing faster today than it has ever done—and will continue to do so.

We have good investments for the man or woman with a large or small amount of money.

MINES & FARISH.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY.
Occasioned by the DEATH OF AN ASSOCIATE.

Owing to the recent death of an active member of a most eminently successful and profitable wholesale and jobbing concern, a capable business associate is needed to fill the vacancy so caused.

The business is in splendid financial condition, and money is of secondary consideration—it being a case of the right man rather than means—though an investment of $10,000 will be required to handle this interest.

This institution is incorporated, having a modest capitalization, is enjoying a trade second to none in its line in the southwest; holds valuable contracts, worth thousands, owing to clever management pays practically no rent, is thoroughly established; with its branch houses did nearly $360,000 during last fiscal year, and paid 65 per cent. cash dividends; yet no bonus will be asked. This interest carries a place on the directorate, an official position, and a salary commensurate with services rendered—formerly $2500.

If you feel that you are the man for this place we will be pleased to meet you without delay.

IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

One of the nicest, cleanest, most profitable and most desirable retail institutions to be found in the center of our business center, will be sold on basis of invoice, approximating $10,000, as the owners are preparing to engage in wholesale business, which offers employment for more capital.

A bonus has been offered for this lease, and the good will is worth thousands, though no account will be taken of either. The business is netting better than [illegible] a year.

Commandingly located as it is on one of the best thoroughfares, so thoroughly established and favorably known that a clean, handsome profit is insured every month in the year, no one contemplating engaging in like pursuit of similar magnitude can afford to overlook this very unusual opportunity. The books are open.

ATTRACTIVE OPENING.

A prosperous and thoroughly established local manufacturing establishment producing a staple commodity used every day in every home, has, during the last year, netted over 100 per cent. on its capital, yet finds the need of more capital and energy with which to still further develop its business in its extensive field. This concern numbers four of our largest department stores among its customers.

A reliable and capable business man with $5000 to $10,000 can secure a substantial interest in this business, carrying an official position and a salary commensurate with services rendered. The books are open.

OFFICE MAN WANTED.

A local industrial institution of unquestioned integrity desires the services of a competent bookkeeper who has about $4000 to invest. The party capable of qualifying and satisfying the management of this concern will be given a lucrative position and a satisfactory guarantee on investment. Investigation courted.

$2000 TO $20,000.

We have a number of other strictly HIGH CLASS mercantile and industrial openings ranging from $2000 to $20,000, approximately, and covering practically all legitimate lines, that will stand the most rigid investigation.

Should you desire to connect yourself with an established and profitable business of high character, either by outright purchase or forming partnership, it is our business to be in touch with such openings, and we can be of undoubted assistance to you.

CHEAP ACREAGE.

Investigate the cheap lands of the San Joaquin Valley. Near Corcoran, where a million-dollar sugar factory is being built, we have some splendid properties for sale at a price of from $22.50 to $100 per acre.

4[illegible] ACRES
In Tulare county, about 1½ miles from main line of the Santa Fe Ry., and only about 6 miles from Tipton on the Southern Pacific Ry. Elk Bayou and Tule River run through the property, while surface water is found at a depth of 10 to 20 feet. Some large willow trees, also some oak trees. A fine tract for fruit, alfalfa, beets, dairying purposes, etc., being near to 2 railroads, several towns, sugar factory, creameries, etc., makes it a fine proposition for subdivision. We offer it at a price far under its value. Price only $22.50 per acre.

[illegible]0 ACRES
About 1½ miles from Solita. The Santa Fe Ry. crosses it. At a price of $7 per acre it should surely claim attention.

20 ACRES
Located near the electric car line, about 9 miles this side of Santa Ana. Can buy plenty of water from adjoining property, but pumping water can be got at a depth of about 15 feet. Price only $[illegible].

BARGAIN.
12½ acres of orange and lemon trees in full bearing, located near Pomona. Plenty of water. Net income annually $2500. Two-story new house, completely furnished, including a handsome piano. With the place also goes an automobile, 2 horses, 1 cow, 300 chickens, turkeys, and all tools. Price $15,000.

We have a number of other attractive propositions. See us.

BEAUMONT—BEAUMONT.

5 ACRES AND INDEPENDENCE.

LEADING EVERY OTHER ATTRACTION BECAUSE BETTER IN EVERY WAY.

Beaumont is 81 miles east of Los Angeles. As a fruit center it has a world-wide reputation, holding the first grand prize awarded at the World's Columbus Exposition to Thos. F. Miller, a farmer and fruit raiser. Twenty years in a comatose condition in the grasp of the banks it has been released at last and the interest centering about the reawakening surpasses anything of the kind experienced before in California.

PRACTICALLY FORECLOSURE PRICES.

For twenty years all progress was checked. The banks had no power to cut up the property and sell it. They were unable to find an individual or company purchaser big enough to swing it all. This company at length came to the front, securing the property practically at foreclosure prices. It will be parceled out now at prices that for this day and age are out of all proportion to the real values and lower by half than they should be as compared with similar lands everywhere else.

MOST HEALTHFUL SPOT ON EARTH.

Over 2500 feet elevation, it spreads out a broad fertile irrigable mesa. Picturesque canyons furnish pure running water, all of which will now be conserved, making these 5-acre tracts better than a gold mine. The best of apples, sweetest of pears and plums and the juiciest grapes grow there now without irrigation at all. Just stop and consider the value of such land with sufficient water.

PUT YOUR MONEY INTO REAL ESTATE MOTHER EARTH IS MAN'S BEST BANKER.

> Old Mother Earth is man's truest savings bank. Every investment is an interest-bearing deposit. She never repudiates a debt. She never cancels an obligation. She never tires in the service of her depositors. She never sleeps. She conserves the principal. She compounds the interest every minute of the day and night. She never forecloses. She never makes mistakes. She pays on demand. Her resources are unlimited. Pure honesty is her business philosophy. She guards her deposits with the faith of the universe. The older she grows the safer she grows and the more valuable becomes the capital entrusted to her. Though her depositors be legion, she is impartial to all; the prince and the pauper receive like justice at her hands, every blade of grass and every drop of dew adding interest to their principal and every penny always ready on demand.
> CLEARING HOUSE CERTIFICATES ARE AS GOOD AS THE WHEAT TO US. DON'T WAIT BECAUSE YOU HAVEN'T THE CASH.

The work in the first unit of the water system started last week. There will be 25,000 feet of steel mains in this first unit. A rig will commence boring for more water this week and although we do not need the water we will develop it in order that Beaumont may utilize outlying acres also.

NEVER BEFORE WERE THERE SO MANY OPENINGS FOR THE MAN ALIVE TO HIS OPPORTUNITIES.

New buildings are in course of erection. New businesses are in prospect. A new lumber yard is going in now; a newspaper will be issued very shortly. The activity is not remarkable for a world of new opportunities open up with the regeneration of this big little city.

FINEST RAILROAD FACILITIES.

Every train east and west stops at Beaumont. Its situation compels the maintenance of round-house and repair shops there forever. The Southern Pacific is said to be contemplating an outlay of $50,000 right there for new buildings and other expenses. The monthly payroll now amounts to $[illegible] for 75 men or more.

THIS IS THE TIME TO BUY.

Never again will such prices be possible. Whether you want health or independence or a 5-acre fruit orchard or success in a business of your own, or certain profit in city lots or fruit lands, this is your opportunity and the sooner you come the better choice you obtain. Weekly sales run into many thousands of dollars, indicating the burning interest the people are taking in this rejuvenated town.

IT IS A CASE OF NOW! NOW! NOW!

BUY ORANGE LAND
AND MAKE MONEY FOR YOURSELF.
MONTE VISTA 5 AND 10-ACRE PLATS
ARE WITHIN THE CITY LIMITS OF ONTARIO AND WILL MAKE YOU MONEY.
I have just placed upon the market a tract of as fine orange land as can be found in the State of California, at $250 per acre up. Monte Vista is within the city limits of Ontario, the center of the biggest orange area in the State. Adjacent land is all in cultivation and has been for years, values of 5-acre tracts reaching up from $5000 all the way to $9000. There is no more productive section than that right there. There is no better soil or water. Schools, churches and every modern want is supplied in the beautiful city of Ontario. As for profit, values will grow rapidly and for orange grove homes this chance is the only one of its kind and there probably never will be another like it.

FARM LANDS

are related differently to the city than they used to be. Telephones, trolleys and rural mail and daily papers and fine schools make country life the best life. It is the most profitable, too. What is happening all around us here in California? Why, some of the very best lands have laid idle because of sparse population.

The big interior valleys have had thousands of acres waiting for the arrival of men to farm them. This day is passing. The big tracts that are desirable are getting scarce. Prices are advancing.

The Home Extension Club plan provides a way to buy in a large tract with hundreds of other families at low wholesale rates, to start your own town and soil forth. All done with greatest care as to details, skill and integrity.

Now forming the big Seventh Home Extension Colony. Come down and talk about the other six and don't miss investigating this Seventh.

Open day or evening.

HOMESEEKERS CONSIDER.
REASON, USE YOUR JUDGMENT.

Don't buy the first thing you see, just because the one to be benefited wishes you to do so.

Don't pay $15 to $30 per acre for inferior land, full of alkali or subject to overflow and located 10 to 20 miles from a railroad town. I am prepared to sell you the very best of land, level as a floor, with every condition most favorable at $15 to $20 per acre in small tracts. This land is most advantageously located, only 6 miles from Mendota, a railroad division town in Fresno county, where there is every opportunity for those seeking to establish a permanent home. The soil is very deep, is free from all injurious matter and is as rich as the valley of the Nile. If upon investigation one word of my statement is found to be untrue, I will bear all expenses of the trip.

To any one wishing to establish a colony on this entire tract, I can make an attractive price.

GOOD LAND $11.

Two years ago we organized the First Home Extension Colony at Greenfield Clark Colony, Monterey county; it cost our members only $17 and $27 an acre, average $22; it now sells from $60 to $125 an acre.

One and a half years ago we organized Alpaugh; we have not finished all the irrigation works yet, but got the water and enough to insure the deal, and it now sells at $40 to $60 an acre; it cost our members $19 an acre.

Last February, only eight months ago, we put on Wasco to club members at $22.50; it now actually sells at $40 to $60 an acre, and some held at $100 an acre.

There is only one crop of land, and what is the use of coming West to grow up with the country if you don't have some of the country in your possession to grow up with?

Open day and evening. We are waiting to discuss the subject of the big Seventh Home Extension Colony (now forming) with you; better look into it.

BRADLEY & DEWEY'S
ORANGE GROVE BARGAINS.

Orange groves are the surest and safest investment in California today. There has not been a failure of crops in ten years; arrangements for marketing are now down almost to an exact science, so that the grower has no worry on that score, and besides he is guaranteed a reasonable if not a large profit. In most instances you can buy a large crop just ready to harvest if you hurry up, and buy now. We have a fine list of selected groves. We are well known in Pomona, and will give you a fair deal. Our auto is ready at all times to take you out and show you. Look over prices and descriptions below. We have cheaper ones, also higher-priced ones up to $2000 per acre.

$8000—10 acres full bearing navels, fine, except 4 rows of Jaffas which are good; fine water right, located ¾ mile south of Claremont college; about 1200 boxes now on trees; easy terms on this.

$7000—10 acres navels, near car line, in Ontario; light crop, but has been fumigated and fertilized this year; fine trees; first-class water right; cement head ditch, etc.; more than worth the money.

$1300—10 acres, west of Upland; 2 acres full-bearing lemons, balance full-bearing oranges; fine crop; 2 inches of mountain water to the acre; will more than pay interest from the start.

$2500—20 acres lemons, full bearing crops, fine now on trees; northwest of Uplands; have had fine care, and are now in fine condition; good terms can be had, and these groves will make a man independent.

$40,000—40-acre grove, 30 acres full-bearing navels, 5 acres full-bearing Valencias, 5 acres lemons, also full bearing; good crop; 8-room house and barn; splendid location on car line, above Uplands; you stand good chance to make 30 per cent. on your investment besides the crop on this grove, and terms can be had on it.

$52,000—43 acres, 3 acres lemons, nearly all the balance full-bearing navels; excellent crop; 1 mile northwest of Claremont; free canyon water; house, barn and lemon-house; will take city income for part of this; also will subdivide and sell part.

$8000—10 acres navels on Holt ave., the main drive between Pomona and Ontario; large trees, light crop; good water right; more than worth the money.

$5000—4 acres navels; good crop; 4-room house; 1 mile from Pomona, on Kingsley Tract; a fine little home on which you can make a living.

$6000—6½ acres, 7-year-old navels; full crop; on main auto road from Pasadena to San Bernardino; Mesa ave., due north of Pomona, near foothills; cement head ditch; trees perfectly even; worth more money today.

$7000—5 acres full-bearing navels; 5-room house; fine crop, fine location, near school; good terms; will make a family a good living. This is worth looking up. Owner will move out and you move in.

$6000—4 acres full-bearing navels, fine 5-room cottage, close to Pomona, on Fifth ave.; good crop now on trees; a good home, ready to move into.

$6300—5½ acres fine navels; row of large walnut trees on 3 sides, which pay well; fine crop on trees; cement head ditch; fine place for a home; 2-3 the price; no better groves are selling. You can get good terms on this.

FOR SALE—
470 ACRES.
CHOICE ORANGE LAND
With an abundance of free water.
$45 AN ACRE.

This tract is admirably located for Valencia, as well as navel oranges, being frostless and protected on all sides. It lies east of Porterville, and surrounded by groves from which they are picking ripe fruit at this time, samples of which we have in our office. Water is free and in abundance, the property having a constant flow of 100 inches. Packing houses only half a mile. This locality is in a class by itself, as the fruit ripens fully six weeks ahead of any other section in the State. Under these conditions it is hard to say what this property will be worth in a few years, for its earning capacity is ahead of any other section, and the available orange land in this locality is all taken up. There is about 210 acres of this tract ideal orange land, and located as it is, having free water, would be cheap at $200 an acre. There are 100 acres of rich sub-irrigated bottom land that would cut 10 tons of alfalfa hay per acre, and would be a bargain at $150 an acre, and 170 acres producing an abundance of feed would make a good cattle ranch. We have personally inspected this property, and do not hesitate to recommend it as a real bargain. The place would be cheap as a whole at $150 an acre. The owner needs money, and we can deliver the property for $45 an acre.

FOR SALE—PIANOS.

BIG THINGS DOING THIS WEEK AT THE FITGERALD BARGAIN HOUSE.
Prices on slightly used pianos forced down to make room that is very badly needed. Every instrument is in good condition, having been through our efficient repair department. It might be interesting for you to know the reason for our overstock of used pianos. It is this, people are every day coming to realize more fully the value of the Lindeman, Simplex and Pianolene player pianos and are willing to give up their Steinways, Regents, Chickerings, etc. to possess them.
We will make the terms to suit you and will take your check or local clearinghouse certificates for the first payment. There is no lack of confidence here.

LOCAL INDUSTRIALS— Local dividend payers will never be lower. The advances on them the coming months ought to net the fortunate purchaser 20 per cent. to 50 per cent. Home stocks and bonds are particularly attractive just now. See us.

MINING— The best local buys today are the Mt. Gaines, Johnnie Con., Bonnie Clare and Granite. There is no half-way business about a mine, there is nothing that pays half so well. The Mt. Gaines stock represents a paying, producing mine, A REAL MINE, the dividend kind. There will be a day when Mt. Gaines will be selling at dollars instead of cents. Hard times will not keep these mines from paying dividends soon. Get our prices.

EXCHANGE— We have listed with us over one hundred thousand dollars worth of clear real estate, most of which is income property, to exchange for Mt. Gaines. Some of this we can exchange for any of the above stocks. There is no excuse for you to hold these stocks if you want real estate. We can allow you a 20 per cent. advance on your stock in exchange and place real estate at actual cash value.

BUY AND SELL— We buy and sell all active stocks. Get our prices if you are in market to buy. CON. M. & I. CO., 224 Citizens' Nat. Bank Bldg. Members L. A.-Nevada Exchange. 10

CASH HOARDS LURE YEGGMEN.

Influx of Thieves Due to Stocking-leg Practice.

More Dangerous Than Ever to Keep Money in House.

"Wise" Crooks Consipre to Raid Los Angeles.

"Hoarded money in the homes means easy money for yeggs."

That is what a porch climber, picked up last Friday by the police on suspicion of being one of the perpetrators of recent robberies in the residence district, said to Detective Flammer, and the detective knew what he meant. Timid citizens, who fancy that their money is safer hidden in the house than behind the steel doors of a bank vault, are likely to learn what the cynically candid crook meant before long.

The criminals known to the police as "yeggmen" laugh at the attempts of householders to find hiding places for money that are supposed to baffle a burglar. Robbing the man who is his own banker is a feat that they class with taking candy from a baby.

And the yeggmen are swarming into Los Angeles to get the "easy money" that has been taken out of banks and hoarded by all classes of people. The man "sweated" by Detective Flammer admitted, or rather boasted, that the guild of crooks was making a concerted foray into Los Angeles for the express purpose of cleaning out the residence districts. They may not be organized in a band but there is a sort of "gentleman's agreement" among them to make a systematic, house-to-house canvass in the dark of the moon for funds.

"We had noted an unusual flocking of crooks to the city," said Capt. Flammer yesterday, "and wondered at first why there should be so many more headed this way now than in other years at the same season. We always expect a good many of them in the tourist season, but this year they are beating the tourists to the Coast. The police have picked up and driven out of the city quite a number before they had time to make any raids. We are doing that preventive work all the time, but of course cannot catch all the crooks as soon as they strike town.

"You must understand that the criminals known as yeggmen are smart, wide-awake fellows, who read the papers carefully and keep pretty well posted on affairs that may affect their operations. They know as well as any other newspaper readers that one of the causes of the financial stringency is the withdrawal of money from banks by depositors, and they know by experience that in such times as these people of moderate means are more likely than at other times to have money in their houses. The predatory classes have keen noses for plunder and know where to look for it.

"That the crooks really have their eyes on the little hoards is no mere suspicion, nor is it a guess of the police. There are ways of inducing a crook to talk, and when he gets started he tells a great many things that you would think he would try to keep to himself. Not only the fellow we had here Friday, but another nameless wanderer brought in for inspection the next day, let it out that the yeggs were looking for easy graft in Los Angeles, and were hurrying to get here and help themselves to loose change.

"Any old place looks good enough now is the way they put it. In other words, modest residences which a burglar would never look twice at in ordinary times, are almost sure to pan out a few hundred dollars now, and it is easy to work them, because the occupants never have been troubled by thieves, and have an idea that burglars pick out the swell places for raids. That is just where the modest householder is going to get fooled when the yeggs get busy, and they are already at work.

"Of course, the police are going to be blamed for the activity of the swarm of crooks. Every man who loses his hidden wad, every woman whose room is ransacked for the money she has taken out of bank, is going to raise a row about the inefficiency of the police. The papers will talk about a crime wave, perhaps, and the more the thing is talked about the keener the yeggs will be to get in here and do business.

"Now, it is obvious that the policemen on beats can't watch every house all the time. Places that would not need close watching ordinarily are just the ones that are likely to be visited now, and the people who can least afford to lose are the ones who will miss their stocking hoards in the mornings. There is only one safe place for money, and the sooner it gets back there the easier the police will feel."

CRITICS AFTER BURTON.

Chicago Professor, Who Thinks the Second Coming of Christ a Myth, Speaks Here Tomorrow.

Unusual interest attaches to the visit to this city of Prof. Ernest DeWitt Burton of the University of Chicago, and editor of the Biblical World, the official publication of that institution. Prof. Burton, in a current number of the magazine, intimated that it is a great waste of good time on the part of Christians to continue looking with eagerness for the end of the world, and they had better use all their energies in helping along the Christ life, by living it. He will address a meeting of the Baptist ministers at the First Baptist Church on Monday morning, his address coming at 11 o'clock, though the meeting is called for 10:45. His address will be on the subject of "Education, as related to the work in the foreign field," and it is likely that he will have a great audience of Bible students, who are curious to know just what he may say on the subject treated in his editorial, which was freely quoted in the telegraph columns of The Times of November 7. Critics of his theories, as there stated, are already on his trail.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT.

Dr. C. R. Knox, who has been mentioned heretofore in connection with the unsavory Kurpiers sanatorium on 7 yle Heights, is getting into trouble in another direction. Knox has been employed with the Yosemite Mineral Springs Company, and is charged with embezzlement of the funds of the company. Yesterday he was arrested on a warrant and released on putting up $25 cash bail. Mr. Looker, an employé of the company, said last night that there are dozens of charges of the same nature to be brought against Knox, and that the company will prosecute him to the limit.

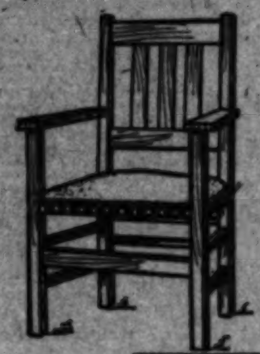
High Grade Furniture at Low Grade Prices---Bargains Out of the Ordinary

The fact that we are reducing our stock by forcing prices down to a lower point than ever before in our history has stimulated business to wonderful extent. You know when the Los Angeles Furniture Co. says "Bargains" there is something in it. We have never been given to unsupported "hurrahs." You will find honest reductions in effect all through the store. We mention a few today.

$9.50 Stickley Chair $7.15



Get an idea of the design from the picture. This is one of the Stickley's leaders. It is, of course, made of selected oak. The finish is weathered and the seat is upholstered in Spanish Morocco leather.

Another one of the Stickley leaders. We have it in both the fumed and weathered finish. It is one of those easy rockers where comfort has not been sacrificed for art's sake. The seat is upholstered in Spanish Morocco leather.

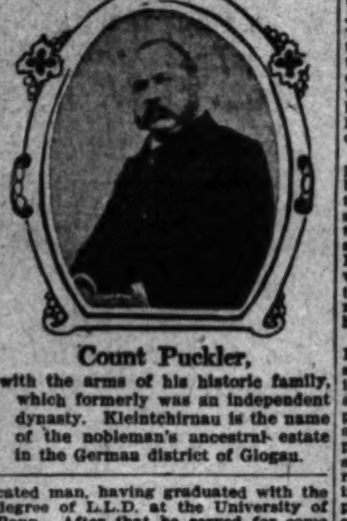
FIERCEST JEW-BAITER IN WORLD IS EXALTED GERMAN NOBLEMAN.

Count Puckler in Habit of Assaulting Hebrews Whenever He Meets Them, but Met His Match Once in a Plucky Little Israelite Who Gave Him a Terrific Thrashing—Has Organized a Miniature Army.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)



Count Puckler, with the arms of his historic family, which formerly was an independent dynasty. Kleintchirnau is the name of the nobleman's ancestral estate in the German district of Glogau.

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—Count Walter Puckler, the highly born German aristocrat, who devotes his life to a crusade against the Jews, has just been released after serving a term of four months' imprisonment for publicly inciting the populace to violent acts against the Hebrew inhabitants of the district of Glogau, in which his ancestral estate, Klein-Tchirnau, is situated. This is by no means the first time that Count Puckler has been punished by imprisonment for a similar offense; on the contrary, all his sentences together amount to an aggregate of between four and five years' incarceration, apart from which he has paid upwards of $12,000 in fines imposed on him for insulting or persecuting individual Jews or for advocating violent measures against the Semitic race collectively.

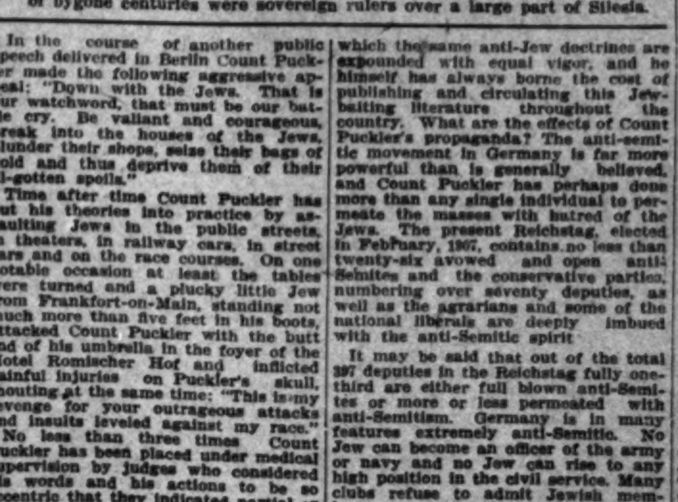
This time, as on every other occasion on which he has been released from prison, Count Puckler has publicly reaffirmed his adherence to anti-Semitism of the most extreme form, and has declared his intention of devoting himself to the movement until death overtakes him. What lends additional weight to his agitation in Germany, where royal personages and aristocrats are almost worshiped by the plebeian population, is the fact that he comes of a very ancient family of nobility, which was formerly an independent dynasty. The Pucklers of bygone centuries were sovereign rulers over a small country situated in that part of Germany now known as Silesia, and although their dominions are now merged in the kingdom of Prussia, the members of the Puckler family possess, now and for all time to come, absolute equality of birth and rank with all the ruling monarchs of Europe. Count Walter Puckler may, therefore, accost the Kaiser with a familiar slap on the shoulder as his equal.

Count Puckler's estate of Klein-Tchirnau, together with a moderate fortune, supply him with sufficient revenues to allow him to devote his whole time to the destruction of the Jews. He is 47 years old, a highly educated man, having graduated with the degree of L.L.D. at the University of Bonn. After that he served for some time in the army, from which he retired with the rank of lieutenant. Then he entered the civil service, which he quitted in order to devote himself exclusively to his self-appointed mission in life.

One of the most remarkable episodes of Count Puckler's anti-Jewish campaign was the formation of small armies of mounted retainers for the purpose of frightening Jews from his own estate. But so few Jews ventured in the vicinity of this redoubtable anti-Semite's residence that he kept his warriors in practice by undertaking expeditions into neighboring properties. On one of these expeditions Count Puckler and his band chanced to come across a farm yard where thrashing was in progress under the supervision of the steward of the estate. On seeing smoke arising from the machine, the Count, who abhors modern inventions which he declares tend to promote the supremacy of Jewish capitalists, dispatched a patrol who so terrified the farm hands that they sought refuge by creeping under the thrashing machine. The steward ordered the patrol away, whereupon the valiant Count Puckler himself rode his horse at the steward and forced him likewise to seek safety behind the machine.

On another occasion Count Puckler's patrol reported a number of women to be working in a potato field whereupon the Count led his cavalry to the attack and waving his whip forced the women to take flight helter-skelter. When sued for these eccentricities Count Puckler explained in court that the whole affair was a harmless joke, but the judge took a different view of the matter and imposed a fine of $90 on him.

A cursory glance through Count Puckler's public speeches reveals something of the extraordinary fanaticism which animates this aristocratic agitator. Here is one characteristic passage: "I call upon you, my friends and fellow-countrymen, with all the patriotic fervor of my heart and with all the fire of my faith in the Christian religion to aid me in the speedy realization of an out and out anti-Semitic programme. Our programme has one essential point—the destruction of the Jews. This demand may be subdivided into five sections. First of all, we demand that it shall be made a criminal offence by law for any citizen of the German empire who is not a Jew to have any professional, commercial or financial intercourse with any citizen of the German empire who is a Jew. Secondly, we demand that it shall be made a criminal offense for any German man who is not a Jew to marry a Jewess or for a Jew to marry a maiden not of Jewish blood. Thirdly, we demand that Jews shall be prohibited by law from carrying on any trade, profession or occupation within the confines of the German empire. Fourthly, we demand that the property of all the Jews in Germany shall be confiscated by the government and applied to the benefit of the whole people. Fifthly, we demand that all Jews shall be expelled from Germany."



Count Puckler's Ancestral Castle in Glogau, Silesia.

This famous "schloss," from which its noble owner conducts his anti-Semitic crusade, for centuries has been the home of his family. The Pucklers of bygone centuries were sovereign rulers over a large part of Silesia.

In the course of another public speech delivered in Berlin Count Puckler made the following aggressive appeal: "Down with the Jews. That is our watchword, that must be our battle cry. Be valiant and courageous, break into the houses of the Jews, plunder their shops, seize their bags of gold and thus deprive them of their ill-gotten spoils."

Time after time Count Puckler has put his theories into practice by assaulting Jews in the public streets, in theaters, in railway cars, in street cars and on the race courses. On one notable occasion at least the tables were turned and a plucky little Jew from Frankfort-on-Main, standing not much more than five feet in his boots, attacked Count Puckler with the butt end of his umbrella in the foyer of the Hotel Romischer Hof and inflicted painful injuries on Puckler's skull, shouting at the same time: "This is my revenge for your outrageous attacks and insults leveled against my race."

No less than three times Count Puckler has been placed under medical supervision by judges who considered his words and his actions to be so eccentric that they indicated partial or complete insanity. On one occasion at least Count Puckler was declared by the medical experts entrusted with the task of observing him to be a lunatic and irresponsible, whereupon he was sent to a lunatic asylum instead of to prison. But the members of his family and his influential friends, soon contrived to arrange that this medical verdict should be canceled and that his release from the madhouse and formal restoration to the role of the sane should follow.

Apart from his activity on the public platform Count Puckler has written many pamphlets and manifestos in which the same anti-Jew doctrines are expounded with equal vigor, and he himself has always borne the cost of publishing and circulating this Jew-baiting literature throughout the country. What are the effects of Count Puckler's propaganda? The anti-semitic movement in Germany is far more powerful than is generally believed, and Count Puckler has perhaps done more than any other single individual to permeate the masses with hatred of the Jews. The present Reichstag, elected in February, 1907, contains no less than twenty-six avowed and open anti-Semites and the conservative parties, numbering over seventy deputies, as well as the agrarians and some of the national liberals are deeply imbued with the anti-Semitic spirit.

It may be said that out of the total 397 deputies in the Reichstag fully one-third are either full blown anti-Semites or more or less permeated with anti-Semitism. Germany is in many features extremely anti-Semitic. No Jew can become an officer of the army or navy and no Jew can rise to any high position in the civil service. Many clubs refuse to admit Jewish members; many households decline to receive them as guests. One daily paper in Berlin, the Staatsburger-Zeitung (Citizens' Gazette) is devoted to the propaganda of anti-Semitism. It was founded by Count Puckler and has a large circulation.

Carol Newberry, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Truman Newberry of Detroit and Washington.

The family of the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Oliver will furnish an after-Christmas bride in the person of Miss Elizabeth Oliver, whose engagement to M. Francis K. Stevens of New York was announced just before the bride-to-be left last week for a visit to her chum of school days, Miss Harriet Wadsworth, at the home of the latter's parents in the Genesee Valley. Former Representative and Mrs. Wadsworth have also had as their guest their kinsman, Mary Barrymore, and her thirteen-year-old daughter, the Honorable Dorothy Smith-Barry of Cheshire and London, Eng. This is Lady Barrymore's first visit to America since her marriage in 1889, to the famous Irish yachtsman, and the trip was made primarily to have her daughter see the family and native home of which she is very proud.

The old resident and southern element in society rallied around Miss Jane Carlisle, whose marriage to Frederick Lathrop Allen of New York was a closing event of the week. Owing to a difference in religious belief between the bride and groom, the wedding took place at the bride's home, Rev. Father Stafford of St. Patrick's Church performing the ceremony in the presence of a large bridal party. Miss Laura Carlisle was her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. John G. Carlisle, Jr., the matron of honor. Miss Marjorie Kendall of New York City, Miss Martha Calhoun of New York and Charleston, Miss Elizabeth Ewing, Miss Lucinda Bateson and Miss Ruth Gale of Frederick, Md., were bridesmaids, and Messrs. Henry Hemmens and Louis King of New York were ushers. William Allen of Malone, N. Y., served his brother as best man.

Another wedding of the near future in which Washingtonians take keen interest is that of Miss Patrice Egan, daughter of United States Minister to Denmark and Mrs. Maurice Francis Egan, and Elmer Murray of Los Angeles. Miss Egan is now with her father in Copenhagen, presiding over the American legation there until the arrival of her mother, who is still in Washington with her younger daughter, Miss Carmel Egan. Both young women are cultured far beyond the point usually considered necessary for young women with nothing but a social career before them, and both are seemingly unspoiled by their God-given beauty.

Mrs. Harriet Christy Sheridan and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Williams of Los Angeles; R. de Lessire Foster of San Diego, Delos Arnold of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Dumington, Mrs. Y. R. Jackson and Mrs. Ida Foresco of San Francisco are spending the week-end in Washington. Mr. Arnold will probably spend the winter with his son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Arnold, at their home in Cleveland Park, D. C.

TONGUES LASH OVER LANGUAGE.

SPANISH TEACHERS IN MERRY WAR OF CONVERSATION.

Dispute Between Rafael Gallegos and Ricardo Uribe Takes on a Hot Tone, in Words Alone, Each Claiming That the Other Does not Plant Seeds of Pure Castilian.

Students of the Spanish tongue have received a rude jolt, and are wondering whether, in return for the payment of their money, they are learning the pure Castilian accent, such as is spoken by His Majesty the King and the dignitaries of the Spanish court, or simply the cheap cholo variety, such as can be learned in any railroad construction camp or tamale stand in Southern California.

The disquietude is caused by a little argument in which Prof. Rafael M. Gallegos, late professor of the National Institute at Lima and other South American institutions of learning, and one Señor Ricardo Uribe, likewise a teacher of the language of the dons, are engaging. The hot southern blood of the two is thoroughly stirred, and each declares that the other is an imposter and a fake.

Señor Gallegos makes the claim that he has in his possession a letter from the private secretary of the King of Spain, thanking him for the courtesies extended to His Majesty, and expressing the undying regard of the King for Don Rafael. Señor Uribe contends that the letter is either a myth or a forgery, and claims he has a letter from one Emilio de Torres, private secretary of the King, branding Gallegos as a prevaricator and imposter.

Uribe does not state why he took the trouble to question the King regarding his competitor in the local teaching field, but the idea is gently conveyed that Uribe, with all of a true Spaniard's reverence for the throne, is deeply pained that any one should claim the patronage of his royal master unlawfully, and furthermore should endeavor to turn such patronage to any end so base as vile money getting.

"It is not fitting that a teacher of language in this city should pretend to royal patronage," said Uribe. "I have no personal feeling against young Gallegos, despite his frequent attacks upon me.

"But I could not bear to have any unworthy person claim that he was favored by our beloved ruler. His offense would have received a severe penalty if he had been in Spain at the time. He is guilty of disrespect. Gallegos is not a Spaniard. He was born in Peru. His accent is excruciating to a native. I pity him and wish him well, but he must refrain from posing as a subject of the King and under his special favor."

Uribe expresses deep sorrow over the necessity which forces him to expose Gallegos, and insists that it is only his deep love and reverence for the King that induces him to take the step.

Gallegos gives another version to the story, however. He insists that Uribe is actuated by jealousy and malice. He charges that for the past two years the man has been persecuting him, sending anonymous letters and trying in every way possible to make things uncomfortable.

"He is madly jealous of me," said Gallegos yesterday. "I am a Castilian. I teach the pure Castilian Spanish, while he is but an Indian. He comes from Sonora and is neither Mexican nor Spanish. His pronunciation is dreadful; he is wholly unfitted to teach the beautiful Spanish tongue. He is an Indian, and he talks as an Indian. Time and again he has persecuted me and tried to get my pupils away from me, but they have come and told me, and he has profited nothing by his base attacks.

"He has said that I am a plagiarist; that the articles which I write for the papers are not my own work. He says this of me, who have been a journalist since I was 16 years old. He has taken my articles of Spanish literature and has held them up to ridicule before his classes. But it has worried me not at all. I can prove my assertions. I have my diplomas from the chief institutions of learning of South America. I have letters and papers to prove my claims."

The famous letter from the King, which seems to have started the present difficulty, is a very inoffensive document and contains nothing calculated to stir the fighting blood of the Spanish dons. Translated, it is as follows:

"The secretary of His Majesty, the King. I kiss your hand, Sr. Don Rafael Gallegos, and have the pleasure to advise you that your letter and the paper accompanying have been placed in the hands of His Majesty, the King Our Lord, and I send the thanks of his august Majesty for your friendliness and attention.

"The Count of Ondino takes pleasure on this occasion of offering you the assurance of his most distinguished esteem."

Gallegos states that the letter was sent him in acknowledgment of a copy of a newspaper containing an article by him on the friendly relations existing between the new Queen and her subjects. The envelope bears the seal of the King of Spain.

Uribe insists that he has been submitted to numerous insults by Gallegos, and that on the last occasion he thrashed him soundly. On the other hand, Gallegos claims that he is the persecuted one, and that the last time they met Uribe drew a revolver on him.

"Then my blood boiled," continued Don Rafael, "and I determined to send him to State's prison. I told him of my intention, and he quailed. Placing his revolver back in his pocket, he begged of me not to send him to prison, and said that he only drew the weapon because he feared that I would do him harm.

Meanwhile the two instructors are heaping insults on each other's heads, and the pupils are wondering.

THE MODEL TOWN OF LITTLE FARMS

Four miles from San Pedro; four miles from Redondo; one-half mile from the Interurban Electric Line

To The Home Seeker, The Home Maker And The Producer

Life holds nothing better for you in Southern California than "a little farm well tilled," with good soil, plenty of water, an equable climate, and close to Los Angeles and its markets. There's one other essential that must not be omitted—a reasonable price and terms.

We've got just the property you need. It fills the bill exactly. We have secured the famous Narbonne ranch of 1600 acres, long sought after by subdivisionists, on account of its ideal location, superior soil and ample water supply, but never before available. It has been christened "Lomita."

Lomita lies ten miles south of the city limits of Los Angeles, four miles from San Pedro, four miles from Redondo, six miles from Long Beach, and only one-half mile from Weston Station on the Interurban Electric line to San Pedro, the only line running directly to the Los Angeles city market.

The great ranch has been divided into 5-acre and 10-acre farms, with a town site of 10 acres in the center. The soil is a fertile sandy loam perfectly adapted for vegetables and all varieties of small farming. The land is slightly rolling, affording perfect drainage, the contour lending itself admirably to irrigation purposes.

The water supply is ample and is piped to each tract. You buy the water right with the land, a share going with each acre. The irrigation problem is solved.

Vegetables and berries of all kinds, particularly strawberries, do exceedingly well on this land. There is no better place for raising poultry. Alfalfa grows amazingly.

Perhaps you were not aware that the area around Los Angeles devoted to truck farming has been diminished 50 per cent. through being cut up into subdivisions, and the product has decreased accordingly; vegetable, dairy and poultry farms are needed. A ready market is close at hand, and prices well, look at the market reports and see what you can get for your produce and poultry. By the way, 850 acres in strawberries near Lomita, last year netted the owners $500 an acre. Doesn't that look good to you!

Now as to the price of these little farms. Close to Los Angeles, close to the ocean, close to a market, close to the electric line, WITH WATER AND WATER OWNERSHIP, we are asking only $850 an acre. Why, a good farmer will clear the cost of his land in a year or two, and earn a comfortable living besides. Look around a little. You will find that land near by, without water, is being held at prices no lower than ours. Surely, we are offering you a splendid bargain.

We'd almost forgotten to mention the town site of Lomita—ten acres in the center of the big tract, high and sightly. Here there will be a general store for the convenience of the colony; and free sites have been set apart for church and school. There will also be a postoffice and a long distance telephone service has already been installed. The lots will have cement walks, curbs and oiled roads. We want buyers for these lots who will build, and have put the price at about the cost of acreage plus improvements—from $125 to $250 each. Liquor traffic and pool rooms are prohibited in Lomita.

There will surely be a model colony and a fine little town at Lomita. We have already disposed of more than 100 acres, without spending a dollar in advertising. The tracts sell on sight to those who want small farms and mean business. GET AN EARLY CHOICE.

WE invite a careful inspection of Lomita and a rigid investigation into the claims made for it

IT will cost you nothing to visit Lomita. Free tickets at our office. Go any day or hour you choose

BEAUTY'S QUEEN.

'MUMS GIVEN FLORAL CROWN.

Superb Entries Take Prizes at Bloom Display.

Beautiful Japanese Blossom Leads in Awards.

Many Other Honors on Last Night of Big Show.

The award of prizes at the autumn flower show of the Southern California Horticultural Society was made last night and one of the most successful exhibitions ever held by the society came to a close. The placing of the prizes was a difficult task, as many of the exhibitors refused to accept any awards, claiming they had not entered in competition, but simply to assist in making the show a success.

Many fine blooms, not shown during the first two days of the exhibition, were brought out yesterday and the attendance was the largest of any of the three days of the show. During the evening, particularly, there was a large attendance, and at 10:30 o'clock, the hour set for dismantling the hall, it was found difficult to induce the visitors to leave. When they did go it was with great bouquets of cut flowers clasped in their arms.

The first prizes in class 1, chrysanthemums, were divided between Bernard Whitehead of Pasadena and Dr. W. Jarvis Barlow of Los Angeles. The first prize for the best twelve blooms—yellow—was awarded to Mr. Whitehead for a remarkable collection of blossoms. All other colors in the class—red, white, pink, bronze and assorted colors—went to Dr. Barlow.

The Barlow entry was a notable one, no better blooms ever having been shown, in spite of the fact that the weather has not been good for chrysanthemum growing, owing to the early rains.

In class 2, for the best vase of cut flowers, competition limited to prize winners in class 1, no award was made owing to the fact that all of the entries of the prize winners already had taken prizes and under the rules of the society it is not allowable to grant two prizes to any single entry.

In class 4, for the best single bloom, the first prize for all colors but white was awarded to Dr. Barlow, the Redondo Floral Company taking the prize for white.

'MUM NOVELTIES.

The first prize in the class for chrysanthemum novelties was awarded to Dr. Barlow. All the Barlow entries were grown by W. W. Felgate, head gardener for Dr. Barlow. The prizes in the novelty class were limited to those blooms introduced during 1906 and 1907.

All first prizes in classes 5, for specimen plants, and 6, for single blooms from specimen plants, were awarded to Howard and Smith. Though not grown for exhibition purposes, the Howard and Smith entries were all exceptionally beautiful and worthy of prizes. As the exhibit was not entered for exhibition, the exhibitors refused to accept the prizes, so awards of merit were substituted.

In class 8, carnations, fifty blooms to a vase, the Whittlesey Floral Company was awarded first prizes for those varieties exhibited. The exhibition of the Whittlesey Company did not include all of the named varieties, however. In class 10, same varieties, twelve blooms to a vase, the Whittlesey Company also carried off first prizes in the named varieties exhibited. For all other named varieties the first prize was awarded the Oceanside Floral Company.

Though the exhibit of the Oceanside Floral Company did not contain the striking specimens of the Whittlesey collection, it was remarkably complete and all of the blooms were very fine.

The first prize for carnation novelties was awarded Louis F. Horner of Montecito. The Horner entry consisted of three unnamed varieties of seedling carnations. The excellence of the flowers impressed the judges, all of whom were unanimous in declaring that the varieties were worthy of names. An unnamed white variety was the star of the collection and was one of the most notable blooms in the entire show.

The carnations were not entered for prizes, but the judges were unanimous in deciding that a first prize was due and made the award without communicating with the exhibitor.

SOME NOTABLE ROSES.

The collection of roses entered, though small, container some notable blooms, and in these classes the judges found their work far from easy. So evenly graded were the different entries that it was found necessary to compare the blooms carefully in order to judge fairly. Miss Sara C. Reese was awarded first prizes for her Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white Maman Cochet, pink Maman Cochet and Marie Van Houtte. The California Rose Company won first awards for Liberty, Ulrich Brunner, Cecil Brunner, Golden Gate, Bridesmaid, American Beauty, La France, Solfrana, Perle des Jardins, Marechal Niel, Queen of Edgely, Papa Gontier and Madam de Chatenay.

Miss Reese's Kaiserin Augusta Victorias were particularly commented upon and were pronounced excellent specimens. The size of the California Rose Company's collection and the number of named varieties exhibited was remarkable, considering the season of the year.

The first prize for novelty roses was awarded to Howard & Smith, but, as the exhibitors declined to accept a prize, the award was changed to honorable mention.

The first prize for best display of dahlias, twelve or more varieties, not less than fifty blooms, was awarded to Miss Sara C. Reese. No second award was made in this class.

In Class 13, for cut flowers, the first prize was awarded to C. B. Boothe of South Pasadena for his collection of chrysanthemums.

The first prize for ornamental palms in Class 14 was awarded to Howard & Smith, who also received first award for Kentia balmoreana and Kentia fosteriana in the same class. The award was declined, and honorable mention substituted. The first prize for the best collection of ornamental plants in the same class was awarded to E. H. Rust of South Pasadena. Howard & Smith received the award for the best collection of flowering plants in the same class.

HUMBLE MARIGOLD WINS.

A special award of merit in the novelty class was made to Miss Sara C. Reese for her collection of Burbank's lemon ball marigolds.

The first prize for the best collection of economic tropical plants was awarded to D. W. Coolidge of Pasadena. The Coolidge collection created much interest among fruit growers.

The first prize for cactus in pots went to Theodore Payne. The collection contained some rare varieties, many of them very ornamental.

There being no class for sweet peas, owing to the fact that the flowers are far out of season, Walter Raymond was awarded a special certificate of merit and commendation for his Christmas sweet peas, a new variety, which receives its name from the fact that it is in bloom at Christmas time. The growing of the Christmas sweet pea is considered by florists an important achievement.

E. H. Rust received a special award for the elegantissima fern, owing to the fact that the variety was not included on the premium list. For the same reason a like award was made A. W. Rose for his entry of Whitmani fern. Both of the specimens were exceptionally fine and worthy of blue ribbons.

No award could be made for the best exhibition of aquatics, owing to the fact that the two exhibitors, E. D. Sturtevant and William Hertrich, pooled their interests. The aquatic exhibit was one of the most noteworthy in the show.

The first prize for the best plant novelty was awarded Mr. Dietrich on his Alocasia steudnereifolia. The second prize went to D. W. Coolidge for his Ficus pandurata.

All the way through, the awards met with universal satisfaction, and everyone expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the manner in which the show had been conducted. Though there were fewer entries in some of the classes than had been expected, those that appeared were of a high order and earned the prizes they received.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mothers' Congress.

A large attendance of out-of-town mothers' circles is promised for the meeting of the California Congress of Mothers' and Child Study Circles at the Woman's Clubhouse next Wednesday. Great care has been taken in arranging the programme and no interesting or essential feature is missing.

The evening entertainment has been planned as a special courtesy from the mothers to the teachers of the city and vicinity. The Polytechnic High School orchestra will play at the reception and pupils from the same school will sing Spanish songs. Miss Virginia Grose will give a costume dance, "La Cachuca."

The event of the evening will be the talk on India given by Henry Ballantyne, M.A. He is a noted traveler, and has had unique experiences all over the world. He was born in India and was an American consul there for many years. The talk will be illustrated with stereopticon views.

Mrs. Gertrude Parsons will direct the music Wednesday evening and Miss Katheryn Stone will have charge of it during the day's sessions. The meetings are open to the public.

Cliff Dwellings Association.

Mrs. A. J. Eaton of No. 2419 South Flower street will entertain the members of the Cliff Dwellings Association, of which she is vice-regent, with a luncheon Tuesday at 1 p.m. A number of Long Beach members will be present, the regent of the California branch, Mrs. William L. Riddle, among them.

Foreign Relief Association.

The Jewish Woman's Foreign Relief Association will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the assembly room of the B'nai B'rith temple. The special business of the meeting will be to plan a series of benefit socials, ranging from card parties and afternoon teas to literary and musical entertainments. The proceeds of these affairs are to be devoted to the establishment of an educational branch of the association for the benefit of Jewish immigrants, and especially sufferers from foreign persecution. Mrs. Bertha Hirsch Baruch, the president, will read, during the meeting, extracts from notable addresses made on the occasion of the 250th anniversary of Jewish settlement in America.

Friday Afternoon Club.

A brand new club of young maids and matrons has been started in the city, to meet the second and fourth Friday afternoons of the month, hence the name adopted, the Friday Afternoon Club. Many of the members are musicians, and the purpose of the little circle is for musical, literary and any sort of improvement and entertainment that suggests itself to the fertile minds of the members. Needlework is to be a special feature, and this makes the Friday Afternoon Club unique in at least one particular. The initial meeting was held last week at the home of Miss Maud Wood, No. 2011 La Salle street. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Jessie Marshall; secretary, Miss Marie Schumann; treasurer, Miss Mabel Fisher; vice-president, Miss Florence Thresher. The membership is limited to thirty, and the present list includes Misses Jessie and Maud Marshall, Marie Schuman, Florence Thresher, Helen Thresher, Mabel Fisher, Maud Adams, Elizabeth Richards, Annie Richards, Beryl French, Henrietta Mossbacker, Beatrice Cutter and Mmes. W. H. Nelson and John Cocke. The next meeting on November 22 will be held at the residence of Miss Adams, No. 1815 Roosevelt avenue.

Press Club.

The Woman's Press Club has decided to hold only one meeting a month for the future, combining the literary features with the purely social. Tomorrow the members will have luncheon at the Westminster Hotel, and after luncheon Mrs. Ina Nixon Hopkins will direct an attractive programme.

Treble Clef Club.

The Treble Clef Club has prevailed upon Sig. Leandro Campanari, brother of the baritone, who is spending the winter here, to direct one or more of its concerts. Campanari has had an interesting career from a musical standpoint. As a child he was well known as a violinist, and was introduced to the London Musical Society by Sir Julius Benedict. He traveled in Italy as a musical prodigy at the age of 12 years. At 14 he entered the Conservatory of Milan under Antonio Bazzini, and later studied under Franco Faccio. He has been a conductor in London, Paris, Milan, and has composed a number of musical works. The members of the Treble Clef Club will give a reception in honor of Sig. Campanari at Symphony Hall in the Blanchard building the afternoon of November 21, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Charles Travers, the president, will be assisted in receiving by the ladies of the board, including: Mmes. Edwin H. Cooper, Edwin W. Sargent, C. V. Paoli-Guidicelli, A. G. Fruhling, F. Thoroughman, William John Scoll, Fred Hooker Jones, Walter G. Eisenmeyer, Edwin W. Freeman, and Miss Gertrude Dixon.

RECITAL AND PLAY.

Interesting events at the Cumnock School of Expression during the past week include a recital by the intermediate class of the expression department, with a one-act comedy, "The Gentle Jury;" a spirited presentation of Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," Friday evening, by the '08 academic department. There were several hundred guests.

I had made arrangements with a local dealer to take my entire line of furnishings and hats off my hands Nov. 1st. But owing to the conditions of the money market he was unable to raise the sum agreed upon, consequently I still have my furnishing and hat departments. I had ordered my clothing for my enlarged store, as the same is arriving daily, that I have no room on account of the large space occupied by these goods. Hence I hold this sale of men's clothing, offering values that would appeal to the most conservative—values never before placed before the buying public.

WORTH A FORTUNE.

BIG GEM FOR KING EDWARD.

GETS LARGEST DIAMOND FOR BIRTHDAY GIFT.

British Empire Celebrates Event With Military and Civil Pageants, While Ruler Receives Many Presents from All Parts of the World. New Lord Mayo rinstalled.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The birthday of King Edward, who was born November 9, 1841, was observed throughout the British Empire with the customary military and naval salutes and displays. His Majesty is observing the event at Sandringham, where the King and Queen of Spain and the Queen of Norway, in addition to many members of the royal family, are staying.

The morning was occupied in receiving an immense number of congratulatory telegrams, letters and presents from all parts of the world, one of the most notable events being the presentation to the King of the Cullinane diamond, the largest known, estimated to be worth $750,000, and donated to His Majesty by the executive assembly of the Transvaal as a token of loyalty of the people of that country. The presentation was made by Sir Richard Solomon, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal, representing the government of the colony. This afternoon the King and Queen were entertained by the tenantry of Sandringham at dinner.

The great event of the day in London was the Lord Mayor's show, which was a distinct improvement upon the second rate circus-like parades of past years. The services of a professional pageant-maker were called in, with the result that he organised a historic procession, representing all the King Edwards from Edward the Confessor, to Edward VII, each group forming a distinctive cavalcade arrayed in costumes like those of the period represented, the reign of Edward VII being symbolised by a car entitled, "The Harvest of the Peacemakers." It consisted of a real harvest wagon drawn by eight horses and bearing the fruits of peace.

The route of the procession was elaborately decorated, and the pageant was veiwed by enormous throngs of sightseers. The new Lord Mayor of London, Sir John C. Bell, who was elected September 28, was formally installed in office today.

Twenty business places at Bownell, Ind., were burned Friday night. Loss, $150,000.

TRACTION DEAL ON IN CHICAGO.

THREE MAGNATES FROM NEW YORK BEGIN NEGOTIATIONS.

They Confer With Representatives of Street Railway Interests in Lake City Regarding Proposition Involving Capital of Four Hundred Million Dollars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The arrival of three New York traction magnates in Chicago today gave rise to reports that the negotiations for the long-expected merger of the surface and elevated railroads in this city were at last under way.

The proposed merger involves more than $400,000,000.

The visitors were August Belmont, Theodore P. Shonts, head of the New York Interborough Traction Company, and Frank H. Hedley, general manager of the same combine. Upon their arrival they immediately held a two-hour conference with Thomas E. Mitten, president of the Chicago City Railway Company.

"Mr. Belmont is on his way to Cincinnati, and I am going with him," said Mr. Shonts. "Mr. Hedley is going to St. Louis Monday. We have transacted some business here, but that I will not discuss. We looked into the surface and elevated railroad problem in Chicago."

Before going to St. Louis Mr. Hedley will confer again with President Mitten, with Clarence Knight, president of the Chicago and Oak Park elevated, and with other elevated and surface railway officials.

GAVE AWAY MILLION.

Late President of Burlington Road Protected Depositors of Bank of Which He Was Director.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the death of Charles E. Perkins, former president of the Burlington Railroad system, comes the revelation of a story in his private career in which he voluntarily gave $1,000,000 of his private fortune to reimburse the depositors of a broken bank in which he held only $10,000 worth of stock and of which he had been elected a director without his knowledge or consent.

The revelation is made by Charles E. Dawes, president of a big Chicago bank and former Comptroller of the Currency. In relating the circumstance to Mr. Dawes, Mr. Perkins said:

"I was elected a director without my own knowledge, but the fact remains that I did allow my name to be used as that of a director, and thus may have influenced some persons to become depositors. Because of that possibility, I determined to save the depositors and other creditors from loss."

DEPUTY EVIL SMELLS ALOFT.

Little Cure Now for Abuses Like Kaufman Case.

Bad Debt Collectors Carry Bunch of Stars.

County Commission Urged as Means of Relief.

Since his exposure for intimidating a woman with his authority, Deputy Sheriff J. S. Kaufman has disappeared. He did not go home after being called to the office of the District Attorney and informed that his wrong-doing was known.

His wife says he called her up and learned from her that a Deputy Sheriff was waiting at the house to see him. He has not been home since then, and she fears he has killed himself.

After leaving the office of the District Attorney, however, Kaufman did call upon the woman whom he had tried to bulldoze into criminal relations under threat of arrest. She met him at the door with a carriage whip. He let out one yell and fled down the street with the woman in pursuit, flourishing the whip. As he disappeared around a corner, he called back: "I will get even with you for this."

Some of Kaufman's business associates believe he has gone to Mexico. It appears that he has been a small political worker in the Second and Third wards, and probably owed his star to his political activity.

His swift, severe punishment undoubtedly will serve as a warning to other officers who are up to the same tricks. But it will not settle the evil. The system, and not the Sheriff to whom he owed appointment, is to blame. As long as the law makes it possible to pass out official badges of authority as freely as cigars, there will be terrible abuses.

This man Kaufman—the Deputy Sheriff—was a collection agent.

HAVE PRIVATE STAFFS.

Although it is denied by the various constables and the Sheriff, it undoubtedly is the fact that most of the collection agencies have an officer of some kind attached to their staffs. It is convenient for the collection agents on account of the great number of papers they have to serve, but it is rough on the public in some instances. Any number of cases have been reported to the courts wherein bad debtors or unfortunate debtors have been threatened with arrest and bulldozed—particularly women who are ignorant of the law.

There is really no reason why a collection agent should have a private arresting officer any more than that he should have a private judge and jury.

Several firms who do this work in Los Angeles are an admirable and absolutely necessary convenience to the business world. Some of the others are not of a character to be trusted with a private police force.

Some of them make a practice of having their collectors conspicuously dressed, so that they become well known, and their presence in front of a house or at a man's office is as significant as though he carried a sign reading, "Here lives a dead-beat."

This trick is nothing short of blackmail.

Another evil is the abusive letter.

"We thought," the letter begins, "that you were a man possessed of at least some of the elements of common decency. We thought that your sense of honor was at least sufficient to prevent your being sued for your own wedding clothes, etc., etc."

This letter is used to elicit some kind of a reply from a debtor who persistently refuses to pay attention to a bill.

SOME SORRY RESULTS.

Sometimes it is used with very unhappy results.

Recently an attorney received a mysterious bill for $19 worth of violets. Being a staid and respectable bachelor, not given to chorus girls, his amazement was considerable. He threw the bill in the fire.

Presently, however, he received an insulting letter, which ran: "We thought that you at least had the decency and the honor to pay for the flowers at your father's funeral."

It then flashed across his mind that his sister had probably ordered flowers for his ftaher's funeral in his name. Before he could pay the bill, he got another abusive letter that made him furiously angry, and he told the collection agent to go ahead and sue, as threatened.

When the case came to trial, the attorney brought every technicality in the law to bear, even forcing the collection agent to bring in his articles of incorporation—it being a stock company. He won the case.

"Now," he said wrathfully, "I have won, and I will pay the bill." And he did.

The blackleg brand of collection agent, however, is but one manifestation of the deputy sheriff and deputy constable evil.

NINE HUNDRED DEPUTIES.

Not long ago there was a constable in Los Angeles who is said to have had 900 deputies. Practically the whole tenderloin was sworn into office, nearly every "mac" holding a star. The present constables have a perfect legal right to do the same—if they wanted to, and were that kind of men.

The whole system is wrong.

A policeman has to take an examination—goes through a slow process of probation and appointment; is under constant surveillance.

A deputy sheriff, or deputy constable, goes through no process. Under a careless constable, it is about like this:

Scene, the Constable's office; enter two rough-necks.

First Rough-neck: Morning Bill.

Constable: Morning.

First Rough-neck: Have a cigar.

Constable: Thanks (cancels one of his pre-election hand-outs.)

First Rough-neck. Shake hands with my friend, Pete. He wants to carry a gun and I told him I would get you to appoint him deputy.

Constable: Sure, always willing to accommodate.

In about five minutes out stalks Pete—an authorized officer of the law, with the power to make arrests, ruin reputations, enter people's houses.

Even under the best of sheriffs and constables the whole thing is a vast, ghastly joke.

Deputyships are parceled out as political rewards. It is usually the custom for sheriffs to allow their constituents to name most of their deputies.

For instance, the railroad men will often name one; this secret order one; the G.A.R. one and so on.

The result is that to preserve the peace and uphold the law of this enormous county, we have a lot of experienced men who know nothing whatever about catching thieves.

Every one knows that, under the administration of Sheriff White, conditions became so bad that Dist.-Atty. Fredericks had to organize a complete detective and police force of his own.

The Collector with a "Hitting" Hat.

One of the kind who call day after day and attract neighborhood attention and gossip by their "freaky" appearance. The Times photographer snapped him at a door.

Sheriff Hammel has had independence enough to employ largely experienced men, many of whom served in his previous administration. His jailor is Martin Aguirre, the famous early-day Sheriff, and Tom Quinn is one of his outside men.

The man Cook who murdered his wife on a Santa Monica car, couldn't succeed in getting himself captured and had to go to Texas and give himself up.

The remedy is obvious. According to those who have studied the situation there should be a county commission to examine and appoint deputies to serve while they behave themselves. The appointments should have nothing to do with politics. There should be a complete county constabulary.

Hunting criminals, particularly in such an enormous district, is a trade by itself, requiring special training.

Some day, when the Sheriff's office ceases to be a political grab-bag, there will be schools offering special courses of training in the detective trade. Then the criminal will have some one worth his trouble to deal with instead of a plumber or a retired brakeman with a pistol and a star.

The excuse for officers like Kaufman will then be gone. Collection agents will have to go to the courts and the Constable's and the Sheriff's offices like any one else.

CIRCUS HIBERNATES.

Big Sells-Floto Shows Take Winter Quarters at Venice After Performances There Today.

Regarding California, and particularly the territory around Los Angeles, as the most desirable place in America for its winter quarters, the big Sells-Floto Shows arrived here yesterday morning and proceeded to Venice, where it will remain during the winter months. California is now the adopted home of the Sells-Floto circus and its permanent winter quarters will be in the vicinity of Los Angeles. This year commodious buildings have been leased from Frank Short of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Company, on the Midway at Venice, but the show people talk of putting up their own buildings next year.

The last performance of a season, which has been the most remarkable and successful in the history of the Sells-Floto circus, will be given at Venice today. There will be a matinée starting at 2:30 o'clock, and a night performance at 8 o'clock. This is expected to prove one of the banner days of the season and yesterday a most imposing parade was given traversing all the territory between Venice, Ocean Park and Santa Monica.

After being firmly settled in winter quarters, the show will begin immediately to rebuild and enlarge for next season. To this end something more than $75,000 will be expended, the larger share of this being distributed in Venice, Los Angeles and Santa Monica. The salaries for the workmen, performers and executive officers alone, while in winter quarters, will amount to about $30,000, not to mention the feed necesary for the horses and the menagerie animals.

PANAMA CANAL WORK.

Congressman Smith Tells City Club the Great Waterway Will Be Completed in Eight Years.

Congressman S. C. Smith of Bakersfield, who represents the Eighth California District at Washington, was the principal speaker at yesterday's noon meeting and luncheon of the City Club, at Hotel Westminster. His topic was "The Panama Canal," and he talked entertainingly of the construction of the big waterway and of the importance its completion will have upon the trade of the Pacific Coast. Excavation, he said, is going forward at the rate of 1,000,000 yards a month, and this rate, he believes, will be maintained, assuring the completion of the canal in eight years. Large wall maps were used by the Congressman in illustrating his talk.

President Lee C. Gates of the City Club, in introducing the Congressman, spoke eloquently of the regeneration of San Francisco, as exemplified by the recent election.

CEMETERY BENEFIT.

The first concert for the benefit of the Jewish Cemetery will be given on the evening of December 3, at Blanchard Hall. Cantor H. A. Altar, assisted by the best local talent and Kammermyer's Orchestra, will render the programme, which will be followed by a dance. The evening's entertainment will be opened with an address by Mayor Harper.

GROWING.

CITY'S IMPORTS NEARLY DOUBLE.

LARGE INCREASE SHOWN IN CUSTOMS RECEIPTS.

Largest Advance Made in Goods from Ports Across the Pacific, but Europe Also Gets Largely Increased Business—Present Fiscal Year Promises to Break Records.

Los Angeles merchants imported from foreign countries nearly twice as much goods during the fiscal year ended June 30 as during the year previous, and the records of the United States Collector of Customs, Los Angeles district, for the first four months of the present fiscal year indicate that all records will again be broken.

Even without a deep-water harbor and with comparatively few foreign vessels discharging cargoes at either Port Los Angeles or San Pedro, the increase in the customs business has been in keeping with the wonderful growth of the city. The largest portion of this increase is of goods from trans-Pacific ports. For example, the importations from Japan last year amounted to $253,269, as compared with only $70,219 for the year before, while Hongkong sent into this district goods appraised at $147,596 last year, as against $41,005 for the previous year. France more than doubled her imports into this district; Germany's importations were one-third larger, and those from Great Britain were almost twice the value of those of the previous year.

The following table shows the value of merchandise imported into this district for the two years:

JUDGE SCORES ALDERMAN.

Brands His Conduct in Meeting Girl in Secret as "Highly Improper."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Alderman George F. Harding, Jr., of the Second Ward, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of assault made against him by Miss Daisy Dunham, was discharged with a reprimand by Judge Newcomer.

In dismissing the charge against the Alderman, Judge Newcomer scored him for what he termed his "manifestly improper and indiscreet conduct" in meeting Miss Dunham in a private dining-room.

In giving his decision, Judge Newcomer said the evidence did not make out a case of the statutory kind, and that he would have to discharge the Alderman. The girl admitted on the stand that she did not cry for help.

"The calling up of a girl at her home and making an engagement with her at a downtown hotel is a proceeding that few husbands would have the hardihood to make," said the court, "and I have no hesitation in characterizing Alderman Harding's actions as highly improper."

Printing is largely a matter of facilities. Better facilities—better work. Bigger facilities—bigger volume of business and consequently lower price. This establishment is one of the greatest consumers of paper in the West. Big purchases for spot cash is another factor that brings down price.

It can be said that no sum of money has been considered too great in equipping this monster printing plant.

The fixed and determined aim has been to make the Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House the greatest institution of its kind on the Coast, serving customers near and far with promptness, accuracy and perfect satisfaction.

The great Southwest should keep business within its own boundaries. You can get better work, quicker work and a right price by sending your order to this plant. Out-of-town orders given especially careful attention.

Other dealers were [illegible] and for a few days [illegible], but Sunday the [illegible] of Henderson joined in [illegible] the following notice: [illegible] tobacco dealers [illegible] do hereby state [illegible] intention to buy to[illegible] [illegible]." [Signed] [illegible] Company, incorporated; Imperial Tobacco Company, incorporated; Dibrell-Glover Company, incorporated; Gallaher Limited, incorporated; John H. Hodge Tobacco Company, incorporated; Thomas Hodge; Norsworthy & Argue, Arthur B. Jarvis.

This card is regarded as a defi to the men who requested that the tobacco buyers be withdrawn and the public anxiously awaits the first move in the warfare which it fears may result. Both sides have sympathizers among those not immediately involved. The argument of the association men that they have held their tobacco for three years and thus raised the prices for the non-members and therefore are entitled to the consideration of the non-members holding up their sale a few weeks, looks reasonable to many. On the other hand, the claim of the buyers that they can buy whatever they can pay for and the belief of the independent farmers that their personal liberty is being interfered with, also finds converts.

The pooling books in the stemming district closed at midnight, Thursday, and the association will make a strong effort to get all the additional pledges possible. Day riders will be utilized, and all legitimate arguments, but these only, say the officers of the organization. Webster county has pooled 85 per cent. and Henderson will pool almost 90, from the reports at headquarters. It may look as if this strength would assure victory, but the buyers say many farmers are listed as having pooled their entire crops when they have only pooled a few acres. This gives them encouragement that the fight may yet be won and the association found not so strong as it looks.

There is no doubt that a struggle to the finish is on, and there are grave dangers that it will become desperate. Newspapers throughout the districts involved have been moved to advise caution and appeal for peace, and the conservative men on both sides hope that it may be maintained, but nevertheless threats have been made, letters with matches inclosed sent, shotgun brigades talked of and rifle bullets purchased with the admission of their purposes in some of the best-behaved counties of the old commonwealth, and the end is not yet. Thinking men, one and all, no matter where their sympathies are, become serious when the situation is mentioned. The hope is strong that calm heads may be able to quell the excitable, but there is no absolute assurance that this will be the case. Meanwhile Western Kentucky waits for the delivery of the first load of the 1907 crop, which will be ready for the market in a few days.

NOBLES WILL CELEBRATE.

Imposing Ceremonies to Accompany House Warming at New Shriner Coliseum and Clubhouse.

Two important events for the members of Al Malaikah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, will be held this month. The first will be the house-warming party given to celebrate the formal opening of the magnificent new Al Malaikah Coliseum on West Jefferson street, on November 29, while the second will be the ceremonial session on the following day.

The house-warming party will not be a stiff, formal function, but rather a pleasant, good time for the members of Al Malaikah Temple and other Shriners living in Southern California. Only Shriners and their ladies will be admitted, with the exception of the candidates who have petitioned for degrees in the order.

The ceremonial session on the evening of November 30 will be an event among Shriners. The officers of the temple will appear for the first time in their new robes and the function will be decidedly spectacular.

After the initiation of the candidates a hot Dutch supper will be served, followed by a vaudeville entertainment. Noble John H. Blackwood, manager of the Belasco Theater, has gotten the talent together, and those who are in touch with the arrangements promise that the performance will be the finest ever seen on the Pacific Coast.

The work of furnishing the bungalow clubhouse of Al Malaikah Temple will be undertaken at once in order to have it in readiness for the house warming.

With all of the important functions which they have on hand the Shriners have not forgotten the needs of the destitute and a call has been sent out to the members of Al Malaikah Temple, instructing them to keep on the lookout for worthy cases, where Santa Claus is liable to pass by without a visit at Christmas time. Nobles are instructed to report such cases to the Potentate that he may be able to make arrangements for some Christmas cheer for the unfortunates.

SPORTSMEN GATHER.

Members of Los Angeles Polo Club Meet and Elect Officers for the Ensuing Year.

The annual meeting of the Los Angeles Polo Club was held last night at Levy's Café. The chief business up for consideration was the election of officers for the ensuing year, and this was soon dispensed with. The following officers were chosen:

J. M. Spaulding, president; Harry Messmore, first vice-president; T. Weiss, Jr., second vice-president; J. A. Edmonds, secretary and treasurer; J. M. Spaulding, Harry Messmore, J. A. Edmonds, T. Weiss, Jr., and Harry Weiss, directors. B. N. Smith Jr., and Harry Weiss were elected delegates to the next convention of the Polo Association.

The members of the Los Angeles Polo Club are working hard getting into shape for the tournament, which will open immediately after the Christmas holidays. Practices are being held at Agricultural Park every Tuesday and Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The gates of the park are open at that time, and all who feel so inclined are invited to attend the games and watch the play.

COSMOPOLITAN CLASS.

The membership roll of the class in mission study, at the Young Men's Christian Association, makes it read like a congress of nations. The president of the class is a Chinese named Chang, another Chinese is a member; there is one Korean, a Frenchman is secretary, two are Scotchmen. A clergyman in the class spent ten years in China, and the leader, Rev. L. A. Gould, spent five years there, while another member has spent a year in China on business.

Sworn statements issued to the Chambers of Commerce show profits of $250 to $1000 per acre per annum from the culture of oranges. Citrus fruit and grapes are still luxuries in the eastern markets; the demand greatly exceeds the supply and even though the profits were reduced one-half, the proceeds would still be greater than on any other food stuff. TERRA BELLA is ideally located in the new proven Citrus Belt of Tulare county, California. The Southern Pacific Valley line runs through the center of the tract, giving unsurpassed railroad service. The town site of TERRA BELLA is laid out along modern lines, with restrictions and reservations necessary to make it an ideal home site for the lover of fresh air and mountain scenery. What Newbro's Herpicide has done for others it may do for you

CLARENCE HAMILTON

"Enclosed you will find a recent photograph of myself, showing the growth of my hair since beginning the use of your Herpicide. Before using Herpicide, the top of my head was completely bald, but the use of only two bottles has brought a new growth of hair. I had spent between $50 and $60 on other remedies, but failed to derive any benefit until using your Herpicide. I cannot commend this remedy too highly to any with dandruff, baldness or falling hair."
(Signed) CLARENCE HAMILTON,
Atlanta Police Department, Atlanta, Georgia.

While chronic baldness is incurable, many cases of primary or incipient baldness have been completely cured with Newbro's Herpicide, the original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." Of course, the rational plan is to save the hair while there is hair to save, but even after it is gone there is a "fighting chance" if the hair follicles are not atrophied. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp instantly.

MUCH BUILDING AT ALHAMBRA.

GATEWAY TO SAN GABRIEL VALLEY IS WELL NAMED.

Suburb of Many Beautiful Homes. Homeseekers Building Bungalows and Imposing Homes—Street Work Calls for Big Outlay—Real Estate Sales Are Numerous.

Alhambra—the gateway to San Gabriel—set as it is in the center of a wide plane, between the horns of the two ranges of hills, is perhaps one of the most delightful residence places near Los Angeles. Considerable activity in both real estate and building lines are reported for this year from the pretty suburb. Sales of property to homeseekers have been numerous, and the many houses and bungalows being erected testifies to the solid condition of the town. Many people who find employment in Los Angeles make their homes in Alhambra, the rapid car service furnished by the Pacific Electric railroad making it possible to reach the city in a few minutes. A group of pretty homes, representative of those common in and about Alhambra, appears on this page today.

Within the past nine months Alhambra has had a growth comparable with that of any other suburb of Los Angeles, within a like distance—six miles—from this city. The record of building permits show that 134 dwellings have been erected since January 1 of the present year, at an outlay of $210,-880. There were three business houses, costing an aggregate of $38,000, and one public school building at $30,000. This gives a total aggregate of $273,880 for nine months.

Ten miles of new street work have been ordered done, calling for an outlay of $172,208 and twenty miles of sidewalk, to border the ten miles of street work also will be laid, which will cost $162,080.

This movement has been accomplished through the efforts of the Alhambra Improvement Association. This association also is taking care of a great amount of work connected with planting trees along the roads, and making parkways, which in time will make the city one of the prettiest near Los Angeles. Alhambra is on the line of the new Los Angeles-Pasadena boulevard, and is one of the most entrancing way stations on the way to the Crown of the Valley.

Alhambra is essentially a city of handsome homes. Private residences costing from $7000 to $40,000 are common about the town, many of the show places of Southern California being located within the city limits. Nearly every person living in Alhambra owns his own home, there being very few apartment houses or small places rented. The town boasts a population of 5000.

Since January of the present year a record of 380 real estate deals was made in Alhambra. Improved and unimproved property, which had a gross valuation of $447,950. When the total amount in buildings of $273,880 is added to that now being expended for street work, some $334,288, the total amount of money handled in the city for the last nine months, is something in the neighborhood of $1,062,138.

TWO BIG PROJECTS.

Working on Huge Reservoir in Sepulveda Canyon, Near Santa Monica. Develop Gravel Beds.

In Sepulveda Cañon, back of the Soldiers' Home, the Santa Monica Land and Water Company is carrying on an extensive work of development. At an expense of $75,000, an immense reservoir, capable of impounding 200,000,000 gallons of water, is in course of construction. Work has been under way on this project for several months, and the great holder will not be completed for several months to come. Its purpose is the impounding of the storm waters of winter, which will be held in reserve for the purpose of giving heavy pressure in case of fire. The water in the reservoir will be constantly freshened by the flow from the streams and wells that feed it, and when the reservoir is put into service there is every reason to believe that there will be no scarcity of water for purpose of irrigation.

Another project of considerable interest about to receive consideration in the same cañon is the building of a spur track of the Los Angeles-Pacific electric line from the Soldiers' Home division into Sepulveda Cañon. The purpose of this is to exploit the immense gravel deposits that are found in that cañon, but which have, heretofore, not been accessible owing to the distance from shipping facilities. The San Vicente Stone and Gravel Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000, and will develop these gravel beds. The president of this new corporation is J. J. Davis. The vice-president is W. T. Gillis, and the secretary is F. E. Lee. These men are all stockholders and officers in the Santa Monica Land and Water Company, on whose lands the gravel is found.

SOUTH PASADENA HOME.

Realty Man Has Handsome Place at Fremont Avenue and Oxley Street.

The home of John B. Althouse, on the southwest corner of Fremont avenue and Oxley street, South Pasadena, a photograph of which is printed on this page today, is perhaps one of the most striking homes in the pretty suburb to the northeast. On large grounds, 110x152 feet, beautiful with numerous ornamental plants and trees, the house is a representative one of many in the Southland. The ground area covered by the bungalow is 42x72 feet. It contains seven large rooms, which are finished entirely in white quarter-sawed oak, with double oak floors throughout. The rooms are paneled, and the ceilings are beamed. Plate glass has been used in all the windows. The hardware and electric-lighting fixtures were especially designed for the house.

On the rear of the lot is a commodious garage, of similar design, in keeping with the larger building. The cost of the house and garage was about $10,500, which with the price of the land, brings the investment up to about $14,000.

IN THE SOUTH END.

G. Dombowski of the Moneta Avenue Realty Company reports the following sales: Four lots on Sixty-eighth street near Main street, to L. Stead for $1000. To A. O. Johnson, a lot on Forty-seventh between Moneta and Main street, 40x135 feet for $1000; this will be improved with a six-room bungalow. To A. Emmerson, a lot on the east side of Figueroa street, between Forty-first and Forty-second streets, 50x150 feet to an alley, for $3900. To Joseph Bayen, two lots on Figueroa street, between Sixty-fifth and Sixty-sixth street, for $3000.

IN RIDGEWOOD PARK.

Contracts to Be Awarded for Grading and Paving—List of Sales.

Contracts for the grading, cement work and paving of Ridgewood Park will be let this week, it is expected. This tract is located west of Western avenue, between Third and Fourth streets. It is traversed by Wilton Place, Van Ness avenue and Norton avenue, each of which are streets 100 feet in width, with fifty-foot roadways paved with the petrolithic process. There are six-foot cement sidewalks and cement curbs and eighteen feet of parkings between the curb and sidewalk. Shade trees will be planted in the parkings and electroliers installed for lighting the streets. The West Sixth-street car follows the south boundary of the tract.

The lots in this subdivision will lie about three feet above grade, and will be finished in terraces. The lots are 60x170 feet in size.

The Holmes-Walton Company reports the following sales in Ridgewood Park: A lot on the east side of Wilton Place, between Third and Fourth streets, to C. N. Johnson. Two lots on the same street to a local investor. A lot on the west side of Wilton Place to F. H. Olds. A lot on the same street to Martha Johnson; the consideration in each case being $1800.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Among the maps recorded the last week is that of tract No. 101, which is the McCarthy Company's new Orange Grove tract, at Arcadia, on the Santa Anita avenue, Baldwin's ranch, opposite the grand-stand section of the new Santa Anita race track. The land is set with full bearing orange trees. This is an attractive place, and was put on recently.

CENTRAL CITRUS BELT.

Most people connect the California orange crop with Southern California exclusively. There are, in fact, three belts in the State where citrus fruit is produced. The smallest lies above the Sacramento River, at Winters, and a few places in the foothills. The groves here represent "pockets," rather than a belt.

The bulk of the crop comes from south of Tehachepi, where there is a series of belts.

But an important belt has been developed in Central California which is making itself well known, both by reason of the excellent quality of the fruit produced there, and of the increasing volume of its output. The extension of orange groves has been pushed out there during the past few years, to such an extent that thriving towns, such as Porterville, Exeter and Lindsay, and their growth is proportionate to the industry. One advantage of this belt is that owing to the heat of the valley, the oranges ripen very early, producing highly-colored fruit of excellent flavor for the Thanksgiving Day or Christmas markets.

There are claimed to be 10,000 acres in bearing citrus-fruit trees in this belt, and already the crop amounts to 2000 carloads, exclusive of new orchards coming into bearing.

A new tract of 5000 acres is opened now at Terra Bella, on the railroad to Porterville. This is being offered for sale in this city.

Florence Stone as Cleopatra

Fritzi Scheff as "Mlle. Modiste"

Beauty's Week at Leading Theaters.
The classic figure and fascinating face of Florence Stone, as Cleopatra, will be set in bewildering managerial rivalry tomorrow night against the superb Teutonic loveliness of Fritzi Scheff, who will claim the stage at the Mason Operahouse.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

This a beauty-week.

Do you prefer the Sardou-ideal beauty of blonde Florence Stone, or that adorable French-or-German puzzle that twinkles in Fritzi Scheff's brown eyes?

If you are wise, you will take a gentle admixture of both. The two F's, Fritzi and Florence, on alternate evenings, are guaranteed to leave the pleasantest of tangs upon one's mental taste.

The one we know very well, the other but slightly.

Fritzi Scheff is the only genuine soubrette that grand opera has ever had in this country. When she last visited Los Angeles, under the direction of Maurice Grau, during that famous impresario's last years with the Metropolitan Operahouse, she was singing Micaelas and Neddas and Musettas—and acting them captivatingly.

But in America the star that is able to twinkle in a real constellation soon is drawn forth to shine in isolation, and the managerial enterprise that tempted matronly Schumann-Heink to the lightsome ranks of musical comedy folk, of course succeeded in capturing Mlle. Scheff.

Since that day she has grown largely in celebrity, and I've no doubt has amassed wealth, as has every person of genuine theatrical prominence during the last few prosperous years. She travels in her own car, aspires to become "Mme. Scheff," and I'm told, in a stage whisper, frowns down every attempt at publicity for the individual members of her company.

Whether the last is truth or calumny I don't know, but if it is true, it is the grave mistake that all too many players of prominence have made in the last few years. Witness Mrs. Carter, and her insufferable "rep-show" aggregation which held up the town a few months ago.

"Fritzi Scheff" is a name largely manufactured for stage purposes. Her real name, which she has not used for years, was Anna Scheff Yaeger, and her mother, Mme. Scheff, was a celebrated prima-donna at the royal opera of Vienna. She is still singing, or at least has been actively engaged in operatic work until very recently. The father, Dr. Yaeger, went to Vienna and engaged as a practicing physician. There's a rumor of French and German ancestry with Mlle. Fritzi's Viennese training, and with it all she becomes a delightful little product of crossed races.

She overcame obstacles that have ruined many an ambitious young woman, for she was unfortunate enough to be an infant prodigy. At the age of 5 she was singing her little part in a cathedral choir, and at 8 her ability was so marked that she was widely advertised. Her mother was sensible, however, and nipped her career and sent her to Dresden, where her regular musical training began. This was capped by further instruction at Frankfort, where, when she was 15, Fritzi Scheff made her first appearance as Juliet, in Gounod's opera. Her success was marked, and she remained there two seasons, scoring especially in the leading parts of "Faust," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "La Boheme," and "Mignon." Then she moved on to Munich and it was there that Maurice Grau heard her, and she became at once a part of the great force at the Metropolitan.

Her principal success was scored as Musetta, in "La Boheme." It was during the interim between her first and second seasons that the little Austrian singer married Baron Fritz von Barueleben.

She went into light opera at the instigation of several well-known critics and others of allied profession.

One night a New York newspaper man who had watched her clever "business" during her portrayal of Musetta, before the café of the second scene, went back to her dressing-room between acts.

"Mlle. Scheff, why don't you go as a star in comic opera?" said he.

"That," replied the young prima-donna, "would be a what-you-call-it—a—a come-down, wouldn't it? From the music of the masters to the song-and-dance?"

"But there are varieties of song and dance melody," persisted her interviewer."

"Oh, well," exclaimed Mlle. Scheff, with a final sigh, "I'm afraid I don't speak English good enough for anything like that."

But the leaven worked, and a short time later Fritzi Scheff was approached by Charles Dillingham with a proposition to star in a real light opera. She accepted, and the result was "Babette," in which she at least scored a pronounced personal triumph. This was followed by the present "Mlle. Modiste," which Messrs. Herbert and Blossom wrote for her.

Mr. Ferris promises this winter to take Florence Stone and her supporting company away from the Sardou repertoire with which they have been so long allied.

That's the best note of progress he has sounded since his return, and I think he will make a very good beginning in "The Marriage of William Ashe." You are familiar with the novel? Of course! In Lady Kitty Bristol we have a lovable, hoydenish, graceful and really pathetic figure genuinely suited to Florence Stone's talents, and in which I believe she will rise to intellectual heights that the very physical limitations of Sardou never permit.

At any rate, it's a pleasant anticipation.

Mr. Ferris's leading man, Joseph Kilgour, has no mean record. The following, from the enthusiastic but I trust veracious pen of the Ferris publicist, Walter Hoff Seeley, gives a surprising list of performances.

His first professional effort was the portrayal of Jefferson Tompkins in the comedy of "Niobe." Next season found him leading man with Katie Putnam, then a well-known western star. The season following he sailed for London, with a letter of introduction to Bram Stoker, Sir Henry Irving's manager at the Lyceum Theater, and was given a position in Sir Henry's company. Here he received schooling which few actors have been permitted to enjoy. He was brought back from London in 1897, to create the part of Caius Lucius in Margaret Mather's production of "Cymbeline" at Wallack's Theater, New York City. The season of 1897 and 1898, Mr. Kilgour was leading man at the Girard-avenue Theater, Philadelphia. In the spring of 1898, he created the part of Capt. Hammersly in "Charles O'Malley," and was engaged in the same spring to create the part of Hodgman in "Arizona," but relinquished it to assume the role of Lord Woodstock in Litt's big production of "Sporting Life." A year later, Mr. Kilgour came to the Coast as leading man at the Grand Operahouse in San Francisco, and achieved a notable success in "The Rogues' Comedy." Later he went over to the Alcazar as leading man. Returning to the East, Mr. Kilgour was leading man with Henrietta Crosman, playing Charles II in "Mistress Nell," and was her first Orlando in "As You Like It." Augustus Thomas, who had always desired Mr. Kilgour to play Hodgman in "Arizona," secured his release to play the part in the company sent to London, where he opened at the Adelphi Theater, winning great praise from both press and public. Returning to America in the fall of 1902, he created the part of Philip Christian in Hall Caine's "The Manxman," in support of James O'Neill. The next, and what Mr. Kilgour considers the best work he has ever done in the drama, was as the Father of Our Country, in Victor Mapes's continental play, "Capt. Barrington." New York and Boston reviewers gave him unstinted praise for his portrayal of Gen. Washington. Then followed in order, creations of the following parts: Emile de Favoralle in "Tit for Tat," at the Savoy Theater, New York; Sir John Manners in "The School for Husbands," at Wallack's Theater; Bashville in "Cashel Byron's Profession," at Daly's Theater; Hon. Fitzroy Bagley in the "Lion and the Mouse," and Randolph Chamberlain in "The Movers."

THE LOCAL WEEK.

One of the very strongest attractions of the Syndicate year will be played this week at the Mason Operahouse, in Fritzi Scheff's pretentious production of "Mlle. Modiste."

The book is by Henry Blossom, the music by Victor Herbert. The work was characterized by Hubbard, of the Chicago Tribune, a few weeks ago, as the one comic opera worthy the name that has been sent on tour in this country for several years.

The story is of Parisian life, and concerns the love of a soldier of noble birth for a pretty little milliner. The family of the man scorn his affection for humble "Mlle. Modiste," and she, in turn, resolves to forswear his love until she can make a reputation for herself—which she does, as a singer.

Mlle. Scheff's supporting company includes William Pruette, Robert Michaelis, Claude Gillingwater, Leo Mars, J. G. Doyle, Fred Chambers, R. W. Hunt, Miss Josephine Bartlett and a number of other principals.

Mlle. Scheff should herself be in good voice, as she has been resting at Coronado since Friday morning.

The presentation bids fair to be one of the few thoroughly first-class offerings that come to us during the year.

Mr. Ferris and his company will return to active dramatic work this week, opening the season at the Auditorium tomorrow night, in a large revival of Sardou's "Cleopatra," which, if advance preparations are an indication, will be truly sumptuous and spectacular.

Florence Stone-Ferris of course remains as leading woman and central attraction of the company, supported by a varied cast headed by Joseph Kilgour, an eastern actor of handsome physique, experience and creditable reputation. Miss Stone will take the title role, while Kilgour plays Marc Antony. Other members of the company are Henry Duggan, Hugh Metcalfe, Frank Beamish, Charles Thurston, George Drury Hart, Harry von Meter, Francklyn Hurleigh, Dave J. Marlowe, Charles Edler, S. C. De Wolfe, Frank Staples, Miss Rita L. Knight, Miss Anna Bates, Miss Eleanor Montell, Miss Marion Manners and Miss Loloe Bolton.

"The Heart of Maryland," David Belasco's play of war-time days, will be put on at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night.

Local interest centers in the first appearance of Miss May Catherine Smith with this company. The young woman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Smith of No. 2212 Hobart boulevard, and won considerable success as a member of Mme. Modjeska's company last season. In this production she will take the ingenue assignment, Nannie McNair.

Blanche Stoddard will have the role of Maryland Calvert, and should give a more than ordinarily successful emotional interpretation of it. The famous belfry scene will be realistically reproduced. Lewis Stone will play Alan Kendrick, Harry Glazier will be seen as Capt. Thorpe, and the rest of the company will be in supporting assignments.

Folowing this, Charles Ruggles will have an opportunity as "The Imp," in "When We Were Twenty-One."

The Burbank Theater has had in preparation for some weeks an elaborate revival of Sienkiewicz's spectacular "Quo Vadis," so popular some years ago, in both novel and dramatic form.

It will be offered for the first time this afternoon. The cast includes every member of the regular company, and in the larger scenes almost 100 auxiliaries.

"Maud and Si" will be the chief funmakers at the Orpheum for the week commencing tomorrow night. They are part of a trained-animal act, and while Maud is certified to be Maud, in the original, Si is M. Bersac, well known in vaudeville circles for his work with horses and other four-footed creatures.

The Sisters O'Meers are the female division of the "Sisters and Brothers O'Meers," who are a matter of history in the record of slack-wire performances. Scott and Wilson will endeavor to show that American boys can beat the Dutch at acrobatics. They are Yankees of the pronounced type, while most of the acrobats in recent Orpheum chronicles have been German. Dixon and Fields, also American have a short act in German burlesque.

The holdovers are Elfie Fay, the Colonial Septette, the "Dainty Dancers" and Julie Herne and her company.

Owing to a confusion of dates, the circuit shows of the Los Angeles Theater are unable to make connections this week, and tonight the house will be dark.

It will reopen a week from Sunday, with Ralph Stuart in "Strongheart."

The Primrose Minstrels will dispense humor of their traditional sort at the Grand for the week beginning this afternoon. Several fine solo singers, a good orchestra and a tunefully resonant ensemble are promised in the advance announcements.

Dramagraphs.

Denman Thompson celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday last week.

James O'Neil has announced that this year he will confine his efforts to productions of "Julius Caesar," "Virginius" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Miss Christie MacDonald has been engaged by Charles Frohman for his production of a new musical comedy, entitled "Miss Hook of Holland," a London success of the first order.

A stage version of the novel "Three Weeks," written by Elinor Glyn, is being made. Mme. Nazimova is endeavoring to secure the rights for American presentation.

Channing Pollock's new play, "The Secret Orchard," had its first production on Friday evening in Syracuse, N. Y. In the cast are Vincent Serrano, Adelaide Prince, Olive May, Frank C. Bangs, Walter Hale and others.

An old friend asked Mrs. George Gould (who used to be Edith Kingdon and a member of the Daly company) if she ever felt a return of her old impulse toward the stage. "Oh, well," she said, "when you have rubbed against the scenes you can never get rid of the smell of paint."

Berthe Roy, the little French-Canadian who is to be Jan Kubelik's solo pianist during the first half of his forthcoming tour, was chosen by the violinist's manager, Daniel Frohman, from among over a hundred applicants for the position.

Joseph Coyne's success as Prince Danilo in the London production of "The Merry Widow," has been so great that Manager Charles Frohman has agreed to allow Coyne to remain there. It had been intended to star Coyne in an American production of "Toodles."

The list of Shakespearean characters in which Robert Mantell will appear this season has been increased by the addition of "King John." The other Shakespearean parts which Mr. Mantell will impersonate are Othello, Iago, Leer, Macbeth, Hamlet, Brutus and Richard III.

Maria Gay, whose Carmen has startled many of the leading cities of Europe and South America during the last two years, is again at Covent Garden this fall. The Bizet opera is put on twice a week on her account. It is said of her that her voice is not remarkable, but that her command of stage geture is almost unrivaled. Another of her parts is Amneris in "Aida." She hails from Catalonia.

Miss Mary Shaw will open her winter tour in "Mrs. Warren's Profession" tomorrow at Pittsburgh. She has engaged for her support Lester Lonergan, to play Sir George Crafts, and Miss Amy Rickards, to play Vivie Warren. Walter Thomas will also be in the cast. From Pittsburgh the company will go to Cincinnati, and then, in all probability, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Washington will be visited. "Mrs. Warren's Profession," when at the Grand Operahouse last May, played to the largest business of the year, with the exception of "Man and Superman." Miss Shaw has been identified with the part from its very first performance at the Garrick two years ago. She is under the management of Ernest Shipman.

Suzanne Adams, the soprano, formerly of the Grau Metropolitan Opera company, will return to America early this month, after a long absence abroad, to make a tour of the leading vaudeville houses of the country, singing arias from grand opera and songs in English. A native of Cambridge, Mass., she went to Paris for her musical education and made her début at the Opera there as Juliette in 1894. She sang frequently, both in Paris and at Covent Garden, London, before coming to the Metropolitan, where she made her last appearance in 1903, during the final year of the late Maurice Grau's régime. She married Leo Stern, the 'cellist, who died in London three years ago. Her début in vaudeville will be made at the Auditorium Theater, Chicago.

That Americans can go to Italy and make a success in grand opera is proven again in the case of Blanche Hamilton Fox, the young mezzo-soprano from Boston, who has been singing the past two years under the stage name of Bianca Volpini. Miss Fox has just returned to Milan from a few months' visit to London and Paris, where she met and sang for Oscar Hammerstein, who was delighted with her voice and who predicted great success for her; also for Jean de Reszke and Mme. Nordica, both of whom at once became greatly interested in her voice. Miss Fox has received a number of tempting offers recently, and from among them she has chosen to accept a contract to sing during the coming carnival season at Mantova and Venice in the operas "Aida," "Battista" and "Mefistofele" at Mantova, and in "Mignon," "Trovatore" and "Favorita" at Venice. The opera "Battista" was composed by the well-known and talented priest, Don Fini, and was written as an oratorio, but will now be given as an opera, and Miss Fox has had the honor of being selected to create the role of Theodora.

If one-tenth of the serio-comic mishaps that befall people of the stage while in pursuit of their art could be collected and classified, a volume rich in entertaining possibilities would result. David Bispham, the distinguished baritone, who has recently returned to America, for another concert tour, has had his full share of his amusing experiences in the course of his career on the concert and operatic stage, and one of them he recently related while chatting at "The Players," New York. "It was while I was singing the title role in 'The Flying Dutchman' at Covent Garden," said Mr. Bispham. "Dr. Muck was the conductor, and Mme. Gadski was my Senta. I felt in my bones that something would go wrong that night, and I prevented one catastrophe myself only to encounter another. On reaching the darkened stage from my dressing-room I found that what should have been my somber and ghostly craft was brilliantly illuminated by two huge lanterns. I constituted myself a Boreas, and by vigorous blowing and voluble use of a strong line of Anglo-Saxon, succeeded in 'dousing the glim.' But when my craft sailed on to the stage it came to a sudden standstill ten feet from the shore at which I was supposed to disembark. One of the wheels was stuck in a crack in the stage, and the heaving and tugging of the man acting as propeller failed to budge it. The orchestra came to the end of the prelude and stopped, for I refused to go on until I reached terra firma. The distance was too great to jump, and I didn't care to swim. Poor Muck laid down his baton in despair, and the audience tittered—a titter that developed into a roar when two stage hands beneath the vessel were heard to exchange the following: 'W'y don't you shove 'er along, Bill?' ''Ow can I w'en the blahsted thing's stuck fahst in the stige?' At last the stage carpenter 'waded' out with a plank, which he solemnly adjusted, one end on the vessel, the other on the rock. 'Now, then, ye can get hoff, sir,' announced he; and the audience collapsed with laughter. But the opera went on."

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

The operatic flame is finally extinguished, and local music lovers are in some position to judge of the merits and demerits of the company, and of the varying caliber of productions.

One thing is certain, the company did not receive the measure of public attention its merits deserved. For this various reasons may be advanced, and the most plausible are that the company came too early, and was affected in patronage by the financial stringency which was at its height exactly in the middle of the four weeks' season.

Los Angeles music appreciation, it is to be hoped, will not be judged by the favor just accorded Lambardi's singers. Their experience this year was not by any means a true measure of our artistic intelligence.

Of course there were defects in the company, and flaws in the productions. In spite of all arguments that could be used, Lambardi and Patrizzi insisted on opening with "Aida," and consequently began with rather apathetic public interest, fatal happening to so large an undertaking.

And as before, the works upon which the Italian managers lavished the most praise proved very mild successes, and in some cases were not successes at all. "Mignon," considered as a whole, was of barely passable interest. Had Arcangeli been removed from "Otello," the performance would have been excruciating.

On the other hand, who spread any surfeit of advance press agentry on the "Rigoletto" performance? And yet this veritable horse chestnut among Italian music dramas was superb, and well worth twice the money charged for the highest-priced seats in the house. The first production of "Faust" was almost as notable, yet it was tucked off obscurely at the fag end of a week's performances.

Another thing that friend Lambardi has tried and found wanting on every visit is the importation of the antique celebrity. The most notable of these this year was Chev. Signorini, who has an authentic record of past achievement, and whose name was to be found very foolishly black-lettered in the programmes. Personally, Signorini is an affable gentleman and an artist of well-won distinction, but his best singing days are over, and he should be content to rest on laurels honorably won.

Now I am told, and believe, that Signorini was given a more than comfortable salary. For this same money Lambardi might easily have found in Italy a young but perhaps unknown tenor, whose voice was in the bloom of youth, and whose acting had magnetism and some little spontaneity. Carusos, of course, are scarce, but a young dramatic tenor having the same degree of artistry and freshness of voice that Parola evidenced in his lyric work might have been discovered, it seems.

With two such voices, every production would have had great value.

Mme. Padovani came to us just in time. She also has gone over the crest of maturity, but her light and beautiful voice is only slightly dimmed, and its ease of use has waned not at all. Persons of any musical inclination here who did not hear her sing have suffered a distinct loss. She is one of two or three coloratura sopranos of supreme ability before the English-speaking world.

In more unsparing munificence of voice, young Olinto Lombardi is the peerless member of the aggregation. Here is a glorious bass of tremendous volume, majestic sonority and most exquisite use. There is never a moment in Lombardi's singing in which he misuses his voice. When he is more mature, when he has gained finish of acting and wider stage experience, I venture to predict that he might become an immensely successful interpreter of the great Wagnerian roles. What a voice for Wotan. He has all the preliminary essentials; all he requires now is experience and study in intelligent dramatic art.

Paolo Wulman, another most valuable member of this company, would, by his intelligence and true dramatic ability, be an ornament to Mr. Conried's stage, or to any other operatic place. His use of make-up, of costumery, and of all the minute details of real impersonation are unparalleled in our local operatic experience. Lacking the natural greatness of voice, which is Lombardi's, he is yet a most unusually pleasing vocal artist, and his singing is at all times delightful.

Arcangeli, who has dramatically pushed his voice into the wobble stage, remains a conqueror by his impressive and sometimes startling histrionic characterizations. I have never seen Salvini, but I imagine that Arcangeli's intense, subtle and truly Latin impersonations must very much resemble his.

Pimazzoni is getting to be an old man, but he must be commended for maintaining his dignified voice in evenness and certainty, even though its thrilling quality be gone.

Much as I love little Pacini, a most likeable young fellow, I cannot say that he maintains his characters well. Possessing a beautiful natural voice, he has not yet arrived at full interpretative ability, or even a constant faculty for correct singing.

Ferrabini, who is certainly a beauty in any part, sings well at most times, and has a voice of exquisite richness.

Bertozzi, notwithstanding the furore she stirred up here in some susceptible quarters, can never hope to be an artist as long as she runs to such painful exaggeration in both voice and acting. Young Signorina Gonzales, though possessing a soprano of size and brilliance, is not an artist in any way, and, after the opening performances, gently subsided.

The mezzo-sopranos of the company were absolutely unbearable. There is no excuse for this except managerial negligence in hiring them.

The chorus, though not a beauty show, sang acceptably, and sometimes with certainty of pitch and really marked shading.

It is to be hoped that Lambardi will return again with a company equaling this one, at least. The present season was not a true measure of Los Angeles taste.

One matter, which has been a subject of previous suggestion to Lambardi, is his repertoire. It is formal, old, and without novelty or especial variety.

Both Lambardi and Mr. Berry argue from a wrong premise when they insist that the local public does not want such dramatic operas as "La Gioconda" —to the writer's personal taste the most beautiful opera of Italian composition—or Meyerbeer's "Huguenots," or Boito's "Mefistofele."

With the limited preliminary publicity which Lambardi allowed, the local public was scarcely informed of the company's coming before its arrival. Had there been a large interest in the operas at all, I am sure that "Gioconda" and other works of similar greatness would have been welcomed.

They are novelties. They have values which are unexploited.

And Boito's "Mefistofele?" This is not at all a novelty in Italy, and could have been splendidly put on, had Lambardi prepared for it from the first. To most of the local music patrons it would be absolutely new.

And this is to say nothing at all of "Andrea Crenier," Massenet's "Manon," "Fedora," "Adrienne Lecouvreur" and other newer works quite commonly performed in Europe.

There are just these things to be added—with a better repertoire—when Lambardi next visits us:

A young dramatic tenor—we shall be very glad to see Parola again upon the lyric side.

Two mezzo sopranos of genuine singing ability.

A pretty but not necessarily large French ballet.

A more artistic hand and a little firmer control in the stage management.

Symphonic First.

The first concert of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra for this year will take place at the Auditorium—the new home of the orchestra—on Friday afternoon.

Mr. Hamilton will have beneath his baton a total of seventy-four players. This is an orchestra at last complete in instrumentation, and one of the largest bodies of its character in the United States.

The principal offering will be Schumann's fourth symphony. Incidentally, Mr. Hamilton will play Kaun's grand festival march in B flat, and the overture to "Der Filegende Hollender."

Mrs. Otie Chew-Becker, the soloist, will be heard in a rendition of Mozart's fifth concerto, A major, for violin and orchestra.

Entertainment Course.

Genuine interest is being taken in the Midland course of entertainments, which is being planned as a benefit for the Ladies' Auxliary of the University of Southern California. The course will open Tuesday evening, November 19, with a concert at Simpson Auditorium by the Midland Jubilee Singers.

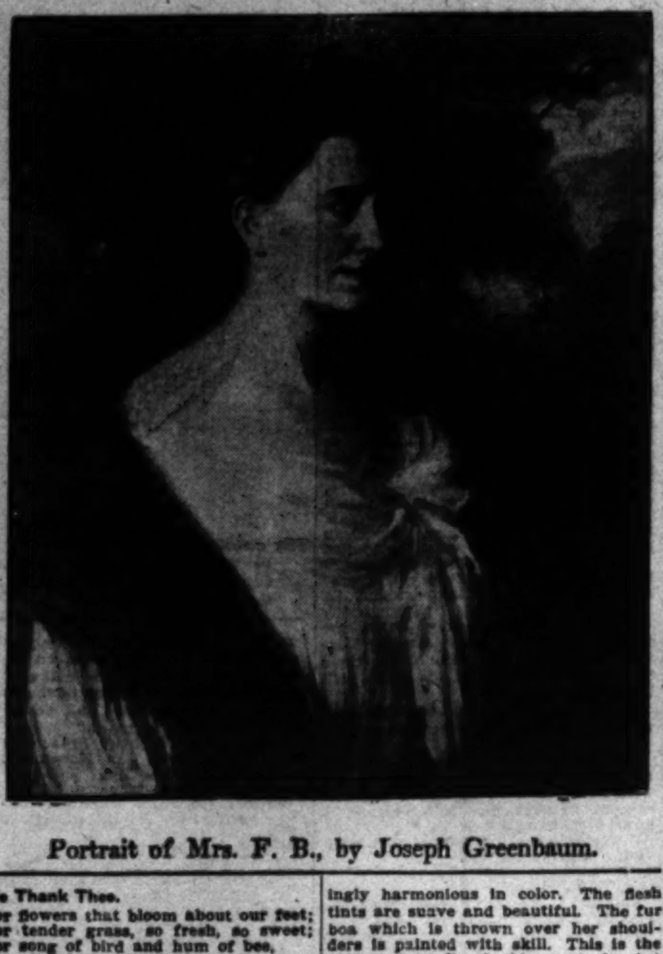
Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.



Portrait of Mrs. F. B., by Joseph Greenbaum.

We Thank Thee.

For flowers that bloom about our feet;
For tender grass, so fresh, so sweet;
For song of bird and hum of bee,
For all things fair we hear or see,
Father in heaven, we thank Thee.

For blue of stream and blue of sky;
For pleasant shade of branches high;
For fragrant air and cooling breeze;
For beauty of the blooming trees,
Father in heaven, we thank Thee.

Greenbaum's Pictures Once More.

Of the three important portraits of women that Joseph Greenbaum has to show in his present exhibition at Steckel's gallery, the most striking, and to me the most beautiful, is that of Mrs. Frederick Betts. It has poise, dignity and a certain appealing sweetness. It is quiet in effect, and exceedingly harmonious in color. The flesh tints are suave and beautiful. The fur boa which is thrown over her shoulders is painted with skill. This is the picture reproduced this week in Art and Artists.

Another striking portrait is that of Mrs. Morris Albee. The color scheme is one of unusual harmony. The pose is easy, graceful and natural, and the texture of her gown, which is pale blue, and of the lace fichu crossing her bosom, is rendered with great skill. The background, as in the portrait of Mrs. Frederick Betts, and that of Mrs. Hancock Banning, is the pleasing convention of greenish-brown foliage and blue sky which was used by the masters who painted portraits in the middle of the last century. Unfortunately, however, some of the drawing is not impeccable; the hands especially lack good, solid construction.

The portrait of Mrs. Hancock Banning is very successful in characterization. Mr. Greenbaum has appreciated and rendered the refined delicacy and intelligence of his sitter's face. Indeed, Mr. Greenbaum seems to have a genuine understanding of feminine charm and character, and he puts these on canvas with the easy skill of a well-trained painter. His chief fault, it seems to me, is a certain "slickness" and overrefinement of handling. This, of course, may be due in part to the refinement of his subjects, for he has been fortunate in securing as sitters some of the most highly-finished products of our civilization—cultured American women. Yet it must be admitted that over smoothness of technique is also apparent in a few of his landscapes, though by no means in all.

Some of the landscapes he has to show are strong and noble pieces of painting. Among the most striking of these is a canvas that claims the attention as soon as one enters the gallery. This is "Enchanted Isle," a Catalina subject of much rhythm of line and beauty of color, as well as true and unforced sentiment. It gives the charm of Catalina Island in a manner entirely unapproached by the most of the pictures of this wonderful place that I have ever seen. It is undoubtedly one of the best landscapes Mr. Greenbaum has yet painted.

Another interesting picture is "The Arroyo," which shows long afternoon shadows on a clay bank to the right, with a eucalyptus grove in the background, and with a lazy stream loitering toward the foreground. Another, "At Descanso," is a little sparkling morning effect, delightfully true in feeling. Still another, "A Bit of Beach," shows us the rising mists of the sea. "The Great Southwest" is a pretty big title for a small picture, and, it seems to me, something of a misnomer, but it is a well-painted canvas, nevertheless, and worthy of the painter. "Turquoise Cove" is a veritable little gem of color; the sea to the right is of a grayish brown; high cliffs and the beach occupy the left side of the canvas.

"California Winter" is a veritable bit of Italy, so sparkling and sunny is it. "A Japanese Garden" shows us one of those charming retreats so common behind many Los Angeles homes. Other pleasing canvases from Mr. Greenbaum's brush are four or five sketches so small that they hardly cover more than a few square inches of space, yet so full of nature that they are in no danger of being overlooked.

Timothy Cole's Old Masters.

The exhibition of Timothy Cole's engravings, which was held at the National Arts Club last winter, will be seen in several cities this winter. It is now being shown at the Cincinnati Art Museum, and dates are set for the collection exhibition in the near future at the Cleveland School of Art, the Boston Art Club, the Library of Congress, Washington, and the Albright Gallery, Buffalo. Included in this collection are eighteen prints from the old Spanish masters.

From Mr. Daniell.

William Swift Daniell, the water-color landscape painter, who recently went East, writes me that it is his intention to start for Europe next spring or early in the summer. He says: "Mrs. Daniell and I are now comfortably settled on an old farm in the heart of the Berkshire Hills, nine miles by stage from the nearest railway station, Great Barrington. To get our mail we have to walk three-quarters of a mile through beautiful woods to the village store.

"I know that the beauty of these woods would appeal to you. We have maples, birch, pine, beach and chestnut—and when down there one might imagine it the heart of the wilderness. I am painting regularly, and have another collection of water colors under way. The glorious autumn foliage, the gnarled old apple trees and the fields of corn stalks, the golden pumpkins littering the ground, furnish ample motifs for the brush.

"We stopped over night in Chicago, and were sorry to miss the Wandts at their studio. They happened to be out for the evening. We were very glad of an opportunity for a brief look at the canvases in the Art Institute, and regretted that for lack of time we were not able to see anything of the school. I was considerably astonished to see such a fine collection, for I can remember the time when the Art Museum of Chicago was in a small building facing the lake, and the collection was very insignificant.

"We were glad to see one of Elmer Wachtel's pictures at Thurber's, and in comparison with some paintings by famous men—among which was one by Maris, valued at $14,000—to my way of thinking Wachtel's was the best of all. Mr. Thurber told me how highly the work of both Elmer and Mrs. Wachtel is esteemed by Chicago art connoisseurs. He said he hoped Mrs. Wachtel will conclude to have an exhibition of her water colors at his gallery the coming winter."

The Studio for November.

The International Studio for November opens with an appreciation of "A Painter of the Middle West, L. H. Meakin," by Maude I. G. Oliver, with numerous illustrations of Mr. Meakin's beautiful landscapes. Another interesting article is "A Consideration of the Work of Anton Mauve," by Frank Rutter; there are many illustrations accompanying this article, two of them being in color.

Henri Frantz writes of "The Chardin-Fragonard Exhibition in Paris." "William Keith of California" is the subject of an article by Henry Atkins; some of Mr. Keith's best-known landscapes are reproduced, one in color. The beautiful Japanese tea-room of the Auditorium Annex of Chicago is fully described and illustrated. The second article on "Practical oBok-Binding" appears in this number, and there is also a paper on "Block-Printing," by Mabel Tuke Priestman.

ART NOTES.

One of the most interesting exhibitions of the year is promised for the 18th of this month. It will be held in Blanchard Hall, and will comprise the best work of eight or ten of the best painters of Los Angeles and Pasadena. Among those who will exhibit are William Wendt, Elmer Wachtel, Gardner Symons, Benjamin Chambers Brown, J. W. Clawson and Granville Redmond.

Joseph Greenbaum's exhibition of portraits and landscapes, now being held at Steckel's gallery, will be followed by a showing of landscapes from the brush of C. A. Fries of San Diego.

The Wachtels, who recently returned from an extended sketching trip at Malibu, have not yet quite decided when they will hold an exhibition, but tell me that they may show some of their recent pictures early in December. They brought with them some exceedingly beautiful sketches.

Hobart Bosworth, who is branching out as a buyer of pictures as well as a painter of them, recently bought two of Norman St. Clair's landscapes and one of Joseph Greenbaum's.

England's Mono-Railway.

The Lartigue & Ballybunion Railway is the only mono-railway in the United Kingdom, similar to that which Behr planned to lay down between Liverpool and Manchester. It is a single line ten miles long, which was built at a cost of $15,000 a mile, and opened for traffic on March 5, 1888. Its peculiarity consists of a single rail secured to A-shaped trestles. The trains run on the top rail, and the coaches "straddle" over the trestles, like panniers hung on a donkey, being guided by small wheels at the sides. The engine also is arranged on this plan, having two boilers, two fireboxes and two chimneys. Eighteen miles an hour is the usual speed, although thirty miles an hour is possible. Equal weight on each side is aimed at, and the guard keeps a particularly keen lookout for bulky passengers to see that they are evenly distributed.

DREAM OF LIFE.

WOMAN IN WORLD'S WORK.

MARRIAGE IS HER OBLIGATION, NOT MAN'S.

A Large Number of Divorce Courts in the United States as Compared With England and Other European Countries Makes an Easy Matter the Breaking of Family Ties.

That a large percentage of marriages achieve very little beyond a bare working compromise with happiness in the United States as compared with those in other countries is the unequivocal statement of an essay on "Why American Marriages Fail," in the Atlantic Monthly.

Mrs. Rogers treats the subject of divorce as one in which drastic measures are needed to prevent its further spread in this country, and lays all the cause at the foot of womankind, who, she says, have failed to be taught and recognize their proper position in the world, which, she says, is marriage. As a matter of fact, she says with emphasis, that marriage is woman's work in the world, just as it is the province of man to be the breadwinner and provider.

Working out her deductions from current cases, Mrs. Rogers shows that there is more opportunity to get a divorce in this country than in any other country on the globe, showing that in the United States there are [illegible] divorce courts, as compared with one in England, 25 in Germany and 79 in France.

She divides her paper into three classes, and makes the primary one the fact that "marriage is woman's work in the world, not man's."

Following out this line of thought, Mrs. Rogers says: "From whatever point it is viewed, physical or spiritual, as a question of civic quality or a question of individual ethics, it is her specific share of the world's work, first, last, and always allotted to her by laws far stronger than she is. And the woman who fails to recognize this and acknowledge it has the germ of divorce in her veins at the outset."

Carrying out this line of thought, Mrs. Rogers continues: "Marriage is not man's work, but one of his dearest delusions, from which he parts begrudgingly. Moreover, it is not even necessary to him in the accomplishment of those things which are his work. It is generally no more than his dream of prolonging through years a humanly improbable condition. Happiness as a husband and father has always been his scarcely whispered prayer, his dearest secret hope, toward which all his idealism yearns. That numerous other and very potent motives enter men's hearts is not in the least overlooked, it is only claimed that to the average man it is a very beautiful dream.

"But the wife who insists childishly upon treating marriage, either in theory or practice, as a beautiful dream is forgetful of how very little is left of earnest lifework for a woman if she repudiates the dignified duty of wedlock placed upon her shoulders. Why should she not be taught the plain fact that no other work really important to the world has ever been done by a woman since the morning of the world? Only as a woman with all that entails upon her is she alone preeminent, unapproachable. And yet, apparently, her whole energy is today bent upon dethroning herself.

"Men at this stage of civilization are not only the world's workers, breadwinners, homebuilders, fighters, supporters of all civic duties—they are Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Harmon David Ryus of No. 1731 South Figueroa street entertained yesterday with a luncheon in honor of members of the Five Hundred Luncheon Club. The table was attractively ornamented with large yellow chrysanthemums, and places were marked with dainty cards hand painted with yellow blossoms. Mrs. Wallace Cahill Ayer was present as special guest. Covers were laid for Mrs. Ayer, Mrs. S. F. Johnson, Mrs. Otis Shaw, Mrs. George Dieter, Mrs. George Kress, Mrs. Forest, Mrs. J. M. Davies, Miss Helen Kimball, Mrs. Vallikett, Mrs. E. S. Hutchins, Mrs. J. B. Church, Mrs. M. H. Boehmer, Mrs. C. Nichols, Mrs. William Reese, Mrs. F. Vickery and Mrs. C. A. Stavnow.

Musical Tea.

A musical event of importance was that with which the Misses Blanche Ruby and Eliza Jordan entertained at Miss Ruby's home on Hoover street yesterday afternoon. It began early in the afternoon, and one interesting number followed another. The home was ornamented with a profusion of white and yellow chrysanthemums. Both young women are talented musicians, having studied in Paris. The invited list included a number of our prominent musicians. Sixty guests were bidden.

To Receive Informally.

Mrs. Frances Ogilvy-Wood of "Woodhurst," Alhambra, sister of C. L. Tutt, owner of the yacht Anemone, winner of the second prize in the first trans-Pacific race in 1906, will entertain informally this afternoon at her beautiful home. No invitations have been issued. Mrs. Wood will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John North, who were recently married at her home, and who have returned from their wedding trip. Mrs. Wood is a golf enthusiast and what little time she can spare from her social duties is spent on the golf links. Her husband, who is also fond of athletics, holds the world's record for the 125-yard show-shoe hurdle race as well as being a prominent lacrosse player. He is captain of the San Gabriel Country Club golf team, which will play several large games this season.

Miss Powers's Recipe Shower.

Miss Anna Powers entertained yesterday at her home, No. 1940 Lovelace avenue, with a recipe shower for her friend, Miss Nellie Mohr, a bride-elect, at which honors were divided with another guest, Mrs. J. R. Kirkpatrick, a recent bride, formerly Miss Josephine Le Doux, who was married during the absence of Miss Powers from the city.

The decorations were in light blue and pink, and each guest, after removing her wraps was ushered into the dining room, where a leather-bound book lay open on the table, and each was required to write in this book, in her own hand, the recipe she had brought for the bride.

The score cards were in the form of a book, tied with blue ribbons. The prizes were a handsome hand-painted plate and a Los Angeles souvenir spoon. The booby prize was in the form of a book, inscribed "For De Feat." It was elaborately decorated with pink ribbons, entangled in which were a number of corn plasters.

The afternoon was pleasantly spent with music and cards and dainty refreshments were served.

The guests were Miss Nellie Mohr, Mrs. J. R. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Mohr, Miss Eunice Kirkpatrick, Miss Bee Roome, Miss Floy Row, Miss Mabel Watkins, Miss Jessie Lacey, Mrs. C. C. Tatum, Mrs. Colin Gair, Miss Violet Bauer, Miss Laura Sellers, Miss Helen Hale, Mrs. Frank Hutton, Miss Adelaide Salmon, Mrs. S. Seago, Miss Mary Newkirk, Miss Bessie Beatty, Miss Mabel Crossman, Mrs. McFarland, Mrs. J. W. Edwards, Miss Leona Hutchenson, Mrs. Frank Simmons, Miss Myrtle La Touche, Miss Linda Spurlock, Mrs. Walter Wren, Miss Clara Bullas, Miss Edna Shobell, Miss E. Bowers and Miss Hornby.

Wednesday Luncheon.

Mrs. G. E. Slaughter gave a luncheon Wednesday in compliment to her daughter and daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. J. Kribs and Mrs. H. E. Slaughter, both recent brides. Autumn leaves were used for decorating throughout the house and hand-painted place cards with sketches of the same foliage completed the pretty effect. Guessing games were played and the first prize was captured by Mrs. H. E. Slaughter. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of the occasion were Mrs. H. E. Slaughter, Mrs. G. E. Burrell, Mrs. E. J. Kribs, Mrs. S. M. Goddard, Mrs. G. S. Smith, Mrs. G. M. Golden, Mrs. S. I. Booth, Miss Hanna and Mrs. G. E. Slaughter.

Opening Dance.

The opening reception and dance of the Cotillon Class was given Friday evening at the Burlington, corner of Ninth street and Burlington avenue. The club members include the younger social set of the Westlake district.

Engagement Announcement.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Eloise Grabell to John Curtis Keyse. Miss Grabell is a sister of Mrs. Elizabeth Lohman of No. 1374 West Forty-first street. Mrs. Lohman will entertain this week with an informal whist party in honor of her sister.

Afternoon Luncheon.

Mrs. J. Harvey McCarthy entertained yesterday afternoon with an interesting and delightful luncheon in honor of Miss Ines Moore and Miss Elsie Laux, two charming society girls whose engagements were recently announced, and who have been greatly entertained since the secret was told.

Engagement Party.

Misses' Apparel

To Be Proud Of

In THIS store Misses' apparel is not treated as an objectionable side-line. Instead, through close attention to the wants of the little women, it is made one of the most attractive and profitable departments in the store.

You can come here fully assured of finding what you want, and at a price that makes home-sewing a needless worry.

The dress shown on the figure at the right is of light blue nun's veiling with bodice of Oriental lace, and outside trimmed with blue valvet and cut steel buttons; 16 and 18-your sizes; twenty-five dollars.

The dress shown on figure at the left is of light green taffeta with white hair-line stripes; body trimmed with pleated ruffles of same material, and velvet ribbon; bodice and sleeves of allover lace; 12 and 14-year sizes; twenty-five dollars.

Many new suits—DISTINCTIVELY new ones—came in last week. (Rear of Annex)

The Robinson Company gathering of Street and dress hats will prove irresistibly charming to even the most fastidious of Southern California's women.

The cleverest creations of Paris and New York milliners are here in lavish profusion—unquestionably the greatest showing of exclusively rich millinery shown in the west. (Second Floor.)

Art Needlework

Enticingly Priced

With Christmas only just around the corner, and your Thanksgiving "spread" calling for new linens, these offerings ought to interest you:

18x45-inch Battenberg sideboard scarfs with lace edge and medallion centers; well worth $1.50. Tomorrow, $1.00 each.

18x45-inch scarfs of fine linen with drawn-work insertion around border and drawn-work in corners; very pretty and very serviceable; specially priced at a dollar.

A line of 20-inch Cluny lace center pieces with wide lace edges and fine linen centers; a variety of new and uncommonly attractive patterns; all strictly hand-made, and for serviceability they outclass any other kind of lace; would be generously good values at $2.00. Choose at $1.50 each.

All of our pretty little Christmas novelties, of which this Art Department has a seemingly endless variety, will be on display during the coming week. Do YOU want first choice? (Third Floor).

CHAPTER XIV.

THE MAKING OF A MAN

Old Dick was late at No. 2 that night. Even now he had not returned. The rain had ceased, and the wet gravel glistened as it crunched under their feet. Then came the compacted pine-needles of the Glebe End avenue, that private road which Mr. Jacob Romer traversed twice each day in his carriage. They felt kindly under foot, and upon their surface even Vic's strong "K" boots fell silently, as on thick oriental carpets.

Curiously enough, it was Phil Calmont who went first, alert to every sight and sound, without the least fear of the giant behind him, with whom he had cause to believe himself on bad terms. The big barn-owl he had christened Malachi passed across the glade with a soft woof of feathers, as if his wings had been made of white crape. In the crotches of the dwarf thorns and among the alders of the ha-ha ditches, blackbirds scolded the disturbers of the twilight, raging and scuffling along their branches, each trying to knock the other off.

Then the two men ranged up a little, as Vic's long stride told, and the narrow arch of greening trees opened out upon a telescopic view of Kirktown and the Incubus pits. First a ruddy glare, which was the blast furnaces over at the Dook Bank. Then a greenish "skarrow" shot pulsing through the russet light from the chemical works in the hollow beyond. All this was held and encircled by a sort of straw-colored milky way, which was the general gaslight illumination of the town. But far away, beyond the whirling and reversing silhouettes of the gaunt winding wheels and pithead fixtures of the Incubus Workings, a single beam pierced the night at intervals, clear as a star, but infinitely greater. It was the electric flash of the Wolf Skerry Lighthouse, beneath which, his eyes clad in the darkness of triple goggles, sat a certain red-headed Irishman, with two books before him—the Bible and "Charles O'Malley." And as at that moment he was thinking of his duties as a foster-father, he was perusing the former. Billy Bryan was specially fond of the account of Paul's voyage in the last chapters of the "Acts." And his verdict was: "True courage, that's what I call it. Good men, every one of them! Please the pigs, Billy, ye will never have to do the like, knocking about them seas with never a lighthouse harked on the chart, or a decent man to keep the cogs running true, all the way from Blackwall to Bombay—not to mention that place Putty Holy, which is no seaport that ever I heard of. But, all the same, the Castor and Pollux is a very tidy name for a barque, considering the times. I once sailed in her myself! Out o' South Shiel's it was, coastwise, and the devil's own brat of a captain! But well found—oh, nobody could say that the Castor and Pollux was ill found."

So, while Billy Bryan meditated there, and the girl to whose support he contributed of his substance peered through the dim window-panes of the cottage, Ludovic Morris and Phil Calmont swung out of the black arch of the Glebe End entrance. They saw Mr. Romer's big iron gates, like a double blotch of denser darkness, on either side of them. They had never been shut since he took possession of the house.

"Well?" said Mr. Vic Morris.

"Well?" returned Mr. Phil Calmont.

"You have nothing to say to me?" It was the giant who spoke.

"Nothing! Pray, have you?" It was slim Phil who answered.

Vic Morris considered a while. Instinctively they had turned away from the lurid glare of the town and works in the valley beneath them. They passed more slowly up the broad road which led toward the hills, and so at the last, after infinite adventure among hills of heather, and sheep-dotted shoulders of turfage, cried over continually by plover and curlew, into England itself. But that goal was far away. Drove roads, post roads, ancient inns, murderous sloughs of despond, hills of difficulty, guardian towns with faded guilds, and volunteers and police, constables instead of fencibles and town-watchmen—these all had to be passed, but at length and last there was England.

They went that way. The two men, successful and unsuccessful, youthful energy and youthful dreaminess, conveying each other, while Phil looked upward at the hills, cut black against the sky, and Vic Morris, honest and arrogant, tried hard to humble himself. He would rather have led a forlorn hope than do it. Indeed, the former would have been easy to him. By sheer force of will he had been doing as much all his life.

But Vic Morris was a very strong man, so much so that he could even give in on occasion when he found himself in the wrong. As the pitmen said, "He could own up, but it gave him crick in the neck to do it!"

And, indeed, his throat was dry and his tongue well-nigh cleaving to the roof of his mouth, when at last he made up his mind to apologise—and that to the "idle lout" whom he had scorned so lately.

"Mr. Calmont," he said, turning squarely in front of the young man, and thereby stopping him as effectually as if by his art of engineer he had blocked the road from side to side, "I am here to ask your pardon. Down there I spoke like a fool, as no man has the right to speak to another—no, not to his brother."

"And I—I answered as a fool. I beg your pardon."

"Really, we ought both to go back and beg Miss Vida's," said Mr. Morris, with some irresolution, taking half a step in that direction.

"No," said Phil, stopping him in his turn, with an outstretched hand, "she does not want us."

He had no desire to face Vida again that night. Vic Morris sighed.

"I daresay you are right," he said, "but I say, didn't she dress me down. And didn't I deserve it!"

Phil kept silent.

"Oh, you may speak out," said Vic with a laugh, which sounded a little hollow. "I know I did. I hope I have enough sense for that."

Phil knew that such knowledge was good for the soul, and still said no word. There was a lengthy silence. They passed the end of several farm loanings and cameout on the unfenced moorland, which ran in dark patches of heather and dead bracken blotted on a lighter ground of grayish beht-grass up to the black-splintered shale edges of Calden Fell.

"I wronged you—chut!—that is not what I wanted to say; don't let's get down to book talk," said Vic, swinging his arms contemptuously. "You are one man, and I am another. I am your senior, and I talked like a fool, like a young, jealous ass. Don't think I want to intrude myself. But, if you will tell me what you would care to do in the way of work, I will give you my advice as if you were my brother. No, better than that—my brother is a beast. I would have nothing to do with him if he came begging to my office on his bended knees. Pshaw—more book talk. Well, what do you mean to go for?"

And, somehow, there was a ring of such sincerity in the voice of the young engineer that Phil was moved by it. His ear, keen-set for arrogance or assumption, could find neither now in the speech of Vic Morris. So he set himself to tell what he had never told to any, save only to little Miss Nunsby in the summer-house surrounded with privet.

His father's struggle with so large a family, his absorption in his work, his generosity in the large, his carelessness and lack of thought in the particular, had resulted in Phil's being left to one side, stranded in early manhood without a career. For the uncle who had promised to leave him his money had died without a penny, and had to be buried at the doctor's expense.

"That's good, anyway," interjected Vic Morris.

"It certainly was not good for me at the time," said Phil quietly. "I had been carefully brought up to do nothing."

"A great fortune does not necessarily spoil a man," said Vic, with severity, "but a hundred or two a year ruins him without fail."

"Then is there in your world no place for a thinker?" demanded Phil.

"Certainly—a great place—the first place," the engineer exclaimed, "if only he will think useful and helpful things."

"Salvation by machinery—the old story—I know it," cried Phil. "Man made in the image of God by the explosion of a beneficent gasometer, by the sun letting drop some argon, which changes chemically the minds of men—makes 'em greenish. Well, it may be hopelessly antiquated, but I confess I prefer an older evangel to that. 'Love your neighbor' will outlive all the chemistry of gases."

"I don't know what you are talking about," said Vic Morris, "but I was wanting an office assistant, and I offer you the place. You have a good head, with plenty of brain space above your hat brim. You have an ordinary education, I presume?"

"Very ordinary," said Phil, "except, perhaps, as to poetry."

"Then the rest of your faculties have had a long rest. So much the better. You will come fresh to the problems. Only promise me, no poetry—not a thought of poetry between the hours of 9 and 5. After that, you can dribble anapaests all night long if you choose."

Somehow the two men found themselves, as they passed Glebe End Cottage, on their way back, shaking hands.

And there was old Dick Finnan just entering the avenue. Instinctively they stood aside to let him pass into the shadow, and then, without a glance backward toward the lighted window of Vida's speckless house-place, they took their way toward the town, and Phil's new work.

So it came to pass that Incubus & Co. began to weigh upon the shoulders of Philip Calmont, long accustomed to carry no heavier burden than sonnet, ode, and lyric—of which in his time he had accumulated great store; an infirmacy, in fact, of the maimed, the halt, and the blind.

CHAPTER XV.

THE POET IN THE OFFICE.

The next morning at half-past five Philip Calmont found himself awake and dressed—in a wide sonorous, empty house. The Doctor and all the Healthy Family were asleep. Some would sleep for hours. Others would come yawning down about eight. But all were equally ignorant that the third son of the house—idle, dreamy Philip—had begun his life's career. It was a clear morning, with the sun showing well above the wavy outline of the Keir hills to the east.

The bells of the iron works were clanging, the conches blowing from all the pitheads far and near. Presently the night shift would be coming up, and it was Phil's duty to be down in the little office which had been erected near the descent of No. 2 for Vic Morris to do his paper work in. What he was expected to do, or how he was to do it, Phil did not know. But he knew that Vic Morris must necessarily spend a good many hours each day underground. And so, with a new kind of prevision not at all natural to him, he routed out and slipped into his pockets several dusty volumes of Todhunter, together with an old Colenso's Arithmetic. But he quite forgot all about any dinner.

He was standing with his hands in his pockets, a little chill from his early rising, when Vic Morris arrived, his morning fold of thought double-barring his brow. Morris started at sight of Phil Calmont, and for a moment that youth thought he was going to deny all knowledge of him. The next he nodded brusquely, but kindly.

"That's right, you are on time," he said; "there is much to be done. See that file of books, these are Patent Specifications. Run through all of them for the fourteen years, and mark the places of everything that deals with the ventilation of mines. I am going below. So long; I shall see you in the afternoon. You will find pens and paper about."

And Vic Morris, without further instructions to his new aid, was gone. Phil found it very lonely, left to himself in that small wooden house; the German stove in one corner scrupulously clean, and the stove pipe only used to hang oiled paper copies of plans upon, the walls three deep in "sections," geological and topographical, colored with the most death-dealing reds and far-reaching blues.

But Phil soon found paper and a blotter. He had a fountain pen in his pocket. He took a rapid glance through the volumes to get the scale of his work, and then lost himself for many hours. Phil Calmont had a natural quickness of understanding, and instead of merely marking the places in the volumes of reports, he added to each reference a brief résumé of the special features of the invention, so far as he was able to understand them. He had a ready talent for sketching roughly, but with sufficient correctness to convey an idea. He added, therefore, many jottings of apparatus, and when Vic Morris returned at 3 o'clock he found his new hand still at his work, quite a solid pile of notes skewered on the desk, and the last volume of the Patents' series in course of being digested.

He stood a moment in astonishment. Truly, it seemed that there were many things that he must take back. He did not speak at once, but, while Phil continued his eager search, his eager finger scrambling up one page and down another, his fountain pen scribbling feverishly, and his mind happier and more content than ever he had known it, Vic Morris picked up page after page. All was in order, every pertinent case numbered and analyzed, the technical words, at the meaning of which Phil could only have the vaguest guess, written very plain; especially when Vic glanced at the unpretending drawings, each of which told its tale to his experienced eye, he could not refrain from clapping his pupil on the back with a hearty, "You'll do, you'll do!"—which was the best reward he could have made the worker at the close of his first day of business life.

"All that!" cried Vic Morris heartily. "I will wager you did not take long over your dinner!"

Phil was aghast. It seemed that he had neglected a part of his duty.

"I forgot all about it," he said penitently.

"Great Stephenson!" cried the engineer, "have you not had a bite? You must take it now."

"I forgot to bring any," said Phil with shame deeper on his face. "You see, I was so keen to get out of the house."

Vic nodded. He understood that. He understood, also, how he had misjudged his rival. But he was by no means a man to waste time in mere sympathy. He banged the door, and took a score of strides to the foremen's canteen, from which presently he burst in with an armful of potted dainties, half a chicken, sufficient good bread, and a pat of butter.

"There," he said, "I never saw such a fellow—to go without his dinner!"

And, as the lad ate and drank, Vic looked over the notes he had ordered him to make, more, perhaps, as an exercise than anything else, and murmured softly to himself: "There will not be such an engineer's draughtsman and assistant anywhere when I have done with him! No, not in Britain. Perhaps even an engineer some day!"

And he watched him eat with something like a smile of pleasure on his hard face.

"Yes, I will make a man of him," he said, "and, if possible, an engineer. So that if the beast beats me with——with——" he hissed out the name—"she will at least get a man, in spite of her ill taste!"

WOMEN ON AN EXPLORATION.

HAZARDOUS TRIP TAKEN IN THE SELKIRK RANGE.

Thousand-Mile Trip in the Wilds of British Columbia During Which They Were Lost for Five Days in a Snowstorm—Bear Flees at Sight of a Woman.

[New York World:] Having tramped nearly 1000 miles through unexplored sections of British Columbia, scaling the dangerous, untraveled, and snow-covered heights of the Selkirk Mountains and braving hardships such as the pioneers of the early forties endured, is the remarkable experience of Mrs. Bayard Fuller, a young New York woman. She returned to her home, No. 315 West Ninety-seventh street, last week, after her two months' trip, which she calls "an outing."

Mrs. Fuller is the wife of the supervising inspector of foods and fruits in the department of health. She was a member of a scientific research party headed by Dr. Charles J. Shaw, professor of biology, in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia. Every one of the twenty-two members of the party was interested in the expedition solely for science.

"I was the only one who went just for the fun of it," said Mrs. Fuller, "and it was a delightful experience."

Other members of the exploring party included Prof. Frederick Beach of Yale; Miss Caroline Romer of the staff of the New York Botanical Gardens and a teacher in the Newark High School; Miss Emma Snipe, a teacher in the schools of Sunbury, Pa., and two New York public-school teachers, besides members of the faculty of Yale and Harvard and their wives.

"After arriving at Ravenstoke, B. C., we boarded a steamboat, which took us about thirty-five miles up the Columbia River," said Mrs. Fuller. "With pack ponies we traveled inward toward the base of the mountains and pitched camp. For two months, July and August, we slept every night on the ground, rolled up in army blankets. Of course, we had the tents to protect us from the cold night winds and rain.

"All of the women of the party wore high boots to their knees, bloomers, short flannel skirts and blue flannel shirts like the lumbermen in that country wear. Each of us carried a supply of matches and a hunting knife on the mountain climbs.

"The highest mountain we ascended, one of the loftiest of the Selkirk range, was about 10,000 feet. I found that on these trips it was much more difficult descending than going up for the reason that one must be exceedingly sure footed. On making one descent after a big snowstorm and blizzard we had to cut our way through ice, breaking it with our walking sticks and making a tier of steps, which we followed all the way down.

"I guess the most exciting experience was the time we were lost for five days on a mountain-climbing expedition. A regular old-fashioned blizzard, such as you read about in the Rockies, came up, after we had reached the top, and were enjoying the magnificent scenery below. This was about the middle of August, but it seemed like January. I never saw such a snowfall. Then the wind blew like a hurricane. We found a couple of little caves in the mountain side and camped there that night. Slowly we made our way down the next day, but it was very slow work. On the fifth day we were not quite sure whether we were on the right track home, and our food had given out the day before. We had nothing to eat for twenty-four hours, and we were extremely hungry and cold.

"In this state you can just imagine our exceeding joy when we sighted a log cabin in the valley. This was the first instance of real civilization we had come across in our trip after pitching camp. The cabin was an abandoned miner's shack, but to our great joy we found it had been left in remarkable habitable order. It was well stocked with all sorts of canned goods and other food. We built a big fire and spent the night there, after enjoying a supper that we shall all remember. Next day after walking about fifteen miles through the valley we found our way back to camp.

"After the snowstorm we enjoyed getting back to the valley, which abounds in a gorgeous variety of flowers and beautiful foliage, the most beautiful I have ever seen. That country is remarkably free from reptiles and obnoxious bugs of all sorts usually found in the lower regions while camping. But there were nights when we heard the distant cry of a mountain cat, and once I came across a black bear while exploring a little way from camp. I had my camera with me, and was about to get a picture of a remarkably fine old tree when I noticed a medium-sized black bear walking ahead of me a little way. I thought I would climb a tree; then I remembered that bears could climb trees, too. I wanted very much to take his picture, and while I stood there trembling with fear and thinking of the quick work he would make of me after our introductions, Mr. Bear turned around. He looked at me indifferently for a moment, then whirled around and sped as fast as he could in the opposite direction. While two other members of the party on little trips about the camp saw a mountain wolf and a bear from a distance, none of us were ever molested.

"While we fished some and cooked and ate some gophers toward the end of our stay, when we got real hungry for a change of food we lived very well on camp provisions of bacon, Indian bread, made of flour and water, and dried fruits.

"We climbed several of the mountains and wanted so much to make the ascent of the highest one, which has never, so far as is known, been scaled by human foot. But it was too far from our camp, and the time was too short.

"The trips we took were considered most dangerous ones, and it was only after great assurance on our part that we were physically able and morally courageous enough to face the hardships and risks that Dr. Shaw consented to our joining the party. Now that we have proved ourselves capable, he has signified a willingness to admit us as members of the next party, which expects to go further into the interior of British Columbia to learn the secrets of that fascinating wilderness."

BITS OF VERSE.

A Parting Guest.

Dear world, how shall I saw farewell to thee
As from thy friendly house I go at last?
Let me not like an unloved wanderer be
From thy door cast.

No, I have been a little while thy guest;
Still there are light and music, down thy halls
The laughing recognition of a jest
Rises and falls.

Thou hast with love and bread my wants supplied,
And hurried on my hours in joyous flight;
But longer with thee now I cannot bide—
I came to say good night;

But leave not other friends who need thee here—
Give me thy hand and I am quickly gone;
Thy lamps will light me with their genial cheer
Until I meet the dawn.

—[Meredith Nicholson.

Somewhere Is Light.

Never a sigh
When the world's goin' wrong;
Somewhere is light
And the joy of a song!

Bright stars are shining
Through shadows of night;
Open the windows
Of life to the light!

What of the sorrow
That darkens the way?
Never a winter
But sings of the May!

—[Atlanta Constitution.

The Outcasts.

They go their way from dawn till dark, with dull, averted eyes,
That heed no lure of loveliness where earth's warm beauty lies;
Ah, what to them if thrushes sing, or if the rose be red—
Since they of what they crave the most are disinherited?

And some for doubt, and some for fear, and some for pride were doomed;
And some flung budded dreams away to wither ere they bloomed;
And others shut themselves apart, so deep in ancient lore
They would not stir to welcome him when Love knocked at their door.

Yet, tho' their gain be wealth, or wit, or fame blown far and wide,
Without the pale of Love's domain forever they must bide;
And none there is of this gray host who would not give his all
If he might harken to Love's voice or answer to Love's call!

—[Charlotte Becker, in New England Magazine.

Night.

Come to me, not as once thou camest, Night,
With light and splendor up the gorgeous west;
Easing the heart's rich sense of thee with sighs
Sobbed out of all emotion on Love's breast,
While the dark world waned wavering its rest,
Half seen athwart the dim, delicious light
Of languid eyes;

But softly, soberly; and dark, more dark,
Till my life's shadow lose itself in thine,
Athwart the light of slowly-gathering tears,
That come between me and the starlight, shine
From distant melancholy deeps divine,
While day slips downward through a rosy arc
To other spheres.

—[Owen Meredith.

Great Nature Is an Army Gay.

Great Nature is an army gay,
Restless marching on its way;
I hear the bugles clear and sweet,
I hear the tread of million feet.
Across the plain I see it pour;
It tramples down the waving grass;
Within the echoing mountain pass
I hear a thousand cannon roar.

It swarms within my garden gate;
My deepest well it drinketh dry.
It doth not rest; it doth not wait;
By night and day it sweepeth by;
Ceaseless it marches by my door;
It heeds me not, though I implore.
I know not whence it comes, nor where
It goes. For me it doth not care—

Whether I starve, or eat, or sleep,
Or live or die, or sing or weep.
And now the banners are all bright,
Now torn and blackened by the fight.
Sometimes its laughter shakes the sky,
Sometimes the groans of those who die,
Still through the night and through the livelong day
The infinite army marches on its remorseless way.

[illegible] A GOOD EDUCATION.

[illegible] things in general one day [illegible] Mrs. Hughes said: "Do I [illegible] higher education of [illegible], that depends on the [illegible] the woman, her sphere in [illegible], the use she intends [illegible] of her knowledge. [illegible] happier memories in my [illegible] connected with my [illegible] and my regret is that I [illegible] in touch with teachers [illegible] and the objects for [illegible] clubs are instituted. [illegible] college clubs, the New [illegible] and the Eastern Association [illegible] College. But my [illegible] social duties are so [illegible] that I never find time to [illegible] meetings. However, I [illegible] effort to be present [illegible] and annual [illegible] the life for women I find myself in the same position as about higher education. I see good and evil in clubs. Good, if one seeks the highest aims involved in all efforts to promote patriotism, philanthropy, or intellectual pursuits; evil, if a woman permits it to engross her time to the neglect of more sacred duties. Personally I have always been so occupied that I could make clubs only a very occasional diversion. For some years I have been a member of the Mary Washington Colonial Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. I have the most cordial sympathy for all that this great patriotic association of women represents. I can think of no better way in which women can spend their leisure than in assisting its ends. Patriotic societies cultivate the mind and heart together, and such cultivation is the highest attainable."

Naturally, Mrs. Hughes will not discuss that entertaining proposition of making her president general of the Daughters in case she attains a more exalted station. Considered dispassionately, it is not a flattering balm for one's self love, because the personal equation is eliminated. It is not the woman, but the position the woman holds that is honored. But Mrs. Hughes possesses a beautiful fund of sound common sense. She is likewise a woman to whom the highest ideals appeal. Her devotion to the society is above personal considerations, and she has acceded to the proposition that as first lady of the land her influence for good will be stupendous. The society is bleeding from internal wounds. Factions and factions of factions have torn and rent it until some gloomy prophets foresee the end. A strong hand like Mrs. Hughes's, and the prestige of a woman so highly placed, will bring all opponents into a harmonious working body.

A LOVE MARRIAGE.

Mrs. Hughes is the daughter of the late Walter S. Carter of New York, the senior partner of the law firm, Carter & Hughes, of which the Governor was for so long the junior. She was born in Milwaukee in 1864. Together with other exceedingly rare qualities, Mrs. Hughes is perfectly frank about her age. She knew Mr. Hughes only a few years before her marriage. The young people were thrown together while Gov. Hughes was a clerk in Mr. Carter's office, but the wedding was deferred until Mr. Carter was assured of the sterling qualities and the possible success of his daughter's suitor. The young lovers never entertained a doubt of the termination of their romance, even should fortune refuse to smile. Mrs. Hughes has unalterable convictions about marriages for worldly motives, and her ideas are more sentimental than those of a woman married to a successful politician.

"I have strong convictions," observed the Governor's wife, "about long engagements. I think they should be avoided whenever it is practical. Nor do I believe in waiting until the fortune is made. If a young man has ability, good habits, and industry, his fortune is a foregone conclusion. The real question is whether people love each other as they should and whether that love will survive no matter what storms may come. A little necessary economy in the beginning of the married life is an excellent tonic for love, for it produces self-denial and the habit of considering well every step taken in the new life. I think young people who have everything to start with and nothing to look forward to getting for themselves, lose a great deal out of the happiness of the first year of marriage."

There are four children in the Hughes family, the youngest, a daughter born during the past summer. Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., is his mother's special pride. He is now a sophomore at Brown University at Providence, R. I., his father's alma mater, and his record is brilliant enough to fire the enthusiasm of a less enthusiastic mother. He has taken every honor and premium in his various classes ever since his matriculation. He was one of the Phi Beta Kappa men, and last year he received the first honor for general attainments. Mrs. Hughes prepared young Charles for college, and during vacation time devoted long hours to training him in Latin and the classics and in general literature.

THE ELDEST DAUGHTER.

But Miss Helen Hughes, the eldest daughter, is a girl in whom public interest centers. She is a slender girl, with dark, grave eyes, like her father, but with the brightness and affability of her mother. She is not a student like her brother, but her record at St. Agatha's, a school connected with Trinity Church, New York City, was creditable. In Albany Miss Helen studies under private teachers. Miss Catherine is not yet ten. But with a young man old enough to count among the beaux, and a girl who will be about eighteen, and an infant to enliven the White House, it would be acknowledged that the Hughes family offers the most alluring prospect from the social standpoint of any yet mentioned in connection with the great national objective point.

Mrs. Hughes is devoted to foreign travel. For years she made it a point to spend the vacation time in different countries of Europe in order to comprehend the national characteristics thoroughly. When such an extensive itinerary was impossible she would go to different parts of her own country. She knows New York State from border to border, and her home is filled with sketches of her travels. Her father was a collector of rare old engravings, and she inherited the love of getting unique pictures together. The library in the New York home is filled with these treasures, and it was a treat not often obtainable outside a museum to inspect them and learn their history. Some have been taken to Albany, for, without those books and pictures, Gov. and Mrs. Hughes would feel bereft. It is well known that the Governor finds his greatest diversion in stories of adventure. Mrs. Hughes likes good fiction also, and it must be a shock to those with preconceived ideas about their erudition and grave habits to find their library stocked with novels of the airiest caliber instead of philosophical or economic treatises.

MISS MARMARA HENRY,
5036 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handsful, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. Eloise Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is getting thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

FLORENCE RUSSELL,
Age 6 years,
315 Mohawk Street, CHICAGO.

Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does on those of matured persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that "DANDERINE GREW EVERY BIT OF IT."

MISS SELMA HASSELL,
3738 North 42d Court, CHICAGO.

Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 3½ feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together."

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, fertilizing and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. IT IS THE NATURAL FOOD OF THE HAIR, SCIENTIFICALLY CHARGED WITH NEW AND GENUINE LIFE-PRODUCING ESSENCES UNHEARD OF BY OTHER MAKERS OF HAIR TONIC. BEAUTIES.

TO HAVE been a clerk in a big department store, and then within a year to be voted by a society of artists the prettiest girl appearing in Boston theaters within the last six months, is what Miss Grace Lane, 16, a Chicago girl, considers gaining fame in a hurry. Miss Lane was clerking in a Chicago store when she began to study for the stage. She landed a job which carried her to Boston, where she received the beauty prize awarded by the Boston Artists' Association.

Miss Helen E. M. Roberts, a teacher in the Pewaukee High School, Chicago, has been asked to resign because of jealousy among the other teachers of her beauty and ability. When the pupils heard of the board's action they refused to attend classes. A mass meeting of the pupils' parents was held and resolutions were drawn up demanding that Miss Roberts be retained.

A group of Chicago women, headed by Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield Taylor, will December 11 and 12, in the interest of charity, pose in the most gorgeous living picture show ever put on a stage in this country. Forty of the handsomest women of Chicago will form a gallery of living reproductions of the masterpieces of Gainsborough, of Hoppner, of Reynolds, of Raeburn, of Boucher, of the paintings of the masters of a century or two ago, whose beautiful women still live in the canvases of the Louvre, of Versailles and of the Luxembourg. In a great gilt frame and with a Gainsborough background reproduced with faultless accuracy, Mrs. Harold F. McCormick will appear as the famous Mrs. Banfoy. In another frame Mrs. Honore Palmer will take the place of Gainsborough's Duchess of Devonshire in the forest clearing with the lowering sky over her, trees all around her and the ducal palace looming in the background. In another frame Mrs. Henry Dibble will represent the Princess De la Mabelle; in another Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield Taylor will take the role of the beautiful Recamier. In all there will be forty masterpieces on the wall of the gallery. They will be shown one at a time, twenty on the first night and twenty on the second night.

Mme. A. V. Pederneiras, wife of the military attaché of the Brazilian embassy at Washington, is one of the international beauties who grace the social courts at Washington. She has just returned from The Hague with a whole wardrobe of gorgeous new Parisian gowns which will go to enhance what has been called the most lovely cosmopolitan type of patrician beauty in the national capital. Mme. Pederneiras gives the lie to the slander of an English professor, who asserted that American women "could neither walk nor talk gracefully," for her graceful lithe carriage is only exceeded by her charming conversational powers, to which her broken English adds a piquant charm.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

THE Rev. Dr. Charles Coke Woods, who is to succeed Rev. J. E. Rockwell in the pastorate of the First Methodist Church at Fresno, has gained considerable fame as a poet, and he has a wide reputation as a lecturer and scholar. He has published a few books of poetry, and they have been widely read in this country and India, one of his books, "Prairie Sod Songs," has been translated into Japanese and published in that country.

Alfred Salisbury, a graduate of the State University with the 1907 class, has been named student interpreter to the American Embassy at Tokio. He was recommended by President Wheeler. Salisbury is a member of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

Prof. R. S. Holway, head of the department of geography of the State University, has been called upon for an expert opinion of the location of the boundary line between Nevada and Sierra counties to settle a controversy. He was one of the surveyors who laid out the dividing line.

The Rev. Hugh Gallagher, one of the best-known Jesuit fathers on the Coast, and who, for the past nine years, has been treasurer of Santa Clara College, has been appointed superior of the Jesuits' College at Seattle and rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in that city.

Miss Gertrude Partington of San Francisco, after an absence of nearly seven years in Paris, where she has devoted her attention mainly to portraiture, both in oils and etching, is expected to return to her home in a few weeks. Much of the work she has done in Paris has been sent to America, John Wanamaker having been one of her constant patrons.

Prof. Samuel Fortier, formerly connected with the State University at Berkeley will at once begin his new duties at Washington as chief of irrigation experiment work. For nine months of the year Fortier will live in Washington. The remainder of the year will be spent in a tour of inspection of the work of the Agricultural Department. For the present year the new chief has outlined extensive work for his corps of experts. He will immediately have published all the reliable data on irrigation covering all the different sections of the United States. His salary will be $15,000 a year.

ACTIVITIES FOR WOMEN.

AN HONOR accorded only to Queens in Europe, unprecedented in the United States, was vouchsafed Miss Helen Gould on October 22, when, seated on horseback in the center of the parade ground, at Fort Leavenworth, she reviewed 3000 marching United States regular troops. The salute was given her by the parading troops as though she had been the President or the commandant of the Department of the West. The philanthropic woman was almost overcome by the extraordinary spectacle, and her eyes filled with tears as the gorgeous pageant swept past. It was in recognition of Miss Gould's providing a $50,000 Young Men's Christian Association building for the soldiers of the reservation that every man, from Brig.-Gen. Hall down to the greenest "rookie," donned his finest trappings and deployed, fired volleys, double-quicked, then marched on again to the strains of a dozen bands. When Miss Gould had reviewed them they tramped into the beautiful building she had given and listened to her praises declaimed at its dedication by Gov. Hoch, Gen. Hall and J. M. Miller, international secretary of the Y.M.C.A. "I am profoundly grateful to the garrison for this splendid tribute," said Miss Gould at the end of the ceremonies. "I was never more deeply touched by the affection which the men of our army bear me. It is the greatest pleasure of my life to be able to show them my esteem for them in return."

Dr. Mary M. Wolfe, resident physician in charge of the women's department of the State Insane Hospital, Norristown, Pa., was appointed to represent the United States at the International Congress on Psychiatry, Neurology, Psychology and the Nursing of Lunatics held last month at Amsterdam, Holland. Dr. Wolfe is described as a handsome woman with considerable personal charm, besides being thoroughly equipped in her profession.

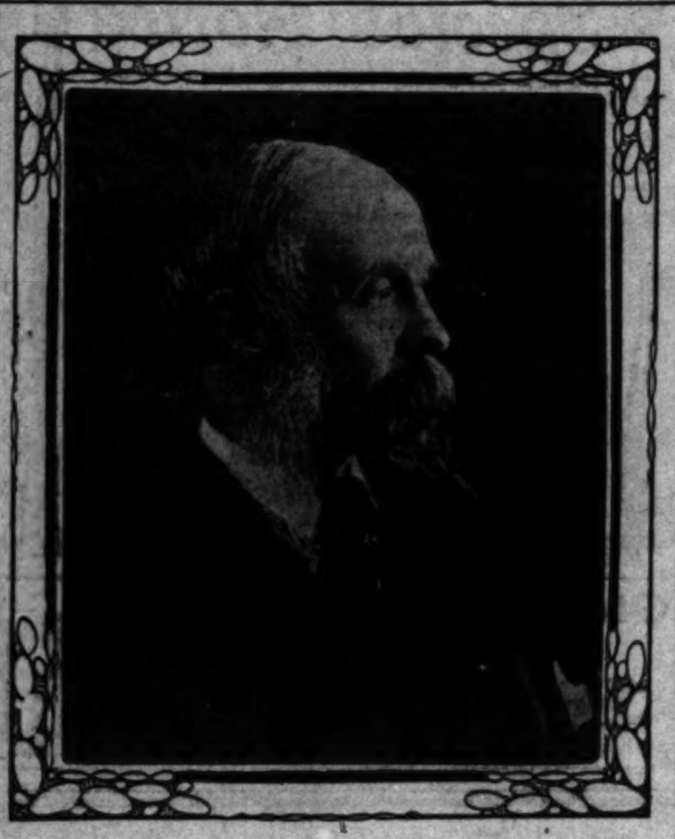
The proudest woman in New York is Mrs. Rosa Schaller, wife of Russell Schaller, secretary of the North Beach Company. She is one of the two women named among the new list of twenty-four Carnegie heroes to whom have been awarded medals and cash for acts of heroism, and has just received, done up in a handsomely mounted case, a silver medal bearing her name and a legend to the effect that for saving Miss Ida Weisman from drowning in July, 1905, at North Beach the Carnegie hero fund commission had awarded her the token of its regards. Mrs. Schaller is a dainty little woman and weighs twenty-two pounds less than the woman whose life she saved, but she is every inch an athlete and is a stronger swimmer than many men twice her size.

The only Indian woman lawyer in the United States, Julia St. Cyr, a Winnebago Indian, has been before the Federal Court in Omaha where she defended herself on a charge of having accepted too large a fee as a pension attorney from an old Indian squaw of her tribe, whose husband had been a scout under Crook. And so well did the Indian woman conduct her defense that the jury found for her on the very first ballot. During the trial Miss St. Cyr used all the arts of a trained pleader, not neglecting to shed a few tears at a critical moment. But having departed from the customary stolidity of Indian character long enough to make her impression on the jurymen, she returned to the impassive mask of the red man and when the verdict of "not guilty" was announced, simply said, with the greatest indifference: "Well, I knew it would be that way." She did not attempt to thank the jury for its verdict, but with head erect, stalked out of the courtroom when told that she was free.

LOVERS OF SPORT.

MRS. FRED LINZ of San Francisco, president of the Woman's Automobile Club of California, has received a letter from the secretary of the Ladies' Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland, notifying her that she had been elected an honorary member of that exclusive organization. The British club was the first woman's automobile club organized in the world, and the honorary membership which has been conferred on Mrs. Linz is in appreciation of the fact that she organized the Women's Automobile Club of California, the first of its kind in America. The membership of the club to which Mrs. Linz is now attached is composed of the cream of the nobility and gentry of Great Britain and Ireland.

Paris is soon to have a woman jockey, Miss Mary Money, who is an American girl, and is now a guest of the Countess de Molina at Chantilly. When riding she dresses like a male jockey, is a fearless horsewoman and takes hedges and ditches like a practiced steeplechaser.



Sir James Crichton-Browne.

OVER THE SEA.

THE venerable Earl of Wemyss, who has just entered his 89th year, was born in the last years of the Regency, and has, therefore, lived in the reigns of five English sovereigns. He is, of course, easily the oldest of Scottish peers. In suite of his years, Lord Wemyss is wonderfully active. He shoots and fishes with all the zest of a man half his age, and lately he has taken up motoring. He still speaks frequently in the House of Lords.

The Kaiser reads three newspapers a day, changing the list frequently to get a line on politics at home. But many clippings on a variety of subjects are furnished him every day from foreign and domestic papers by the heads of the government departments, and these he reads carefully, making notes as he goes, the clippings being filed away for reference.

As part of his preparation for assuming the crown when the time comes for him to do so, Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany has begun a year's work in the Prussian Ministry of the Interior. He will study the working of each department according to a programme approved by the Emperor, and under the personal supervision of the Minister of the Interior. It is understood he will successively serve in each important ministry until he becomes familiar with the whole system of administration.

Consul-General Straight of Mukden says that Chinese authorities have been active in enforcing the provisions of the anti-opium edict, and it is expected that all dens will be finally closed by the early part of June, 1908. Proclamations in the vernacular have been posted everywhere throughout the city, urging the people to abandon the use of the drug. There have in the past been 1600 dens in Mukden, the daily consumption averaging 200 packets, or about 1000 pounds a day. It is stated, also, that about 2000 pounds of bean oil have been daily used in the opium lamps.

The Kaiser has installed as head of the German colonies in both Southwest and East Africa, Count Adolf Von Goetzen, a young man who has proved himself possessed of splendid administrative ability and dauntless courage. Count Von Goetzen showed his administrativev ability while Ambassador in Rome for four years, when he smoothed over the Triple Alliance rows. Later he was sent by the Kaiser on numerous exploring expeditions in Africa and elsewhere. The Governor of German East Africa is well known in Washington, where for two years, from 1896 to 1898, he was military attaché to the German Embassy. He also was Germany's representative on the field during the Spanish-American War.

Hugh Cecil Lea, member of Parliament for the London borough of East St. Pancras, is half American, and has spent many years roaming the United States and earning a living here. So thoroughly has he imbibed the American spirit that he is a thorn in the side of the present Liberal government, and insists that the government sit up and show him this, that and the other thing. When the House of Commons declared recently that Lea had insulted it and the government by declaring that titles were bought and sold, and demanded that he withdraw, Lea called a mass meeting in his borough. The hall was jammed. Lea offered to resign, but the meeting refused to hear of it and passed resolution after resolution unanimously indorsing what he had said in Parliament and urging him to continue exposing the shame of the mighty and the graft of the government.

Britain's wealthiest woman is Miss Emily Charlotte Talbot, an unmarried woman but little known outside her native Wales, where she owns two magnificent estates. Miss Talbot inherited from her father all his estate in Wales, which is said to be worth over $7,000,000. She lives very quietly on her Welsh property, rarely visiting her London house, and dispenses charity in a splendid manner.

Sir James Crichton Browne, whose recent vigorous onslaught on vegetarianism and sturdy defense of the mutton chop and sirloin of beef, have aroused the ire of the food faddists, is the "Teddy Roosevelt" of the British medical profession. He is always going for something, and he goes for it as hard as he knows how. In consequence he gets an amount of free advertising which the old fogy doctors regard as downright scandalous, and opposed to the most sacred ethics of the medical profession. But Sir James does not care for their criticism any more than Teddy does for the threats of the trust magnates. He delights in a controversial shindy. He says things with the deliberate purpose of provoking folk into hitting back.

Miss Alice de Rothschild, cousin of Lord Rothschild and heiress to her brother, Baron Ferdinand, owns Waddesdon Manor, the finest of the Rothschild holdings. She is very charitable and her great hobby is gardening. At Waddesdon and at Grasse, France, where she has a villa, her gardens are famous, seventy gardeners being employed at Grasse alone. Miss Rothschild can dispose of her brother's fortune exactly as she pleases, but she probably will leave it to her own family.

The Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia, who has been staying in London, is by birth a British princess, being a daughter of the late duke of Saxe-Coburg. She is a handsome, dark-haired woman and a perfect dresser; is clever, witty, well-read, and an admirable musician. She also paints prettily, especially fruit and flowers, and her pictures have been on view in London exhibitions.

Prince Adalbert, the sailor son of Emperor William of Germany, is 24 years old, still heart free, and regarded by many as occupying a particularly warm place in the affections of his parents, perhaps because his service at sea has taken him so much away from them. He has been all over the world, and everywhere he has made friends.

HUMANITARIANS.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY DENhart of Washington, Ill., have pledged themselves to give $100,000 to the endowment of Carthage College, Carthage, Ill., on condition that an equal amount be raised by June 1, 1908. Toward this second $100,000 the general synod at once pledged $25,000. Other synods have pledged $20,000; William Pore of Pittsburgh has promised $25,000 and an Iowa benefactor $1000, leaving $29,000 to be raised by general subscription. When the total of $200,000 has been raised Andrew Carnegie will give $20,000 toward building a science laboratory for the college.

The gift of $175,000 by Lord Mount-Stephen to Aberlour Orphanage, which will provide for the permanent endownment of one hundred beds, adds another to the long list of generous acts on the part of a man who rose from herdboy to millionaire by energy and enterprise alone, says Tit-Bits. His career is typical of the genius of his race. From herdboy George Stephen, as he then was, changed to draper's assistant, and migrated to London, where he met a relative, who invited him to Canada. He went, and the two entered into partnership in Montreal. That was the beginning of enterprises which led the former herdboy of the little Banffshire town of Dufftown to develop into a banker and ultimately become one of the prime movers in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

HEROES.

MISS RODERICKA CANFIELD, matron of one of the Smith College houses, Northampton, Mass., had a recent thrilling experience on Paradise Pond. She was out rowing with Miss Ruby Litchfield, a member of the junior class, when the boat struck a snag and was overturned. Miss Canfield could swim, but Miss Litchfield could not, and when the boat upset Miss Litchfield was under it. Miss Canfield swam to shore and gave the alarm that Miss Litchfield was drowned; then, ahead of all others, Miss Canfield swam back to the boat. She found Miss Litchfield alive and clinging to the bow of the boat, her head just above water. Miss Canfield swam and pushed the boat ashore with Miss Litchfield holding on, just as college employés and the Chief of Police arrived.

For the first time since the beginning of the Carnegie hero fund, a negro, John B. Hill of Atlanta, Ga., received an award of a bronze medal and $500 to reimburse him on account of loss sustained by being injured. Hill saved several persons during a runaway accident. He was recovering from an operation and was injured again.

The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission has made medal and money awards to twenty-four more persons shown to have performed exceptional service in the saving of life. The list included, for the first time, a negro, John Hill, of Atlanta. The largest award was that of a gold medal and $3600 to A. J. Hedger, superintendent of schools of Finney county, Kansas. He ran two miles and entered a well-seventy-two feet deep, where he worked two hours with shovel to save the life of a man caught in a cave-in.

CHURCHMEN.

CARRYING two small hand bags filled with gold coin, $725 in all, Rev. Boeslaus Kwiatkowski, pastor of St. Anthony's Polish Catholic Church, Jersey City, walked into the Provident Institution for Savings in that city today, and going behind the receiving teller's counter emptied the bags. By this action he stopped a run on the bank, allaying the fears of two hundred of his countrymen who were lined up waiting for an opportunity to withdraw their savings.

Dr. Robert L. Paddock, bishop-elect of Nevada, will be the third right reverend of the family. Dr. Henry C. Potter is the third of his. There have been three Bishop Burgesses. The father of Bishop Doane, of Albany, was a bishop; his brother is a monsignor.

Rev. Dean McNulty of Paterson, N. J., has declined the great honor of being made a monsignor, which would have entitled him to wear the purple robes of the papal court. He would also have been able to act for the bishop at many functions in the diocese, and it is believed that it mainly was for this reason that he declined the high honor. Dean McNulty is getting old, having just celebrated his fiftieth year as a priest, and his intimate friends say he felt that he was too old to take any active part in the church work of the diocese outside of Paterson, and that he was satisfied to remain just plain "Father McNulty."

ARTISTS.

EUGENE HIGGINS, an artist of strong and haunting individuality, who has as yet had but scant recognition, but whose pictures once seen are never likely to be forgotten, is living and working in New York. He paints the "Submerged Tenth," and in his pictures is the cry of the world's disinherited—of Hugo's "Les Miserables" and of Maxim Gorky's outcasts. He shows us "figures of the driven and damned—in the spirit of Victor Hugo," as one artist puts it; and Edwin Markham, the poet, has said: "Mr. Higgins stands in America as the one powerful painter of the tragic lacks and losses of the doomed and the disinherited—the painter who gives us the pathos of street and hovel and morgue, as Millet gave us the pathos of the fields." Higgins is an Irish-American, and was born in Kansas City, thirty-three years ago. When he was 12 years old an illustrated article on Millet gave him his first impulse to become a painter.

Philip Boileau, the noted young artist of New York, has married. Mr. Boileau's specialty has been studies of women and the model of many of them was the beautiful Emily Gilbert, a student at one of the dramatic schools. Mr. Boileau fell in love with his model and his model concluded that art was more attractive than the drama and domestic life than both. So they were married at "The Little Church Around the Corner," a few days ago. They make their home at Douglaston, L. I. Mr. Boileau has a studio on Fifth avenue.

JURISTS.

JUDGE TRUMAN F. PALMER, who has been strongly indorsed by Indiana statesmen for appointment as Federal judge for the District of Alaska, is one of the most prominent lawyers in Northern Indiana. He was at one time president of the State Bar Association. It is said Judge Palmer will be appointed to succeed Judge Wickersham, whose appointment by President Roosevelt the Senate has declined to confirm, and who recently forwarded his resignation to the President.

Hon. Justice William Renwick Riddell, who has attracted wide attention by his imposition of a fine of $25,000, the largest on record in Canada, on the Michigan Central Railroad Company for careless handling of dynamite, thereby causing devastation in Essex village, was elevated to the bench about a year ago. Soon after his promotion he came into the limelight by sentencing to the penitentiary for three years Conductor Thompson, whose negligence at Gourock, north of Guelph, in September, 1906, cost three lives. The conductor had been working nineteen and twenty hours a day for five days, and had fallen asleep when the accident occurred.

EDUCATORS AND AUTHORS

THE birthday of Will Carleton, the Wolverine poet, was celebrated at his old homestead at Hillsdale, Mich., on October 26. The poet was himself present, and the people all along the southern tier of counties in Central Michigan responded to the invitation to be present at the homecoming. Sharing the honors with Mr. Carleton was Mrs. Mary Ann Gridley, the famous Washington nurse, mother of Capt. Charles E. Gridley, commander of the flagship Olympia at the battle of Manila. Mrs. Gridley, now 82 years old, was formerly a resident of Hillsdale. Mr. Carleton has lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., for more than a quarter of a century. He still owns the old Carleton homestead farm of sixty acres, twenty miles east of Hillsdale, and seventeen miles west of Adrian.

Fraulein Richter has been appointed lecturer on philology at Vienna University, the first instance of a woman receiving such an appointment.

Among the authors from whose works selections have been made for a new anthology of contemporary verse is Alfred O. Williams of South Marston, near Swindon, England. Mr. Williams is employed at the forge in the wagon department stamping shop at the Great Western Railway Company's works, Swindon. He is an entirely self-taught man, and worked on the farm in his youth. He is well read in Greek, Latin and French literature, and his contribution to the anthology consists of the translation of an ode from Anacreon and an original ode.

SCIENTISTS, INVENTORS.

PROF. W. W. CAMPBELL, director of the Lick Observatory, announces the discovery of prominent knots in Saturn's rings. These appear to be systematically placed, he says, but as yet have not been accounted for, and no theory has been formulated as to their meaning.

Joseph Turner of New York City is working on a new principle for the propulsion of vessels. The triple horizontal plates which form the propeller, work up and down with the sinuous motion of a fish. It has a lifting as well as a propelling motion, and it has the advantage over the screw propeller that the surface on both sides of each blade is efficient for propulsion. It is said that Mr. Turner intends to apply his system to aerial navigation.

J. E. Mellish, a Wisconsin farmer boy hardly out of his teens, has become one of the interesting figures in the scientific world through his discovery within six months of two comets which had escaped the attention of professional astronomers. The young man has, after working hard on the farm during the day, been studying the heavens at night, using apparatus largely of his own construction. His recent achievements have opened the way for him to pursue his studies in the Washington Observatory, and a bright future is confidently predicted for him.

William Dutcher, president of the National Association of Audubon societies, at the recent annual meeting of that government statistics show an anthat governmen statisics show an annual loss to the country of $800,000,000 through insect and rodent pests. This loss, Mr. Dutcher thinks, might largely be saved by the proper protection of the birds.

EXPLORERS.

ARCTIC explorers heretofore have regarded the polar bear only as an enemy or as a source of food. Capt. Roald Amundsen, the Scandinavian explorer, who discovered last year the long-sought northwest passage and made some valuable scientific investigations, says he proposes to regard the polar bear as his best friend when he next goes to the Far North. He will hitch his wagon not to the polar star, but to the polar bear. This will not occur till 1910. Till that time the captain is going to put some captive bears in training by Hagenback, of Hamburg. When trained, he says they are as tractable as oxen. They are thoroughly at home in the north; they feed on seal meat, which is not difficult to obtain, and in every respect they are superior to dogs as sledge pullers. Capt. Amundsen will go north prepared to stay six years, and he figures that it will take him five years at least to accomplish his mission. He will pass through Bering Sea, as he did last year, and then drift with the ice till near enough to make a dash for the pole.

A group of American scientists has just received authorization from Maspero, the director of Egyptian antiquities and excavations, to carry out important researches in Upper Egypt. The party includes Prof. Mase Raesnor of the University of California; Prof. Morgan of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and one of the professors of the University of the City of New York. The excavations will be financed by Theodore Davis of New York, the lawyer and mine owner, so long identified with Egyptian research.

Dr. W. M. Fowler of Bluffton, Ind., who has been physician and surgeon to the Walter Wellman polar expedition for the last two summers, has returned to his home for the winter, and will practice medicine. He does not know whether there will be another expedition next year, and that he will again be a member of the party. Dr. Fowler spent six months in the far North, and at one time led a party that rescued the wrecked airship of Walter Wellman and his party.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

THOMAS C. M'MILLAN, who was chosen moderator of the thirteenth triennial National Congregational Council, is clerk of the United States Circuit Court of the Northern Illinois District. He is the first layman in nine years to serve as head of the council.

Arnold A. Parish is the best fiddler in North Carolina, having won that title at the annual convention of fiddlers at Raleigh on Labor Day. The tunes played were selected by the performers, and included "Old Mollie Hare," "Little Bettie Martin," "Oh, My Little Gal," "Leather Breeches," "Fishers' Hornpipe," "Come Out of the Wilderness," "Prettiest Little Girl in the County," "Devil's Dream" and "Bill Booker."

Of the fourteen archbishops in the United States, Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia is the oldest, and he is but 76 years of age. Cardinal Gibbons is 73. Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, who comes next in point of years, is 69; Archbishop Keane of Dubuque is 68, and Archbishops Farley and Riordan of New York and San Francisco, respectively, are 65.

When William Morris Stewart retired from the United States Senate in 1905, after his second two-term service there, he returned to Nevada a poor man. Although eight years beyond the allotted three score and ten, Mr. Stewart went to Tonopah, hung out his shingle, and began again the struggle for a law practice. Competition was so keen at first that success seemed doubtful, but fortunate investments in mining stocks have put him on the way to being again a millionaire, as he is now reported worth over $250,000.

"So far as I know, the happiest man in this world is 'Private' John Allen of Tupelo," said Judge J. H. Neville of Gulfport, Miss. "He is living on a farm near the town which is indissolubly linked with his name and taking life easy. John is well supplied with this world's goods, and while he practices law, he seldom takes a case in which the fee is less than $2000 or $3000, and not even then unless he is sure of getting the fee in a day or two. 'Jim Neville,' said he the other day, 'I am in love with the whole world. I have even forgiven all the fools in Mississippi who thought that any one would make a better Senator than I.'"

Carnegie has given away about $125,000,000 in the past thirty years. But he has built no churches, missions, Young Men's Christian Associations, soup kitchens nor hospitals. Outside of a large fund for the relief of injured or needy steel workers, and a long private pension list, he has given nothing to the sick or the poor. "Nothing for the submerged" has been the motto of this Scottish stoic. And the reason for this is not a lack of sympathy, says the Independent, but a keen discernment that the aim of all social betterment should be to remove the causes of trouble and not to tinker in a futile way with results.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

COL. PHILIP READE of the Twenty-third United States Infantry is the author of the following "epigrams of the range:" "The ultimate of the soldier's profession is to know when and where and how to pull the trigger;" "other things being equal, that soldier who can hit with measurable accuracy what he aims at is the best soldier;" "the way to learn how to hit is to find out why you miss;" "brains must be mixed with gunpowder;" "soldiers who are not good shooters are apt to be turned into good scooters;" "most good shots are made good shots by systematic instruction and practice."

Col. Robert L. Howze, commandant of the cadets at the United States Military Academy at West Point, has gained much distinction on account of his bravery in the field. He is a lieutenant-coonel by virtue of the position he occupies at West Point, but in the line he is a captain of the Sixth Cavalry. He was born in Texas and was graduated from the Military Academy in 1888. During the war with Spain he was a captain in the adjutant-general's department in the volunteer establishment and later was a lieutenant-colonel of the Thirty-fourth United States Infantry. He was brevetted a brigadier-general on account of his services. From 1901 to 1904 he was major in the Porto Rico provisional regiment of infantry. He has won a medal of honor for gallantry in repulsing the attacks of hostile Sioux Indians on the north bank of the White River in South Dakota in 1891, while he was serving as a second lieutenant of the Sixth Cavalry.

Lieut. Frank Rorsharch who was granted leave of absence from his ship, the Tennessee, at the time his wife was murdered at Norfolk by a burglar, about three weeks ago, has been transferred to the navy yard in that city, according to the latest navy orders. This has been done to give the lieutenant an opportunity to personally conduct an investigation into the death of his wife. On Sept. 10 Mrs. Rorsharch was shot with a bullet from her own revolver while trying to frighten a burglar away from her home.

There entered the Iowa Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown some time ago, a man who is one of the heroes of the Civil War; a man who once performed a service considered one of the most brilliant of all the brave deeds of the great American conflict. He is George W. Dart, who raised the Stars and Stripes over the Confederate capitol at Columbia, S. C., at the end of Sherman's march to the sea.

Capt. Kirby Walker, Fourteenth Cavalry, who has recently been detailed for duty with the Quartermaster's Department, was selected upon request of Brig. Gen. J. B. Aleshire by reason of his knowledge of horses. Capt. Walker will be engaged in the work of inspecting horses for the army, and probably an officer of field artillery will also be selected for work in connection with the acquirement of horses for his branch of the service. Gen. Aleshire is giving much of his attention to the establishment of a remount system, and as much will be accomplished as soon as possible along this line as can be done without Congressional sanction.

The temptation is great to make many more extracts from these letters, but lack of space forbids. The volumes clearly define her position in all home and foreign affairs and add much new light on the characters of such men as Lord Palmerston, Disraeli and Gladstone. There are numerous allusions to the latter. In later years he was not a favorite in court circles, and we here learn that the Queen was much more partial to his great rival, Disraeli.

Ernest Thompson Seton, author of "Woodmyth anl Fable."

Queen Victoria was not a clever woman, and never claimed to be. She left science and art "and all that" to her husband. She was not a great reader, even in politics. Her tastes were very average. But she was free from many British prejudices. She supported the grant to the Irish Catholics for Maynooth College. She was in favor of teaching Gaelic to the Gaels and Welsh to the Welsh. She wished to have music in the parks on Sundays. She had a large view, a view that widened with years, until latterly, her ministers marveled at her accumulated wisdom and experience.

A New Naturalist's Book.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS. By Ernest Thompson Seton. Charles Scribner's Sons. (Price $1.)

Mr. Seton believes that the "Ten Commandments are not arbitrary laws given to man, but are fundamental laws of all highly-developed animals." He excepts, of course, the first four—which are purely spiritual, and beginning with the fifth gives instances in the life and habits of different species which he believes prove his theory.

If a new-born chicken loiters and does not hasten up when the mother clucks for it, it gets lost and dies; or if it neglects to run to her call that she has found good food, it becomes a weakling from want of sufficient nourishment, and wastes away. All animals and many birds have some way of warning their young of danger, as for instance, the deer, which snorts, whereupon her young squats in the grass while she goes away to baffle the enemy as best she may. But it is essential to the race and the little one that the warning be acted upon promptly and fully, emphasizing the fact that obedience to parents is vital.

"Thou shalt not kill."

Animals and even reptiles instinctively feel that they must not kill one of their own kind, for no race can exist that breaks the law. New-born rattlesnakes will strike at a stranger of any other species but never at one of their own kind.

Regarding the Seventh Commandment, against impurity, the author shows that promiscuous animals—the northwestern rabbit and the voles—are high in the scale of fecundity, but are punished for it by frequently recurring plagues. Polygamous animals are more prosperous, yet they are the first, usually, to disappear before civilization. Of the deer kind the Wapiti do not near so well hold their own as their much less polygamous kin, the Virginia deer. Wolves are shown to be most prosperous of all; strictly monogamous, they have eliminated much possibility of disease, given their young two wise protectors, and even developed a spirit of chivalry. The result is that they defy all attempts to exterminate them and increase in exact ratio to the food supply for which the settlers are responsible.

Many instances are given to show that animals realize that it is wrong to steal from their own kind. That those which "bear false witness" are punished—a hound that gives the cry for a fresh found trail, where there is none, soon loses the confidence of of his mates and is deserted by them. Instancing the penalty for breaking the Tenth Commandment, Mr. Seton instances the case of a bluebird that took possession of a swallow's nest. The whole colony of swallows turned to and walled up the entrance with mud pellets, and it perished.

The author finally claims that there are the beginnings in animal nature of the spiritual life in man. We must leave the reader to judge for himself whether there is any justification for this belief, or not.

Stories of the Great.

MEMOIRS OF THE COMTESSE DE BOIGNE. Volume II. Edited by M. Charles Nicoullaud. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. (Fowler Bros., Los Angeles. Price $2.50.)

Judging from her writings the Comtesse de Boigne was a very serious-minded young woman. She lived in the early part of the eighteenth century, and her memoirs show that she had a remarkable comprehension of the people of that time. A Comtesse as well as the daughter of the French Ambassador to England, her path was fairly strewn with kings and queens, and people who frequented court circles.

The first volume of these memoirs, published some time ago, was widely read abroad and here. This second one covers the short period of four years, from 1815 to 1819. The most striking events touched upon are Napoleon's return from Elba, and the second restoration of Louis XVIII. The Comtesse writes in an informal and intimate way, giving a better impression of the local color and temper of the time than can be gained from more pretentious histories. There is a certain charm—wherefore, who shall say—for the most republican soul in reading these books about the private life of royalty. Who, indeed, does not crave the knowledge as to whether the King breakfasts on buckwheat cakes or stewed larks? And who does not read with great satisfaction the number of silk petticoats a queen wears in a year? No one, I think I am safe to say, unless he be some self-respecting, black-hearted anarchist. The Comtesse does not descend to quite such trivialities, but also describes minutely how Queen Charlotte in the presence of her guests has tea brought to her by her son, George, who, tray in hand, devotedly awaits her pleasure, while she drinks the beverage—having first served herself with cream and sugar. Life includes such unimportant things as this, so why should we not be told that the mighty of the earth ate and drank, and how they did it one hundred years ago.

But, joking aside, this second volume of the memoirs is very well worth reading, giving us, as it does, intimate pictures of the famous—and infamous—people of her time. We regret that the Comtesse died a hundred years ago, and is, therefore, unable to take part in her début in the literary world.

Practical Information.

WHAT CAN A YOUNG MAN DO? By Frank West Rollins. Little, Brown & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

The author of this book is an ex-Governor of New Hampshire and a Boston banker, and in writing this book has had the assistance of specialists. Designed to aid a young man in the selection of a calling, the 340-page volume contains a large amount of actual, definite advice about things one naturally wants to know. While many books of advice have been written, this one possesses distinctive features, more especially in its practical information concerning new openings for work and definite instructions about entering them. The chapters on the consular service, and service in the Philippines, civil, mining and mechanical engineering, forestry, library work, railroading and nautical training school, are distictly fresh, timely and valuable.

At some time in a man's life the question of what he can do, what he is best fitted to do, becomes insistent. Mr. Rollins maintains that there are more opportunities for a young man today than there were in former times, notwithstanding that it is often said that there is no chance for a young man nowadays. He presents the advantages, as well as the disadvantages, of a large number of callings, professions and trades, and brings out the attractive features of some which are not generally considered by young men when they are looking about to select their business in life.

A Fine Mystery Story.

THE AFFAIR AT PINE COURT. By Nelson Rust Gilbert. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. (Price $1.50.)

This is an attractive-looking book, bound in red, the title in gold, and showing the branches of the pine in black. There are three full-page illustrations in color, by Frank H. Desch.

Pine Court, the summer home of Mr. Carr, a wealthy New Yorker, is in the Adirondacks, where he has bought a large tract of land. He turned off some people who had been making a pretense of farming on it—they were merely squatters—and for this, and because he stopped their killing game out of season, and posted trespass notices on his premises, he was in danger of his life from the ejected ones. The story begins with a full house at Pine Court. Carr was an ideal host. He was tall, full-blooded, full-bearded. His dress was careful, and he was near 50 years of age. He boasted that he had a young wife; was a member of the Stock Exchnge; helped to support a church or two; belonged to six clubs, "three of them" rotten, and voted for McKinley.

A round-up of the guests showed Grannis Meade, who was continually asking himself: "How long with an income the precise dimensions of which my agent will not permit me to forget, can I continue to spend triple that income annually and avoid the crash?"

Meade's affairs were serious. He might go into business. He might curtail expenses and permit his income to overtake and outdistance the outgo; he might resign from a yacht club and sell a yacht; he might dismiss a chauffeur and sell an automobile; he might even marry some one in better financial circumstances than himself. He was on the verge of disaster.

Mary Modena was in the gathering. She was pretty, and she was very well aware of it. Beneath levity of demeanor and frivolity of speech, Mary was a religious girl.

Another guest was Laura Aldrich, a good-looking young woman, with a strong will, and discontented. She was overburdened with self-esteem. In the good, self-esteem is considered a vice. Mary was good.

The character about whom the main interest of the romance moves was a German savant—Chenberger-Vogel—a reputed traveler who asserted he did wonderful things in Africa. He was 60, but didn't look it, and bore himself with the suavity of an emperor. He declared he had killed a monkey Mygatt in Africa, and took from the body a wonderful optical invention—the Gau lens—which reduced gems to their forms as crystals, and arranged the crystals so that any man might be his own jewel expert. Chenberger-Vogel was self-assertive; "A King?" he said. "Kings are men, are beggarly. The King of Prussia, whom men call the Kaiser, I snap by fingers at him, at the upstart who holds himself above us. My title rests upon the old rock; it dates from the days when we were, indeed, masters and the people were the dogs that fawned. The Kaiser? An arrogant parvenu of a mushroom house!"

The German dreaded of world power, of universal dominion through the agency of this devil stone. "I, the Cultan, you my vizot, of the world. The empire of the earth between us. The jewel, the bit of glass, my throne."

It was this man and the lens which threw Pine Court into turmoil, provoked attempts at assassination, theft and mutual suspicions and misunderstandings. The shooting of Chenberger-Vogel, the accusation he made against Meade, the threats of fire and flood, the intervention of the heroine in the matter of the disappearance of the lens, the complicity and schemes and plots of squatters, who had heard of the valuable lens and longed to possess it, are incidents that make a story that will occupy the attention of every reader.

After Chenberger-Vogel had been shot, he screamed: "The Lens of the Gau! Give it to me. Some one has stolen it. Ah, you American yokels, you swine, you thieves, you canaille; give it to me! I will wade in blood, I warn you, but I will have back my lens!"

After many anxious days spent in an endeavor to clear up the mystery, during which several love affairs go bravely on to befitting climaxes, it is learned that Chenberger-Vogel, who had raised Hades and made a circus out of a peaceful summer home, was sent to Carr with a jocose letter of introduction and was not just what he was represented to be. The lens was a piece of worthless glass, and the loss precipitated the mental storm again. The part Miss Aldrich played in the romance, her fight with the "savant," are the psychological mysteries. She had been taken up as an experiment in a society to which she was a stranger, and it went wrong.

The novel is marked by keen humor, epigram and certain knowledge of the eccentricities of mentally warped people, as well as people in certain well-beloved society circles. It is on original lines and deserves wide reading.

Some Good Advice.

HOW TO INVEST YOUR SAVINGS. By Isaac F. Marcosson. Henry Altemus Company, Philadelphia. (Price 50 cents.)

This book not only meets a long-felt want but has qualities which make it distinct among books of its kind. Practically all investment books heretofore published have been "inspired" in the interests of some scheme. Mr. Marcosson's book, on the other hand, is written in the interest only of the average man or woman who has savings or funds to invest, and its sole purpose is to furnish accurate facts and knowledge essential to safe and conservative investment. Mr. Marcosson shows in a very helpful chapter how anybody, no matter how small his or her income, may save money by a very simple system. After this, he explains in very plain terms the A B C of investment, how to invest, stocks as investments, the different kinds of bonds, real estate mortgages as investments for women, real estate as an investment. Facts every investor ought to know.

Not the least helpful chapter in this book is that called "Pitfalls for Investors," which shows how to avoid snares for the unwary investor laid by unscrupulous promoters. These include the industrial lures, the fake mining schemes, the suburban lot installment plan decoy, the bucket shop, with the whole large speculative menace, and other devices instigated by get-rich-quick sharks to separate the innocent investor from his money. In fact, it may be safely stated that this little book is the most comprehensive of its kind yet prepared, and should be included in the library of every household, as the information will be always useful, and may be, in case of emergency, of the highest value. Many a young man will save his inheritance, and many a widow will avoid losing her competence by application of the principles laid down, and information supplied in this volume.

Another Russian Story.

BY NEVA'S WATERS. By John R. Carling. Little, Brown & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

This is a story of love and adventure about equally mixed. A handsome young Englishman finds himself entangled in a most complicated love affair in Russia. A Queen gives him her aid, proving that "fortune favors the brave," for at one time he is alone against the Czar and the united Russias, but he comes out triumphant in all his adventures.

"By Neva's Waters" is a novel after the fashion of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "Graustark," but is written rather carelessly and has no literary pretensions whatever. It is a rather good tale, though, and will be read with interest and forgotten as soon as read. Such novels have their place, affording a few hours' pleasure for some people with a plenty of time to kill.

In Its Thirtieth Year.

HELEN'S BABIES. By John Habberton. (Author's edition.) Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.00.)

This story was first published thirty years ago and is selling today as fast as it ever was, by the thousands, for it appeals to all people who have children—and they are many.

Some Books for Young People.

WILD-ANIMAL CELEBRITIES. By Ellen Velvin, F.Z.S. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.)

All the stories in this little book deal with animals under conditions of captivity, either in zoölogical gardens or in circuses. That they are sincere and authentic there can be no question, for the book is dedicated by permission to John Burroughs. Miss Velvin has visited almost all the great zoölogical collections of the world, and here, at first hand, her observations were made. She became intimately acquainted with many of these four-footed friends of hers. The book, which is beautifully illustrated from photographs taken by the author, deals with such alluring subjects as "Lions," "A Few Big Cats," "Some Celebrated Bears," "Elephants," "Famous Chimpanzees," etc.

THEODORA. By Katharine Pyle and Laura Spencer Portor. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.25.)

This is an unusually interesting story for younger girls, dealing with the experiences of the heroine, Theodora Winthrop, in an Episcopal Sisters' school in New York City, where she is sent while her father goes abroad. She meets in the school many other little girls of varying dispositions, including Susie, an unfortunate orphan. Theodora's dislike for Susie changes to love and devotion, under the careful guidance of the Sisters, and when it is time for them to leave they have become inseparable. In every way the children of this book are refreshingly natural, and in incident, character, and general interest the story is exceptional.

Miss Pyle, who has written other popular books for children, has collaborated in "Theodora" with Laura Spencer Portor of the Woman's Home Companion. The illustrations are by W. A. McCullough.

PINAFORE PALACE. Edited by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Nora Archibald Smith. The McClure Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

This is a collection of the best nursery rhymes, nonsense verses, guessing games, lullabies and slumber songs for the delectation of very little readers. The editors, who gave us "The Posy Ring" and "Golden Numbers" for older boys and girls, have gone through the entire field of available material, and have drawn upon many sources that are remote or inaccessible for the general reader.

Mrs. Wiggin writes in her introduction: "No greater love for a task nor happiness in doing it, no more ardent wish to please a child or meet a mother's need, ever went into a book than has been brought into this volume."

"Ozma of Oz" is Mr. Baum's answer to thousands of letters from children asking for "more about Dorothy," who, along with the famous Scarecrow and Tin Woodman, evidently delighted the youngsters who read "The Wizard of Oz" and saw the show, more than any of the other amusing creations of the author. These characters have a large place in the new book, but Mr. Baum has invented several other fascinating figures that are sure to win popular approval. The most conspicuous of these is Tiktok, who thinks, speaks and acts by means of three separate mechanisms, which are liable to run down at any time, no matter what the emergency.

This is the most lavishly illustrated of all the famous "Oz" books.

FATHER TUCK'S ANNUAL. Edited by Edric Vredenburg. Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., Ltd., New York. (Price $1.)

"Father Tuck's Annual" is now in its tenth successive year of publication. The present production contains 246 pages, and every page is illustrated. The annual contains all sorts of pictures in black and white and in color, by W. Foster, A. Dixon, M. and A. L. Bowley, Hilda Cowham, E. M. and F. Taylor, etc. These charming pictures illustrate jolly little stories in prose and verse, songs, etc., by Norman Gale, E. Nesbit, H. A. Hoyer, Grace C. Floyd, Edric Vredenburg and others. The volume makes an unusually bright and attractive Christmas annual for children of a smaller growth.

THANKSGIVING. Edited by Robert Haven Schauffler. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.)

This volume belongs to a series called "Our American Holidays." It is packed full of prose and verse, selections from many sources, historical, poetic, religious, patriotic, etc., describing the American festival of Thanksgiving, as seen through the eyes of representative writers. It presents in condensed form the literature of Thanksgiving Day, and is admirably adapted for home and school reading. Mr. Schauffler's introduction gives a history of the institution, its purpose, significance and accomplishment in our national life.

LITTLE ME TOO. By Julia Dalrymple. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price 75 cents.)

Stories, bright and humorous, written by a mother concerning the real doings of her own two real boys, Philip and Little Me Too. They are about play time and work time, and are told in simple, easy words. Mothers will enjoy them as much as the children. The illustrations are from photographs taken by Mrs. Dalrymple and from drawings by Sears Gallagher.

Pleasing, but Artificial.

THE CRUISE OF THE MAKE-BELIEVES. By Tom Gallon. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

Gilbert Byfield, a rich young Londoner of philanthropic proclivities, takes lodgings in Arcadia street, a mean little purlieu of the metropolis. There he meets Bessie Meggison, a young girl, who is as sweet and innocent as she is pretty, and who has charge of a shabby rooming-house next door. Bessie has an imagination, and she lives in a land of make-believe, thus forgetting all the squalors of her life. For the sake of Bessie's health, Byfield invents a scheme by which the girl's good-for-nothing father is supposed to have made a neat little sum of money in speculation. This brings everybody into Byfield's country house. Then Bessie is inveigled into going away with Byfield on his yacht, and here she is rudely awakened from her dream of happiness when she discovers how she has been duped. The yacht is wrecked on an island, which turns out to be no island. Bessie will have nothing further to do with Byfield until she learns that he has lost all his money. Then she consents to marry him—for the astute reader has discovered, no doubt, that the two young people are in love with each other.

Notwithstanding its astounding artificiality of plot and incident, "The Cruise of the Make-Believes" is pleasant reading. Bessie is very lovable, and Gilbert, though decidedly lacking in common sense, is what the English call "rather nice."

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

Edward Penfield, the author of "Holland Sketches," has traveled extensively through the different countries of Europe, and wherever he has gone has taken his sketch-book and pencil with him. The result of his travels in Holland is the new book "Holland Sketches," issued last week from the press of Charles Scribner's Sons, and beautifully illustrated by the author with pictures in color of the country and quaint people who live there.

Who's the better judge of the stage possibilities of a novel, an actress or a literary man? Among those who have asked Miss Sinclair for the dramatic rights of "The Helpmate," is one of America's leading actresses, who wishes to appear in it herself. But Stephenson Browne in his Boston letter in one of our leading reviews says: "'The Helpmate' is utterly unthinkable for presentation before any audience not composed entirely of young physicians and old nurses." "Old women in trousers" have written in this vein of Ibsen's masterpieces.

The guessing regarding the anonymous author of "As The Hague Ordains," still goes on. The author of "Indiscreet Letters From Pekin" is charged with it. The question has been asked whether one who claims to be a Russian would have dared to write it. It was suggested that she might possibly have gotten her points from Mme. von Theill in Japan.

The fact that "The Squaw Man" has just been put into a new edition by the Harpers may be looked upon as a kind of testimony to a rather unusual literary process. "The Squaw Man" was a book that reversed custom in the making. Instead of the play, which William Faversham has made famous, being made from the novel, this novel was made from the play. The adaptation, it will be remembered, was arranged by Mrs. Faversham (Julie Opp,) with the consent of the playwright, Edwin Milton Royle. At the time there was some question as to whether the novel might not be handicapped by the play as forerunner. Apparently, however, the theme itself is what determines the appeal of a book.

The final resting-place of the body of Vittoria Colonna has been a matter of discussion and uncertainty; but from some new data it seems evident that she was entombed in the Sacristy of Santa Maria Maggiore in Naples, and in her new book, "Italy, the Magic Land," Lilian Whiting describes this resting-place of the princes and nobles of the house of Aragon, into which this great woman-poet of Italy married, and among whose sarchophagi her own is placed.

Tom Gallon, the author of "The Cruise of the Make-Believes," etc., started to earn his living at the age of 14 in a warehouse in a poor quarter of London. He was in touch with the poor of the great city every day, and so came by his wonderful knowledge of their ways, and his sympathy for those whose lot is cast in life's rough places. From a city clerk he became an usher in a private school, then a private secretary to a provincial Mayor; and ultimately came illness, and then he wrote "Tatterley," which lifted him from obscurity. When he started on his literary career he had the greatest struggle of his life. Often he lived on bread and cheese, many a time, too, he slept under a hedge. He began to chase odd guineas up and down Fleet street, writing stories, articles, jokes, anything that would bring him in a few shillings, working far into the night, often till daylight crept through the window of his attic with only one object in view, and that to make a name as a story-teller.

Prince Henry of Prussia is now on the books of a prominent American bookseller in consequence of an order just received for a set of James Ford Rhodes's "History of the United States." In sending the order, Prince Henry stated that he considered Mr. Rhodes's work one of the most important contributions to modern history.

The new play which Mrs. Humphrey Ward and Miss Margaret Mayo have arranged from the former's novel, "The Marriage of William Ashe," has been given a happy ending. Among the many who saw the first version, or who read the book when the Harpers published it as a serial, there were enough, apparently, who believed that all life's little tragedies should end well. Probably few would deny the logical and artistic finale of the book, but the tradition of the stage demands that handkerchiefs be dry by curtain-fall. There is, however, little doubt that the new motive will provide much stronger structure for the drama itself. A wholly new fifth act is intended not only to soften the catastrophe, but to provide a great climactic moment for an emotional actress. This is in a scene where Lady Kitty, persecuted by Cliffe in Venice, and influenced by her unfortunate mother toward her ruin, summons strength to repulse them both, to conquer her own weak spirit, and turn for her last refuge of her husband's arms. It must be remembered, however, that Lady Kitty is, physically, hopelessly frail, so that, even though the audience will be spared a stage death scene, it may be a question whether the ending is conventionally happy, after all. The play will be the first production of Mr. Bourchier at the Garrick Theater, London, after the provincial tour.

The latest addition to the Macmillan series of illustrated color books is "The Riviera," painted and described by William Scott. The text deals in a pleasant and intimate fashion not only with the scenery of the Mediterranean shore, but also with the people and customs of the south of France and the bordering territory of Italy. The volume owes much of its attractiveness, however, to the illustrations, of which there are nearly a hundred all together, most of them in color. Mr. Scott is an artist of admirable gifts, and the reproduction of his pictures is all that earlier books in the series have given a right to expect.

Lafayette McLaws, author of "The Welding," is a native of Georgia, and one of the coterie of southern literary workers living in New York City. She was born in Augusta, Ga., and educated at home and in private schools. She is the daughter of Gen. Lafayette McLaws of the Confederate Army. Her mother was Miss Taylor of Lexington, Ky., a niece of Zachary Taylor. After the death of her parents, Miss McLaws resided with the late Mrs. Jefferson Davis, in New York City, who looked upon her as her ward. Those who recall that the first wife of Jefferson Davis was the daughter of Zachary Taylor, and know of the devotion of the second Mrs. Davis to her husband's memory, will readily understand why the latter would take a special interest in this southern author.

"The Romance of an Old Fashioned Gentleman," by F. Hopkinson Smith, has just been published and, like "Col. Carter's Christmas," is a little masterpiece of its kind. It is a mellow, genial story, full of good cheer and human kindness, and the love element running through it is charming. The painter, the boy and the girl are all very lovable people, and it shows Mr. Smith in his happiest vein. The book is attractively illustrated in colors by A. I. Keller.

HIGH-CLASS MAGAZINES DON'T PAY IN ENGLAND.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Within the last few months, five of the best and most dignified magazines in England have gone out of existence. They all are historic names, Murray's Monthly Review, The Gentleman's Magazine, Longman's Magazine, Temple Bar, and Macmillan's Magazine. And yet at the present moment the magazine trade is flourishing as it never has flourished before. It is an interesting sign of literary tendencies because it shows the extent of the invasion of literature by commercialism, and because it illustrates some points of difference between the English and American reading publics.

As everybody knows, a magazine depends for its prosperity on its advertisements. Naturally enough the great advertisers want to reach the largest number of people, and naturally, therefore, they patronize the magazines which have the largest sale. "So little do the editors of the great popular short-story magazines depend upon their subscribers that they could well afford to give their copies away," said one of the leading publishers whom I interviewed on the subject. "The magazines for which the popular demand is continually growing sell by hundreds of thousands at sixpence or threepence each, or even a penny. The price is maintained more to keep up the standing of the magazine and to make people realize that it is worth having, than to increase the proceeds, which are enormous enough from the advertisements alone. The public has been spoiled by the cheapness of the popular magazines and are unwilling to pay a shilling for a much better article.

"The higher class of magazines which depend upon style and literary quality," he continued, "naturally have heavier expenses than the cheaper magazines, because they have to pay higher prices for their contributions. Style and literary quality are expensive luxuries, and the world-famous professors and poets and thinkers and critics demand high prices for their work. At the same time the demand for this kind of literature is very small. So the editors of these magazines have to pay higher prices than the cheaper magazines for material which, in turn, goes to a far more limited public. The advertisers desert the less popular magazines for the more popular ones, so that the literary magazines are dependent almost entirely on subscriptions for their revenue. The subscribers, in turn, desert the expensive magazines for the cheap ones, and the literary magazines are left in the lurch."

"But how do you account for the fact," I asked him, "that simultaneously with the failure of these old English magazines, two American magazines of more or less the same sort, Appleton's and Putman's, have been revived?"

"The explanation of this," he said, "is that in England, unlike America, there is no considerable class of magazine-readers who demand fiction of the better sort or general articles of a high order of literary merit. On the other hand, political weekly journals like the 'Spectator' flourish as they never can in America until the best Americans become more generally interested in politics. But people of literary tastes here read books almost exclusively and have never taken to magazines. Popular magazines of the high quality of 'Harper's' and the 'Century' could not exist in England, simply because English lovers of good fiction never go to the magazines. This is largely because the short-story is a peculiarly American product, and because the very best American writers turn their attention to short-story writing, while the good fiction writers in England almost exclusively produce novels. The result is that the only public in England for the short-story is composed of the comparatively uncultured classes who demand fiction of an inferior quality. All the London editors will tell you that it is simply impossible to get short stories of the quality found in 'Harper's' and the 'Century,' and that if they did get them there would be no public to read them.

"This explains why English magazines of cheap fiction sell in such enormous quantities and why the literary magazines go a-begging. Of course the advertisers are only looking at the commercial side of the question and turn a cold shoulder to magazines which reach only a few thousand.

"It is well known," he went on, "that when William Waldorf Astor bought the Pall Mall Magazine a few years ago and began selling it at a shilling he wanted to experiment with the English public to see if it would patronize a magazine of the quality of 'Harpers.' He found it would not. Some time ago he reduced the price to sixpence and is losing regularly more than a thousand dollars a month. This illustrates the whole question. You must remember, too, that Putnam's and Appleton's are illustrated, as our literary magazines never have been. I believe that the English edition of Harper's Magazine collects only about $250 a month in advertisements, and as it sells not a tenth as many copies in England as at home, it regularly loses money, and is supported only by the overflowing coffers on the other side of the Atlantic, because it is a good advertisement for the book-selling side of the publishing house."

It is particularly depressing for all lovers of tradition that the year in which Tom Hood's house, Peter the Great's house, Wilberforce's house, and so many other famous relics are disappearing, should witness the passing away of these historic magazines, so wrapped up with the associations of English literature. The Gentleman's Magazine was founded in 1731, and to its pages Dr. Johnson, in 1738 and the years following, contributed his famous Parliamentary Reports, of which he said that although he took pains to have them accurate, he always "saw that the Tories came out on top!" Macmillan's Magazine was first issued in 1859 and had among its early editors Prof. Masson who has just died, and John Morley. Happily, the Cornhill Magazine is still in a flourishing condition, as Blackwood's also is. The latter was founded as far back as 1817 and will henceforth be the oldest of the great monthlies.

CHARLES OGDENS.

When Tennyson Was Rebuked.

A writer in the current Harper's Weekly brings to light an interesting anecdote of Tennyson which well illustrates the singular habits of the great laureate in his intercourse with his friends. The poet was not only brusque and rough, but he was domineering and exacting, and most other men were afraid of him. But an American schoolmaster who for many years maintained a great intimacy with him had no fear in his heart, and sat and smoked on an equality with the sovereign singer by the Farringford fireside.

"One evening," says the writer, "when the two were thus together, Tennyson said that he would depart from his custom and narrate a personal experience; but he had suffered a good deal from repetitions of his tales by those to whom he had told them, and he would be obliged to ask his friend never to repeat what he was about to hear.

"The American smoked on for a few seconds while Tennyson waited for his promise, and then he said:

"'My lord, in my country a gentleman would never make that request of another gentleman.'

"'H-h-m,' said the poet, and looked out of eyes that wondered if the quiet smoker opposite knew how much he'd said. Then he told the story."

What Is a Chemical?

Prof. Robert Kennedy Duncan of the University of Kansas might be amused by this story of a library request, which turned out to be for a practical reasearch book of his which the Harpers published a few weeks ago called "The Chemistry of Commerce." The library is in a district of the poorer sort, where the people are of the self-educating class; the young women, many of them, hoping to fit themselves to be special clerks or teachers, the young men for some technical occupation, in consequence of which the popular novel is slighted for books which have utility joined to pleasure. One evening a small girl, hatless and abashed, neared the librarian's desk.

"Please'm," she said, "I lost the paper wot they were wrote on, but would you please give me a book on chemistry or logarithms?"

The librarian gasped—the range seemed a little wider than usual—but was equal to the occasion.

"Is your sister a teacher?" she ventured, tactfully.

"No'm," said the child, eagerly. "Please, he's my brother, and he's a chemical!"

A New Brotherhood of Detectives.

The New York Public Library started a branch in the Detective Bureau last week. Now literary people and others are wondering how detective stories will be classed on the shelves. Ought detective stories in a detective bureau, some one demands, to be considered entertainment or instruction? And some one else wants to know what, if the men obey the behest of their superior officers and arrange their course of reading so as to improve their reasoning power, is to prevent a school of critics growing up in their midst and sitting in judgment, for example, upon the Harpers, who were the sponsors for "Sherlock Holmes" and, recently, for the Frenchman, "Arsène Lupin," two of the best detective inspirations in first-rate literature?

EACH AND ALL SOCIETY

IS DANCING WRONG?

THE other day a girl wrote to me to ask me what I think of dancing.

She evidently is fond of it herself, and is probably associated with others who do not approve of it, or the thought that it is possible to condemn it would not have been likely to occur to her.

Her letter reminded me of one of a different sort I had had from another girl in a different section of the country.

The first girl lived in the East, the other in the far West, where those of us who have never traveled fancy that opinion may be less strict than it is in some parts of the Atlantic and middle states.

But my western correspondent had no laxity in her composition.

On the contrary, she spoke out loudly and strongly against theater-going, card-playing and dancing, putting them all in one category of sin.

She went on to say: "Because of my views I have very few friends, for nearly all the young people I know do these things which I think wrong, and, of course, I can't have anything to do with them!"

You see how one person at least can condemn dancing, and I know there are plenty of others.

In fact, I found two or three of them when I began collecting opinions on the subject. One elderly woman found no fault with square dances, but thought round dances verged upon indecorum, to say the least.

"Even Byron condemned them," she said, "and he was not particular!

"Don't you recollect that poem of his on waltzing where he says:

"What you touched you may keep,
Pretty waltzer, adieu!"

"I don't know that I should take Byron as my standard in such matters," I said. "It is quite likely, too, that he may have been talking for effect."

A NON-DANCER'S VIEW

"For my own part," said a man, a non-dancer, whom I asked, "I can't see the difference between sitting on a sofa with your arm about a girl's waist and spinning around the room with her in your arms.

"If young people care for that sort of amusement, let them do it, of course; but I can't say that it appeals to me as the thing a really refined girl would do."

"My objection to round dancing," said a more charitable friend, "is that it places a girl in so many objectionable circumstances.

"It may be very well for a girl to dance with the men she knows well, but if she dances at all she must accept the invitation of any young man, whether she likes him or not.

"He may be everything she dislikes, but she must dance with him just the same."

"Nothing of the sort," spoke out one advocate of dancing.

"A girl who has any sense need never dance with a man she doesn't like or approve of.

"She can always say that she is tired or that she must go to her chaperon, or something else of the sort.

"It is always easy to make an excuse."

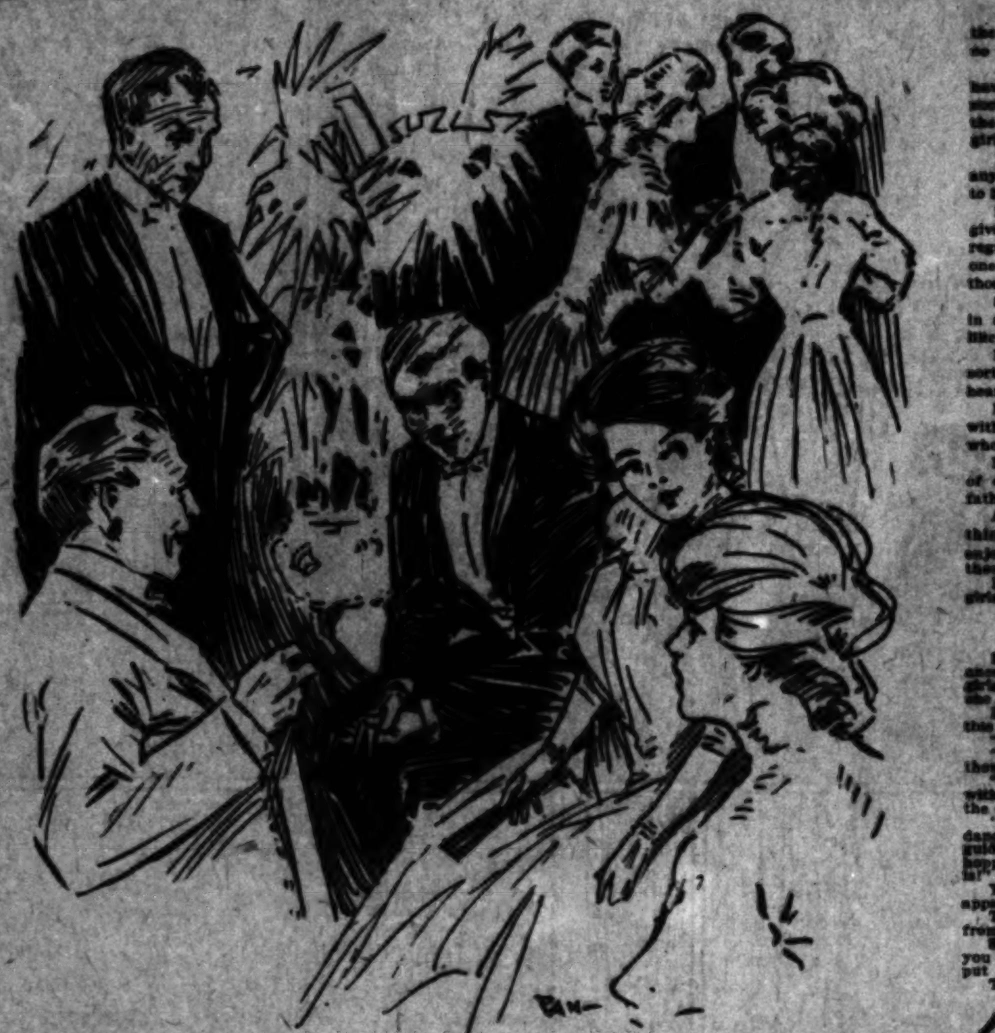
"All this business about 'whirling about in a young man's arms' makes me sick," broke in another. "That side of it never occurs to me!

"All the girls I know think of whether a man holds them well in dancing and is a good dancer and guides them carefully, and all that; but as to anything more they have no thought at all.

"If the other thing is considered by any one, it is by old prudes who know nothing about dancing, and I think they might be in better business than saying such things!"

So there you are!

Two sets of opinions diametrically opposed to one another and other ideas fluctuating between them.



If among the few I have talked with there is such variance, there must be even more among my girls, and I would like to hear from them about it.

What do you think of dancing, girls?

You probably enjoy it, if you are young and healthy and active; but do you enjoy it in spite of yourself and a little against your better judgment, or do you like it without reserve and with no thought that you must justify yourselves?

Do you find difficulty in escaping the attentions of unpleasant would-be partners, or can you always avoid these?

Have you ever met with annoyances or disagreeable experiences because of dancing?

On one point there seems to be a general unity of view.

Very little is said in commendation of so-called "public dances," to which any one can go who chooses to buy a ticket. I am told that if a party goes to such a dance, usually given in a hall or in some such public place, and the members of it keep "with their own bunch," there is no reason why any unpleasant things should happen.

At the same time, I have heard of cases where girls have been embarrassed by the attentions of strangers at such places, and it has never seemed to me that this is the sort of function at which I would wish any young girl in whom I was interested to be an attendant.

Nevertheless, I am open to conviction, and if there is anything to be said in favor of such affairs, I am ready to hear it.

Don't for a moment think I am referring to dances given by private clubs or classes, where it is possible to regulate the attendance, where the members either know one another or can answer for their own guests and those of their friends.

Such a dance as this differs very little from one held in a private house, except that the floor in the hall is likely to be better and the ventilation more satisfactory.

But there are indiscriminate dances given, where all sorts congregate, and it is against these that I have heard most criticism uttered.

Never having attended one myself, I cannot speak with authority, and I would like to hear from some one who can.

More interesting than this to me, however, is the view of dancing in general held by my girls and by their fathers and mothers.

Also I would like to know what the girls' brothers think about it, since many men will indulge in such enjoyments for themselves when they would condemn them for the women belonging to them.

Do the brothers think there is any impropriety in girls dancing round dances?

CONTRASTING OPINIONS

Do they perhaps feel, as one woman of my acquaintance does, that there is nothing prettier than to see two girls waltzing together, but that she is shocked when she sees a man and a girl doing the same thing?

I recall very well the response I met when I repeated this remark to a girl.

"Has your friend ever danced?" she demanded.

"Her mother would have turned in her grave at the thought of a child of hers dancing," I returned.

"I thought not," she said. "If she had ever waltzed with a girl and had the mixed-up feeling that comes in the circumstances, she would know better!

"It may be all very well for girls who have always danced with girls, but when you have once had a man guide you and direct you through a dance, and you try hopping around with a girl, you know what real trouble is!"

Yet I have often seen girls waltzing together with apparent ease and enjoyment.

They can't find it so very bad! I would like to hear from the girls on this point as well.

So write it all out to me, your own opinions and those you collect from your friends, and let me have them and put them on the page.

They will make interesting reading for all of us.

Letters Telling What Each and All Girls Are Accomplishing

Valuable to Our Reading Girls

OUR Reading Chapter continues to arouse interest, and I group together a number of letters from our booklovers. The first letter is long, but it is too valuable to cut.

I was very much interested in your talk on "Books That Count," and in the two letters you quoted. You ask us which style—"Lamia's" desultory or "L. G. L.'s" systematic reading—[illegible]

[illegible]

C. H. D. (Pitman, N. J.).

A helpful letter which I would advise our reading girls to clip out and keep as a guide.

I have read the books she mentions, and I know how fascinating it would be to use them as guides, according to her suggestions.

Will not the girls who follow these outlines let me hear from them?

Another Good Suggestion

I was vastly interested in your talk to the book lovers, and since you ask for opinions on systematic and desultory reading, I wish to give mine in favor of systematic.

One's mental horizon is so much broader after a course of reading intelligently planned.

It pleases me immensely to find some of my royal favorites in both the letters of "Lamia" and "L. G. L."

Let me add Carlyle, whose "Sartor Resartus" I like perhaps best, and Ruskin's "Ethics of the Dust," which sounds dry, but the name is certainly misleading, for it is filled with [illegible] water for the thirsty [illegible]

Mrs. E. W. C. (Roxbury, Mass.).

I heartily indorse these suggestions.

A Mixed Reader

In reference to what you say on the Page about reading, I wish to say that I am what you call a [illegible]

I take the Book News, which I very much enjoy, and which gives one so much insight as to what is good and what is bad reading, besides a home course in literature.

In selecting books at the library I take one of fiction and one of light reading, as there are times when one wants light food as well as solid.

B. L. G. (Philadelphia).

A good plan.

Two Requests for Book Lists

If any of the club girls know of any good books I would be pleased to hear from them and return them some names of good ones I have read.

I am 13 years old.

HELEN M. M. (Portsmouth, N. H.).

Have had just enough English literature and history in high school to make me desirous of reading more, so I would like to have some outline to know what books I should read.

Like "E. P. D." I am tired of these popular novels and would like to read something worth while.

I am employed in an office and I am taking up shorthand evenings, so, of course, I do not have much spare time, but I think if I made a resolve I could read a half hour a day anyway.

MARJORY F. (Lynn, Mass.).

Who of our readers will answer these appeals?

I have already sent suggestions, but I know that more would be welcome.

A Ranch Girl's Reading

I live on a ranch and do not have many callers, as it is so far out. I spend a great deal of time with good books, as well as in doing some fancy work, practicing and helping with the housework.

We have quite a good library in Corona and I just love to go there and look over the good books, and at the same time take notes on any that appeal to me as of great interest.

One often hears the remark, "I should think you would get lonely," but as for me, I never get lonely.

I give a list of some of the books I have read; maybe it will be of interest to some of the girls. "The Castaway," "In His Steps," "Romance of Two Worlds," "Dorothy South," "To Have and to Hold," "When Knighthood was in Flower," "Opening of a Chestnut Burr," "Ben Hur," "Lady Rose's Daughter," "The Virginian," "The Simple Life" and "The House of a Thousand Candles." I liked "Lamia's" (Philadelphia) letter the best.

I have many of the same ideas as she has in her letter. She also gave me some new ideas which will be very helpful, too.

E. H. N. (Corona, Cal.).

The last correspondent evidently gives more attention to fiction than to solid reading, and I think some of the suggestions given in the first two letters printed today may be of service to her.

A Canadian Member Writes

I must tell you something I overheard two ladies say while talking and I just put down the remark, "Oh, there is no use telling Mrs. C. anything, as she doesn't talk gossip, or listen either. She belongs to some outlandish thing that thinks there is no evil."

To be candid, I felt proud when I heard them talking like that about me. Of course, they did not think I could hear.

I love reading, and I have quite a selection of books. Would some of our girls, through our page, tell me what they think of Marie Corelli?

I do not care a great deal for her novels. My favorite poet is Longfellow. My husband's is Burns.

I wonder if any of the girls like mountain climbing? I have been up twice on Grouse Mountain; that is 5000 feet high, and it was grand.

I would like to correspond with some one who is a lover of outdoor recreation, such as mountain climbing, walking, fern hunting, and is a lover of nature.

Though I have lots of work to do, both my husband and I find time to enjoy our walks out in the country.

Mrs. M. C. (Vancouver, B. C.).

A charming, breezy letter.

I am sure some of our girls will be eager to write to this member.

Quilt Blocks Wanted

I am one of the "shut-ins," and I would like to exchange postcards, for it will help me pass the time, and I would also like to exchange quilt blocks with the members.

I have some very nice ones, but would like something different.

Mrs. A. (Blairsville, Pa.).

A chance for some of our quilt brigade.

A Musical Enthusiast

I am 19 years of age, and passionately fond of music. I am receiving instruction from one of the best instructors in the state.

I am especially fond of pipe organs, and I am organist in one of the well-known churches of this city, and have a splendid instrument.

It is next to the best, if not the best, here. Of course, I am also very fond of the piano.

I hold a clerical position here in Trenton (having taken a course in bookkeeping, stenography and other branches); also have a few piano pupils.

I am very anxious to help the society in some way. Don't you think I can?

LADY BETTY (Trenton, N. J.).

There is surely some way in which this member can help. Who wishes her assistance?

Help Offered and Asked

I would like to help any one with shorthand, French, English or embroidery for instruction in water colors. I will also exchange two jackets (34) and a flannel wrapper, suitable for an old lady.

Mrs. W. P. E. (Boston, Mass.).

Will some one make this exchange of work and garments? Please send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for her address.

Wants Directions for Crocheting

I am very much interested in all kinds of fancy work, and would like the directions for a crochet yoke for a corset cover.

M. L. M. (Malden, Mass.).

I know we have members who can supply this information.

Help Wished in Fancy Work

I am a very good cook, and I do all my sewing. I can crochet almost anything, but I am not very good at fancy work. If any of them will be of use or help to any of the members, I will be pleased to help them.

I would like to exchange postcards—any kind but comic.

Mrs. H. H. (Fall River, Mass.).

Will some of our fancy workers help this member?

A "Shut-In's" Thanks

Will you please, through the page, thank all the girls who have sent me cards and magazines? Cards especially are a great comfort and help to pass many weary hours pleasantly, as I am a helpless "shut-in" and cannot sew or knit to occupy my time.

I get very lonely, as I see very few people beside my own family.

Mrs. S. H. W. (Westfield, Mass.).

This note shows the attitude of those who are helped by the workers in Each and All.

Many such letters come to me.

Silk Pieces and Plain Sewing

If there are any of the sisters that have silk pieces to give away, I should like some, and in return will do anything I can for them.

I would gladly do any plain sewing for any of the sisters to help them.

I cannot do anything very fine, for my eyes are not strong, but would do all I can other ways in plain sewing.

Mrs. E. P. T. (Beverly, Mass.).

Work Wanted

I am anxious to get all the work I can do. We have had so much extra expense recently that I want to help. I thought perhaps you would again put a list of my work on the page, and that this might bring me some orders.

I haven't seen the page for quite a while, as I haven't felt able to afford it every week. I miss it very much, too.

Here is a list of the work I do:

LUCILLE (West Derby, Vt.).
(Formerly of Newport, Vt.).

I hope our members will remember "Lucille" when placing their orders for holiday work. Some one will be glad to send her the page, I know.

The Name Chapter

The Name Chapter continues to grow, and the members are nearly all ready with offers of help of one kind or another for each other.

One of our members offers help in German and Bohemian. Another would like orders for slumber robes at $2.50 each. Several wish orders for any kind of sewing or fancy work.

I am making up little packages for our shut-ins who are interested in fancy work, and would be glad of contributions—odds and ends of lace, ribbon, silk, woolen, etc.

Clothing, which can be made over for a family of orphans, is also desired by one of the members, who does a great deal for this family. The president of the Philadelphia Chapter kindly offered to send a badge to one member who had none.

I have all sorts of articles sent me to sell—embroidered waists, battenberg work, collars, handkerchiefs. The following is a list of articles made by the girls. They are for sale, and will be sent at once on receipt of the price:

All applications for "Lib's" full address should be accompanied by a stamped envelope.

An Answer to a Question

"Bertha L. O." (Philadelphia) asks the name of a poem beginning "If you could go back to the forks of the road," and ending "O Pilgrim of Sorrow, which road would you take?"

On referring to my scrapbook, I find it is by Nixon Waterman, in the Christian Century.

H. C. A. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Many thanks for the reply.

An Appreciation and a Report

[illegible] Sabbath day, and I find no better way of spending a little time than by telling you some of the many benefits of our Each and All.

When I sent my name last July, I only thought of Each and All as a means of exchanging a few postal cards. Then you sent me the pretty pledge card, and I found it meant a great deal more.

I have not only received cards, but letters, with the best wishes, and I assure you I enjoy them very much.

Now, what have I done for Each and All?

Not as much as I would have liked. I had a bouquet of flowers sent me. I divided them and sent part of them in to another "shut-in."

I have an aged neighbor whose eyes are so dim she cannot read. I have read aloud to her.

I have given a neighbor a pattern that she was anxious to get; mended a tired mother's stockings, and have tried each day to do something for Each and All.

Mrs. N. W. G. (East Weymouth, Mass.).

A good record of benefits received and bestowed.

Addresses Wanted

I would like the names of members living in Los Angeles or suburbs who can do fancy knitting, crochet, lacework, burnt wood; also make infants' clothes.

PANSY (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Will workers in these lines send for "Pansy's" address?

Another Exchange

I will exchange cards, cooking and cake recipes or reading matter for old stamps.

C. E. E. (Huntingdon, W. Va.).

This exchange will doubtless be promptly accepted.

Life's Mirror

There are souls that are pure and true;

A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show

Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

Toodledum & Toodledee in Noodle Land.

"DON'T you feel a little scary, Don?" whispered Flora.

Don replied indignantly, "'Course not, you goose; what's there to be afraid of?" Don was 8, and he didn't like any one to think him a "fraidy-cat."

"Oh, I don't know; only the closet's so big and dark and spooky," and Flora shivered.

Her brother smiled scornfully, but, just the same, it wasn't very long before he remarked, "'Taint anything in here; let's get out." He said this quite loudly and bravely. No, sir-e-e, Don wasn't a bit afraid, not he.

Yet, when he tugged at the heavy closet door, and it didn't budge an inch, Don admitted to himself that he didn't feel just as cheerful as he might. Again he pulled as hard as he could; the door wouldn't move. Pausing a moment to catch his breath, he began to think that, after all, it wasn't so pleasant to be shut up in a big closet that inside was as dark as pitch.

"ALL YOUR FAULT"

"It was all your fault, anyway, Flora," he said angrily; "you wanted to see what it was like and you were afraid to come in by yourself."

"Yes, but I told you not to pull the door shut," sobbed little Flora.

"Tush, children, don't quarrel; there's always more than one way out!" cried a little, squeaky voice between them. Then a taper blazed with a steady blue light before their very eyes. By it they saw that the speaker was a queer little gnome.

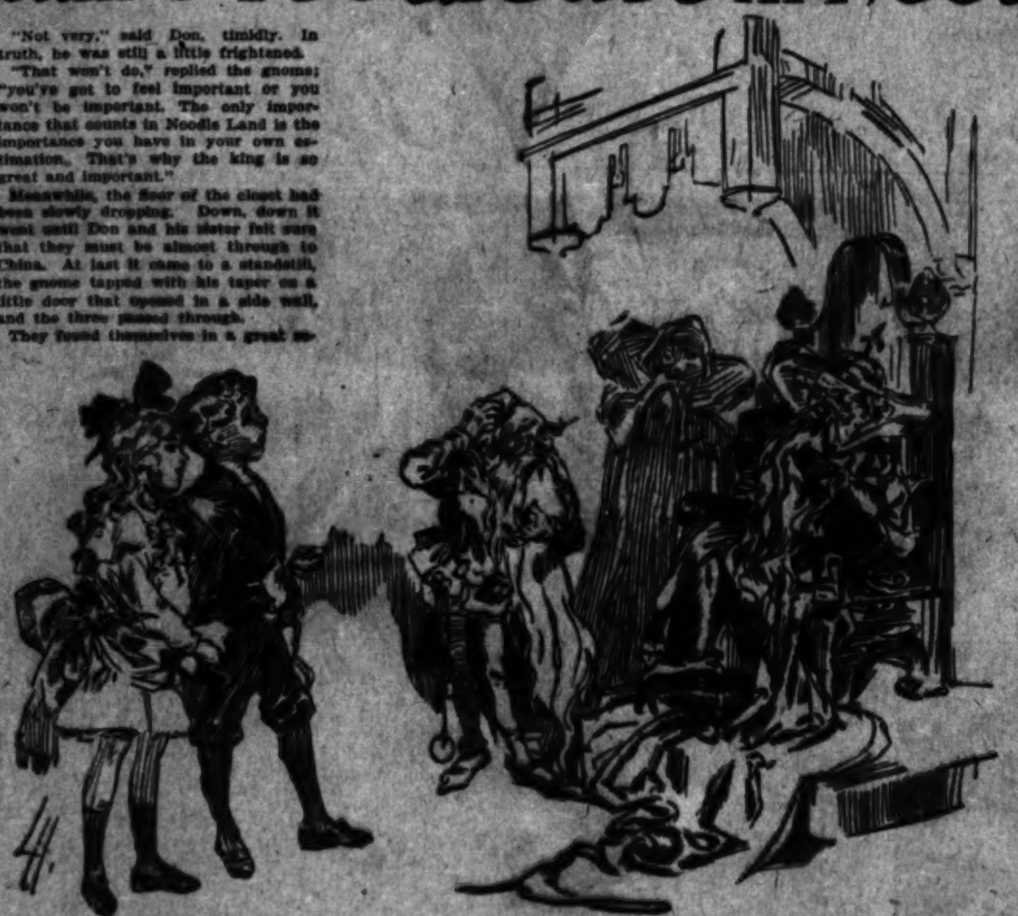
"Now, you're going to come right with me. You needn't ask me why, because I won't tell you. It's enough to know that the king of Noodle Land has invited you to pay a visit. Only very important persons are asked to visit Noodle Land; so you see you must be important. See here, do you feel very important?"

"Not very," said Don, timidly. In truth, he was still a little frightened.

"That won't do," replied the gnome; "you've got to feel important or you won't be important. The only importance that counts in Noodle Land is the importance you have in your own estimation. That's why the king is so great and important."

Meanwhile, the floor of the closet had been slowly dropping. Down, down it went until Don and his sister felt sure that they must be almost through to China. At last it came to a standstill, the gnome tapped with his taper on a little door that opened in a side wall, and the three passed through.

They found themselves in a great reception room, brilliantly lighted, and at one end of which was a gorgeous throne. Seated on the throne was a queer-looking man having long white whiskers. On his head was a crown that looked like the half of a pumpkin with a spike thrust into it.



"Advance, Toodledum and Toodledee!" shouted the king.

Immediately the courtiers formed two long lines in front of Don and Flora. The little boy and girl were gazing on this scene in amazement, when the gnome pushed them gently forward.

"Don't you hear the king's command?" he whispered; "remember, that to visit Noodle Land you must become a subject of our king, and the first thing you have done is to have your names changed."

"How funny!" exclaimed Don.

"Hush! The king is looking at you. Now try your best to look important."

BEFORE THE THRONE

Through the long lane of courtiers Don and Flora made their way to the throne. Don, remembering what the gnome had said about looking important, threw his chest out, and, instead of bowing, looked the king steadily in the eye.

The king was instantly impressed. "You must have been very important persons in your own country, I suppose?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Don, haughtily, "we had one whole playroom to ourselves."

"Indeed!" murmured the king. Then he respectfully asked Don and Flora to bow their heads. Tapping them gently with his sceptre, he announced, loudly:

"Know, all ye people, that Toodledum and Toodledee are my faithful subjects, who are hereby given the highest privileges of the realm, to go where they please, do what they please, and to be only less important than myself!"

Kangaroos as Pets

YOU don't often hear of kangaroos being kept as pets, do you? And a kangaroo farm in England is quite unusual, isn't it?

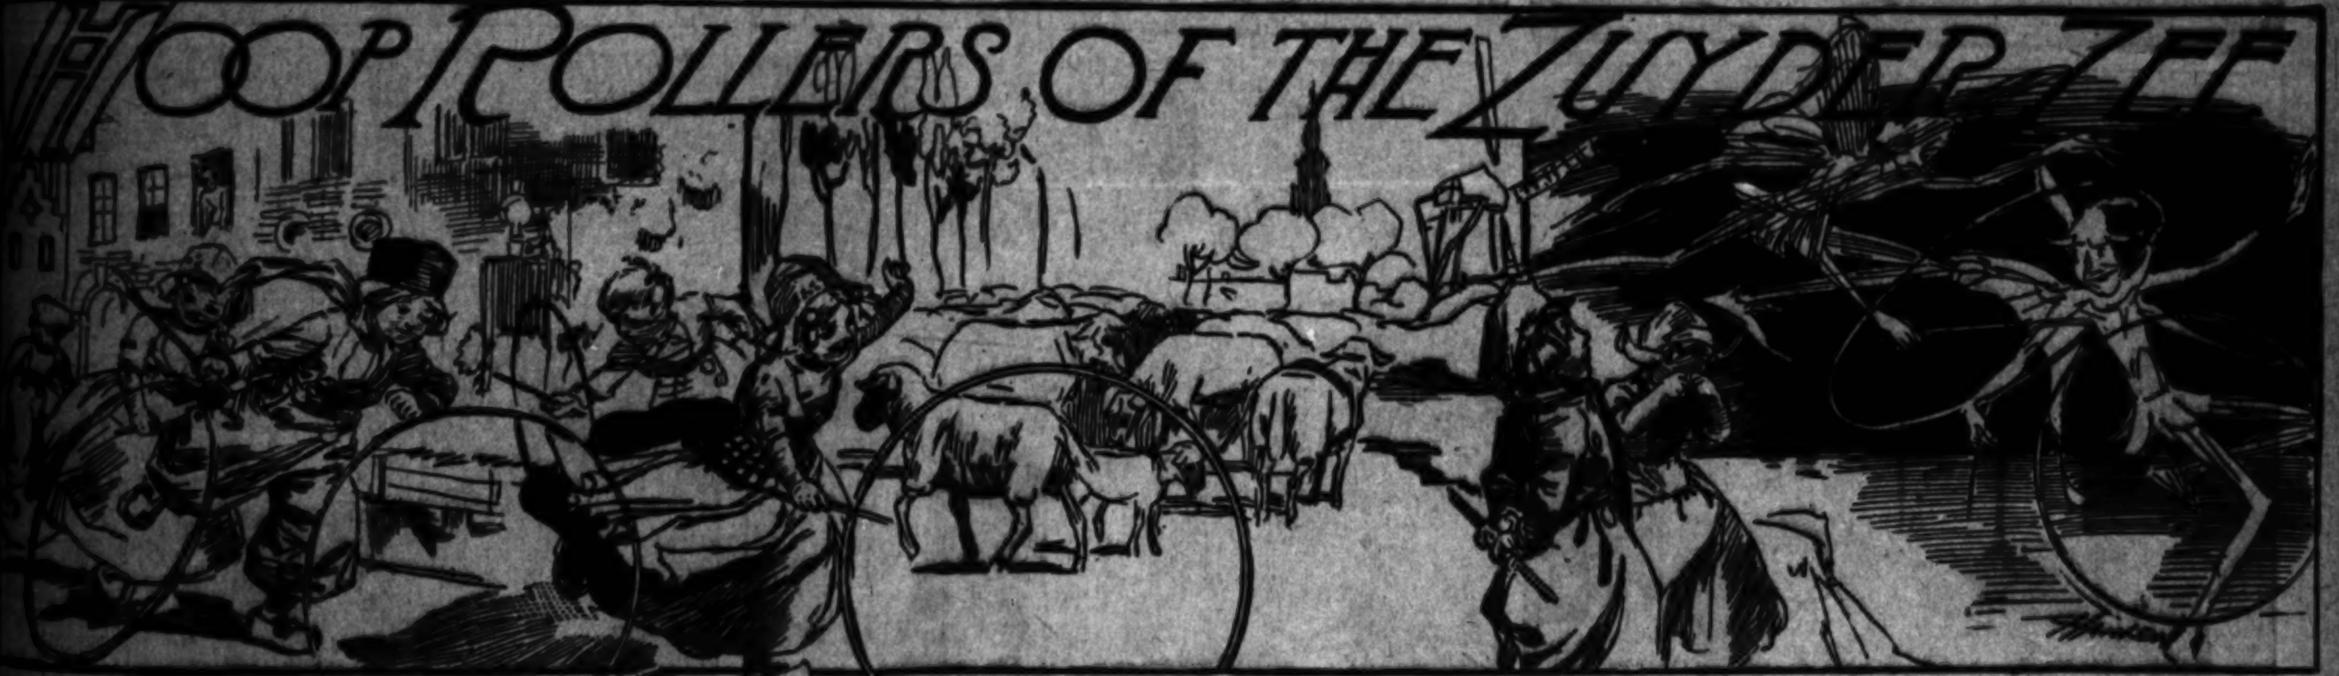
But there is such a farm. New specimens of the animals are brought from Australia and kangaroos are reared on these English farms. From here they are sent to zoos and private persons.

The kangaroo is a delightful pet. He becomes very tame, and is always docile and amiable. In the picture you see a kangaroo eating from his master's hand.

In summer he lives out of doors nearly all of the time, eating grass and other greenstuffs. As you know, the kangaroo can readily leap as high as six feet, so that it is necessary to have the walls of his inclosure a good height.

How would you like to have a kangaroo for your pet? He would make a nice playfellow, wouldn't he?

HOOP ROLLERS OF THE ZUYDER ZEE



O THIS way, that way, up and down,
The girls and boys of Leyden town.
Their hoops were always rolling.
From early morn till late at night,
Though clouds hung dark or skies were bright,
Yet over pavements smooth and white
The hoops went gaily bowling.

They rolled and rolled right out of town,
Then over hill and 'cross the down
Where timid sheep were strolling.
And when to end of Earth they came
The hoops sped onward, just the same—
Among the realms that cloudlets claim
They still kept on a-rolling.

So much, it seems, had they been rolled,
In weather hot and weather cold,
By girl and boy hoop-rider,
That wicked mites of elves, they say,
Bewitched the hoops, so that this day
They rolled from Earth and hid away
In clouds o'er Zee of Zuyder.

Long stood the children, all, and gazed,
Then home they went, with sticks, amazed,
As evening bells were tolling.
Now in the sky they stare each night,
Perchance to see, when stars are bright,
The elf-'witched hoops, their lost delight,
That still above are rolling.

THE FRUIT LOOKED SO TEMPTING

and vowed that a wig would be the best sort of thing to make him comfortable.

According to instructions, the housekeeper presented Samuel with the wig, which Lawyer Grabley had discarded a long time since. It was a peculiar head-dress, an old-fashioned wig of a dirty brown color, and with a little pigtail behind.

Samuel had no sooner donned the wig than a funny thing happened. The little pigtail worked itself around so that the tip of it tickled the wearer in the ear. Samuel could have sworn he heard a little voice saying:

"Do take one of those nice, juicy apples from the tree over yonder."

Samuel started, for, mind you, he had never in his life taken anything that did not belong to him. No, Samuel was strictly honest. But he was hot and thirsty, and the fruit looked so tempting that before he knew it he had a fine apple in his hand.

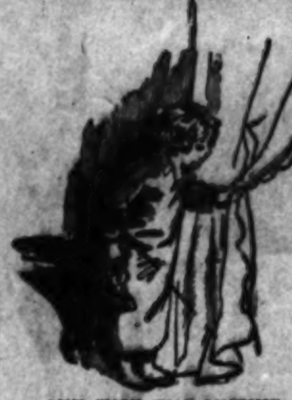
This was but the beginning of Samuel's downfall. Once started, he forsook all the paths of virtue. Whenever that little pigtail bored its way into his ear and the voice whispered Samuel obeyed, whether he would or not. Thus, valuables disappeared from his master's house; chicken was served on his table and at the same time a neighbor discovered that a fine hen had been lost. People began to wonder at the expensive clothes Samuel now possessed in place of his former shabby raiment.

But at last he came to grief. Samuel turned highwayman, was captured and condemned to be put to death.

Samuel bequeathed the brown wig to his jailer. The jailer decided to burn it. No sooner did the flame touch it, however, than the wig flew sizzling out the door and disappeared in the sky.

And in the little town the legend of the evil spirit in the wig which brought about the downfall of Samuel Clapstone is still told from father to son.

Careless Tim



ONE SHOE WAS MISSING

SPRINGING from bed, Tim danced a jig on the floor. Tim was merry, and with good reason, too, for had not Uncle Ben promised to take Tim and Sister Jo and Brother Jack to the Zoo that very morning? To go anywhere with Uncle Ben was a treat, and to go to the Zoo with him made it doubly a pleasure. But Uncle Ben had told them they must be ready for him when he came, so that they could start promptly.

"Oh, yes," thought Tim, "I shall surely be ready before Jo or Jack. They are so slow."

He said this, however, before he commenced to look for his shoe. Yes, the real trouble began when he discovered that one shoe was missing. He looked everywhere for it, but not a sign of it did he find. Meanwhile, minute after minute flew by. Jo and Jack were dressed and had finished their breakfast. Tim still searched for the shoe.

Suddenly the doorbell rang sharply. There was a scurrying of feet, and Tim could hear his brother and sister laughing and chattering as they threw themselves into Uncle Ben's arms. Then he heard Uncle exclaim loudly, "Where's Tim?"

Where was Tim? No one had seen him, but surely he must be almost ready by this time. Mother ran quickly upstairs. Hurrying into Tim's room, there she found the little fellow, sitting on the side of his bed, sobbing with vexation. He had not even commenced to dress.

"Why, Tim, what is the matter?" she asked.

"Can't find my shoe," he explained bitterly.

Mother sighed. "Carelessness again," she murmured. Then she added kindly, "Now hurry and dress, and I'll ask Uncle Ben to wait a few minutes for you."

As soon as his mother had left the room Tim resumed his search. He was no more successful, however, than at first.

Uncle Ben, Jo and Jack remained ten minutes and then they left.

Tim spent a sorry half hour complaining to himself. After a while he came to a better frame of mind.

"Really, I s'pose I am careless, and I'm sure it was my own fault. I'm not going to be careless any more." As soon as he had taken this resolution he rearranged everything in his room, put his playroom in order and made everything orderly and tidy. He then carefully brushed his clothes and went into the orchard to see if he couldn't find a nice apple.

Hardly had he left the house behind him than he discovered Towser, the big black dog, playing with the very shoe he had lost that morning! You see, Towser had stolen the shoe that had been flung so carelessly on the middle of the floor the night before.

Then Tim went indoors again. Pussy leaped playfully toward him. Tim picked up a piece of paper to play with kitty, when the door burst open and in came Uncle Ben, looking much worried, followed by Jo and Jack.

"You didn't see a valuable bank note?" he asked Tim's mother. "I missed it soon after I left the house."

Tim came forward with the piece of paper still in his hand. Looking at the boy, Uncle Ben observed the paper. Quickly examining it, he cried, "Here it is! How did you find it, my boy?"

After Tim had explained, and had also told them of his resolve not to be careless any more, the party again set forth, this time with Tim among its members.

"I'm afraid that I, too, must learn to be more careful," laughed Uncle Ben, when they were well on their way.

Didn't Tire Him.

A kind old gentleman paused to buy a paper from the newsboy. Observing the great size of the bundle of papers the little fellow carried, he asked:

"Don't all those papers make you tired, my boy?"

The boy grinned. "No, sir; I don't read 'em," said he.

Being asked the meaning of nervousness, a little girl replied:

"It does means bein' in a hurry all over."

Walking Shoes in Calf

BEAUTIFUL, indeed, are the styles in shoes and slippers offered this season.

And, as the success of a gown depends, for the most part, on the accessories, such important detail as footwear of the correct style and shade means much to the success of one's appearance.

Owing to the popularity of the low [illegible] it will probably continue to be [illegible] a great deal up to the severely cold [illegible].

It is shown in many fascinating shapes [illegible] colors.

For strictly street wear it is in [illegible]-leather, with dear little tiny [illegible] bows of a flat style adorning the [illegible].

Again, it is seen in the tongue-toed [illegible], which is really a combination of [illegible] pump and the old-time colonial slipper. [illegible] of dull silver, gunmetal, gilt and [illegible] black ribbon bows decorate these attractive models.

For street wear is shown the very [illegible] button or lace model, with patent [illegible] vamp and gunmetal top, in the [illegible] and in the browns, with the dark [illegible] and a top of several shades [illegible].

The tendencies in these shoes, as well as in the slippers, is toward the very pointed [illegible] without a tip or a suggestion of it.

The heels are the rather high Cuban [illegible] of last season, so universally becoming to all feet.

The slippers for evening wear are of a wonderful variety of delicate colors, several shades of each color being temptingly displayed in kid, satin, hand-embroidered [illegible] and brocades.

They are ornamented with rosettes of [illegible] and twisted ribbons, held together [illegible] center with a buckle of rhinestones [illegible] iridescent buttons.

The vamps this season are very much [illegible] than they have been for some time.

The changes are, however, expressed [illegible] in the form of interesting adaptations of existing ideas than in radical ways.

Yet there are changes made in almost every direction: toes growing more pointed, [illegible] narrowing, and the whole stock of women's shoes taking on a lighter, more [illegible] touch.

[illegible] is very much to the fore. A number of new shades and tints have been brought out, and promise to be exceedingly popular during the winter.

Shoes and slippers of silver or gold [illegible] over color have tried very hard to get a hearing, but there are two [illegible] between them and success: they make the foot look large, and, to be pretty at all, must be made of expensive lace, which increases their cost to a most prohibitive limit.

Then, both the gold and silver thread [illegible] readily if not given care.

Among the radical novelties are the [illegible] high shoe of gunmetal and [illegible] extravagant conceits in the shape of [illegible].

What would really be classed among the novelties, though sanest of them all, are the embroidered evening slippers in white and delicate tints.

In the grays are shown buckskins and suedes in the most fascinating forms. Some of the dressier styles are pailletted and set off by buckles of silver or cut steel.

Then, again, there are patent leather foreparts, with the softest, palest gray, or any of the smoke-gray cloth or kid tops.

Often a shoe is shown combining red and black or blue and black, but most of these novelties are out of question for ordinary wear.

Stockings match the shoes. They are of silk or lisle thread, with dainty floral decorations, gorgeous butterflies, embroidered conventional designs, and those with insets of lace.

They are shown in every color imaginable, and are really quite reasonable in price.

Some Matters of Special Interest to the Women.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

BY EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.
[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

PIE lovers (and their name is legion,) who for a few years past have felt they must disguise their preferences, because light, delicate puddings were more esthetic, have taken heart latterly and boldly flaunt their fondness for pie, sure of good company. Properly made and eaten in moderation, pie is a wholesome food.

"Who'll dare deny the truth, there's poetry in pie?" says Longfellow; and surely we have more things more idyllic than Whittier's tribute to the pumpkin pie, Henry Ward Beecher's to the apple, and all the old English writers to the mince.

PUMPKIN PIE.

Just now the pumpkin pie is the one to conjure with. Thanks to our up-to-date canning and evaporating methods, we may have pumpkin pies all the year round; but there is not as much poetry or distinctive association in taking our pies from a can as fresh from the field, beaded with frost, or at least that good middle man, the family grocer.

Having found your "fruit loved of boyhood" choosing one of a rich orange color, wash well, cut in halves and scrape out the inner fibres that hold the seeds. Now you may place on a buttered dripping pan and bake in the oven until the pulp is tender, or cut in inch pieces without paring; put into a large kettle with about a cupful boiling water, cover closely and simmer on the back of the stove for five or six hours until tender, sweet and nearly dry. Then pare off what skin you can (this in either way you are preparing it,) and rub the pulp through a colander. If it seems at all watery, let it drain over night, saving the juice to use for any kind of brown bread or muffins. When ready to bake your pies, measure the pulp, and to four cupfuls strained pumpkin, allow four cupfuls rich milk, four well-beaten eggs, a teaspoonful salt, a large cup sugar or part sugar and part molasses to sweeten, half a grated nutmeg, a dusting of mace and cinnamon and two teaspoonfuls ginger. Beat well, taste to see if sweet enough or seasoned properly, turn into deep pie plates lined with good pastry, and bake in a hot oven until a rich golden brown, aromatic and mouth watering. As pumpkin pies require a hot oven, and the rim is apt to burn before the inside is baked to perfection, it is a good plan to heat the mixture scalding hot before pouring into the pie plates. The pies should be baked as soon as filled, else the crust will be clammy. Some cooks like the addition of a little rose flavoring to their pumpkin pies, and a new culinary wrinkle is to make individual pies, instead of the usual family size.

PUMPKIN AS A VEGETABLE.

If you have never served pumpkin as a vegetable try this Italian method. Place sliced pumpkin (peeled) in salted boiling water and cook fifteen minutes. Drain. Put a generous piece of butter in a frying pan and as soon as hot lay in the sliced pumpkin, seasoning with salt and pepper. Toast over the fire a few moments. Lay the slices in a baking dish, pour the butter over them, sprinkle grated cheese on top and bake until nicely browned. Serve very hot.

MASHED PUMPKIN.

This is one of Oscar's [illegible] of the Waldorf. Pare off the rind of a large slice of pumpkin, remove the seeds and cut into squares. Place in a stew pan with a large lump of butter and a small quantity of water, season to taste with salt and pepper and simmer over a slow fire until quite soft. Mash the pumpkin with a wooden spoon and pass through a fine hair sieve. Place one ounce butter in a saucepan with a tablespoonful flour. Mix over the fire, then stir in the pumpkin pulp, moistening with a little milk and seasoning with grated nutmeg. Stir the whole over the fire until very hot, then pile on a hot dish, garnish with croutons of fried bread or sippets of toast, and serve.

DRIED PUMPKIN FOR WINTER.

Not every one knows that pumpkin is readily dried to keep for use when fresh pumpkins are out of season. Peel and cut into thin strips. Lay on sheets of brown paper or plates in the oven and dry slowly all day, leaving the oven door open. When dried into chips, wrap in paraffine paper and pack in bags hanging in pantry or storeroom, where they will be entirely free from dampness. When needed for pies, soak in a little water and cook until soft.

GERMAN PUDDING.

Put a pint of milk in a double boiler with a thin strip of lemon peel. When the milk is hot and well flavored, pour it over a half pound of bread crumbs. Let the crumbs soak until softened, then beat in one egg, a tablespoonful butter and two tablespoonfuls sugar. Butter a pudding mold, put in a layer of the bread mixture, then a layer of stiff jam. Repeat until the mold is full, having the last layer of buttered bread crumbs. Cover with floured cloth and boil for an hour and a half. Serve with any good sauce.

SAUCE FOR FRUIT OR PLUM PUDDING.

Here are directions for making a good, plain pudding sauce suited to almost any steamed or baked pudding. Put a large tablespoonful butter in a saucepan and when melted add two level tablespoonfuls flour. Stir until blended, then pour in gradually a cup and a half of hot water and stir until well cooked. Add a cup brown sugar, two teaspoonfuls lemon juice and a little grated nutmeg. As soon as the sugar is dissolved serve.

CELERY AND CHEESE SALAD.

Mash a 10-cent cream cheese and work with a spoon, adding a little cream, until smooth. Mix with a half cup fine chopped crispy celery, season with salt and make into little balls. Put half an English walnut on each side of the balls, arrange on lettuce leaves, pour over a French dressing and dust with paprika.

CREAM CHEESE WITH PEPPERS.

Cream cheese, by the way, is one of the most popular factors this fall in the salad course. One of the newest ways of serving it is in combination with the little canned Spanish peppers. Chop the peppers fine, add to the cheese, with salt to season, mix well, form into dainty balls and serve on lettuce leaves.

FLOUR PUDDING.

This is a most excellent pudding, preferred by many to cornstarch, which it resembles. Put a quart of milk in the double boiler. When it reaches the boiling point, stir in three level tablespoonfuls of flour that have been stirred smooth in a little cold milk taken from the quart when first measured out. Stir constantly until smooth and thickened, then season with sugar to taste, a pinch of salt and any flavoring desired. Orange is particularly good. Beat the yolks of three eggs until lemon-colored and thick and stir into the boiling mixture. Let cook just long enough to thicken. Then pour into a silver or earthen serving dish. Beat the whites of the three eggs to a stiff froth, allowing a tablespoonful level sugar to each egg, flavor and spread on top. Set in a coolish oven and bake slowly until the meringue is light and golden in color.

NORWEGIAN PRUNE PUDDING.

This is an inexpensive and tasty pudding, good at any season. Pick over and thoroughly wash one half pound of prunes. Put into a stewpan with two cupfuls cold water, cover and let stand an hour. Bring to the boiling point in the same water, and simmer slowly until the prunes are soft. Take out the pits. Crack some of them and add the kernels to the prunes to flavor. Add also one cupful of sugar, an inch stick of cinnamon, a cup and a quarter of boiling water, and again bring to the boiling point. Simmer five minutes. Dissolve one-third cup cornstarch in just enough cold water to pour easily, add to the prune mixture, and cook ten minutes, stirring constantly. Remove the cinnamon, turn into a mold that has been rinsed out with cold water and chill. Serve with powdered sugar and whipped or liquid cream, flavored with vanilla.

OTHER CHEESE COMBINATIONS.

Other favorite combinations with cream cheese are caraway, minced olives, chives and pepper, or cream cheese mixed with cream, molded in small cups turned on a lettuce leaf with a spoonful Bar-le-duc or gooseberry jam, laid in a depression at the top. Another nutritious and tasty salad is made from two cupfuls cottage cheese mixed with two dozen chopped stuffed olives and moistened with enough boiled dressing to permit of its being molded. Make into balls with butter paddles and serve on lettuce leaves.

LETTUCE LEAVES CUPS.

As nearly all salads are served on lettuce leaves, it should be remembered that if they are put together in such a way as to form cups it will be much easier to serve and prettier. If a large salad is in order, arrange so that the stem ends of several leaves will overlap in the center, forming a number of little nests. Each of these may be filled with individual portions of salad. Where the lettuce leaves are very large they may be cut with scissors into ribbons, then twisted into nests.

GOAT'S MILK.

Goat's milk is now frequently prescribed by physicians for patients having a consumptive tendency. It has the advantage over cow's milk of being free from tubercle bacilli. There are a large number of sanatoriums in France and Switzerland where goat's milk is advertised as a prominent feature of treatment. In these places the patients are encouraged to drink as much as possible, and it is used in nearly all the cooking. While foreigners in this country are frequently in the way of keeping goats, for the use of their children and invalids, Americans are but recently awakening to the importance of goat's milk. The government has lately imported sixty head, as an experiment. A woman who has just imported six thoroughbred milch goats from Switzerland gives the preference to the Schawarzenburg goat from the Simmen Valley of Switzerland. This breed is noted for its great milk-producing qualities, giving when fresh five or six quarts a day.

The cheese made from this milk is excellent and nourishing, while the flesh of the kids is so delicate and sweet that many prefer it to lamb. It is best when roasted and served with a garnish of cress instead of mint.

PICKLED ONIONS.

Put small white onions into hot water and peel. As fast as peeled, throw into cold salted water with a small piece of alum and leave over night. In the morning, drain, cover with fresh water, salt and alum and leave a second day. Drain, pack in jars, placing in each one one or two blades of mace, or one or two chilies, a few white peppercorns and a little root of horseradish. Pour in vinegar to cover and cork tightly. Keep in a cool, dry place. These will be ready for use in a month.

Fish Cooked in French Fashion.

There are many dainty ways of cooking fish besides frying, boiling and baking. Some of these are quite as easy of achievement and as inexpensive as the foregoing modes, moreover, nicer. Fish with a cheese sauce is very good. Almost any white fish can be cooked in this way.

Take from one pound to two pounds of fish, wash it well and dry it carefully. Then place it in a clean enameled stewpan, add three gills of milk, salt, an onion, notched in order that the juice may escape, a blade of mace and a good-sized sprig of parsley. Simmer gently until the fish is cooked, but do not allow the milk to reduce. Dish it up hot and add from two ounces to four ounces, according to taste, of grated cheddar or Dutch cheese. Stir until the cheese has thoroughly melted, pour it over and around the fish and serve at once.

Here is a simpler and quicker way of cooking a small piece of white fish. Wash and dry, place in a well-greased fireproof china dish, sprinkle thickly with fried bread crumbs, minced parsley, and if possible some minced mushrooms, about two ounces. Place a bit of butter here and there and pour over the whole half a small bottle of tomato catsup; sprinkle more bread crumbs on top and bake in a moderate oven for from twenty minutes to half an hour, according to the size and kind.

Self-supporting Japanese.

In the government cigar and cigarette factories of Japan are thousands of girls whose fingers move with a speed that tires the eye to follow. Every such factory has its champion operative. Generally she is young, and often pretty, conscious, and flattered by attentions. She is a kind of local Carmen. She earns, perhaps, as much as 10 cents per day! This is extraordinarily high pay.

Or, observe the women who pole the heavy barges along through the canals; or those who, in company with men, coal the ships at Kobe and Nagasaki, carrying the mineral on their backs; or those who drag heavily-laden vehicles through the narrow streets of the other cities; or those who mix mortar and carry bricks in building operations; or those who, their babies toddling near by, all day long, to the rhythm of their own cries and songs, sway on ropes of pile-driving machinery.

Then there are the women above these in the hierarchy of employment—those who tend store; those who serve as clerks and can and do keep accounts; those who are in the government departments, especially in the Department of Communications, embracing telegraphs, railroads and telephones. The telephone girl is an important institution even in Japan.

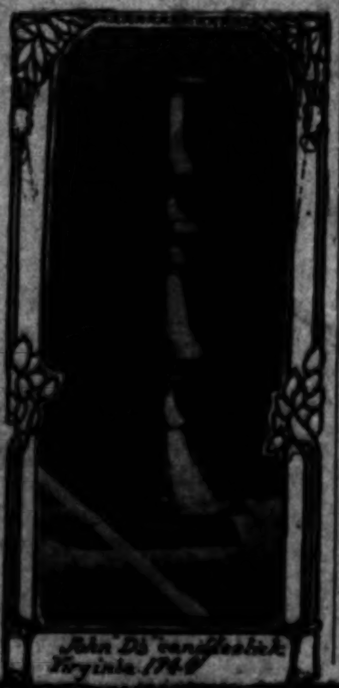
Moreover, women have made their appearance and are more than holding their own in printing offices and also on newspapers; while the fame of the Japanese trained female nurse spread over the world during the recent war. Women are even now appearing on the stage, and with distinction. The most notable are Mme. Kumehachi and Mme. Sada Yakko. The latter made a success in Paris. She is now to be seen by turn in the larger cities of Japan in modern plays, after the European type.—[Henry George, Jr., in the Circle for October.

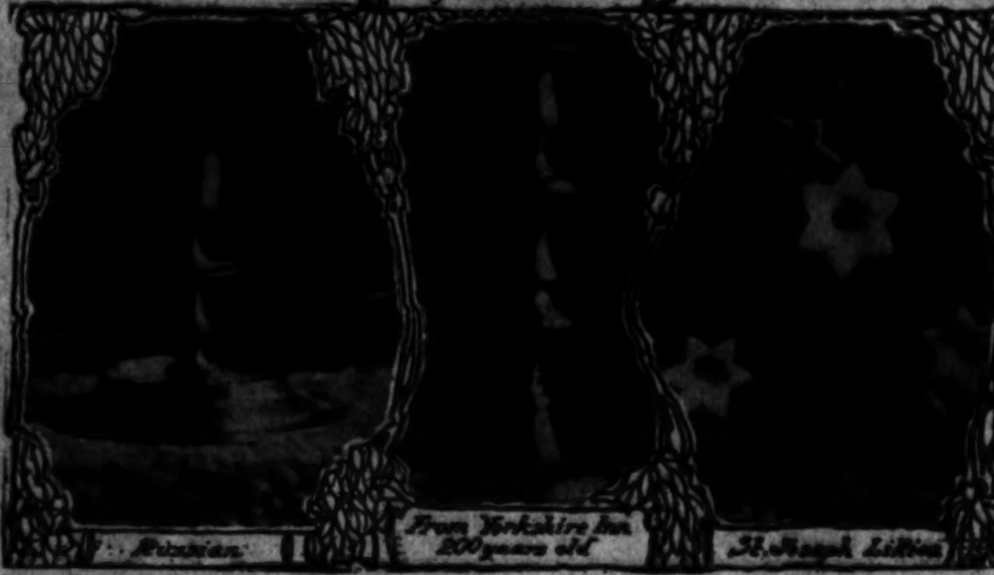
The Value of Music.

It seems almost as if children everywhere had a right to a knowledge of music; certainly I am not going too far in saying that they should be encouraged to study music, particularly if they show fondness and talent for it. Music is not only a pleasurable recreation; it is a friend to us in our joys and sorrows, a need in our lives; it is a safety-valve against perils and excesses of every description; it ennobles heart and mind.

The pianoforte is the best instrument for introducing the young into the music world; if well tuned, it yields perfect tone-quality; in stringed instruments this tone-quality must first be created. This correct intonation, however, is often the cause of a lack of mental effort on the part of the pupil, and pianoforte playing without concentrated mental effort is mere jingling.

To lay a good foundation demands a conscientious teacher, one who is able to stimulate his pupil mentally. It is wrong to believe that any pianoforte is good enough for the first steps, if able to invest only a small amount of money, purchase one that has been used from a reliable house. Correct touch, the index of artistic skill, depends on the mechanical perfectness of the instrument.—[Cornelius Rubner, in the Circle.





Ginger Bread.

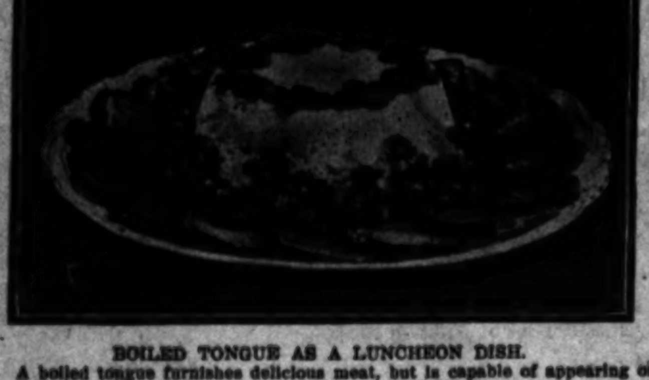
My favorite recipe for ginger bread has not the advantage of being inexpensive, but it is delicious. Melt one-third of a cupful of butter in two-thirds of a cupful of boiling water, and add one cupful of molasses, and one egg well beaten. Mix and sift two and three-fourths cupfuls of pastry flour (once sifted,) one and a half teaspoonfuls of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of ginger. Add to first mixture, beat thoroughly, turn into a buttered and floured shallow pan, and bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes. Vary the flavor sometimes by using one teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cloves; then bake in buttered and floured individual tins.—[Woman's Home Companion.

Corn Cake.

A Southern corn cake recipe is a valuable addition to one's scrap book. Mix and sift three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal, one and one-fourth cupfuls of pastry flour, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and five (level) teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add one cupful of milk, one egg well beaten and one and a half tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Beat thoroughly, turn into a shallow buttered pan, and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Cut in squares, and arrange on a bread plate. If a richer corn cake is liked, two tablespoonfuls of butter may be used.—[Woman's Home Companion.

FRUIT AND CINNAMON ROLLS.

Many tempting things may be made from bread dough other than a sweet loaf or crusty rolls. Save out enough dough from the next baking of white bread to make some fruit rolls as an appetizing change for luncheon or tea. After the first rising roll out a sheet of dough one-third of an inch thick; keep it in rectangular shape by rolling or trimming and brush over with melted butter. Sprinkle with chopped citron and raisins, using one-half as much citron as raisins; then roll up like a small jelly roll and cut off slices about three-quarters of an inch thick. Set the rolls on a buttered pan, let rise and then bake. A more simple roll is made by sprinkling the buttered sheet of dough with sugar in which a little cinnamon has been mixed, then roll up and cut off like fruit rolls. The cinnamon mixture is more easily managed than the chopped fruit. Use bread dough mixed with milk and a little shortening added in preference to water bread. These rolls may also be made with baking powder biscuit dough and are liked better by some tastes. Whole wheat flour may also be used in either way and makes another change that is agreeable.



BOILED TONGUE AS A LUNCHEON DISH.

A boiled tongue furnishes delicious meat, but is capable of appearing on the table in most unsightly form. If corned, soak the tongue over night in cold water, but whether fresh or corned, put it on to cook in boiling water afterwards reducing the temperature to a more gentle simmering. Be sure that the tongue is thoroughly cooked before it is taken up. Remove the skin and when cold slice as thinly as possible. Boil, mash and season some potatoes turn into a buttered tin or mould to shape and keep hot. When ready to serve turn the potato into the center of a large plate or platter and surround the top with a wreath of fancy shapes cut from a slice of beet. Place the slices of tongue in an over-lapping row round the base of the potato and garnish with a light wreath of parsley at the base of the potato. At this time of year potatoes are better if pared before boiling, but they should be put into boiling water when cooked. A red beet boiled and cut into slices and then into fancy shapes is convenient to keep on hand for a garnish. Drop the sections into vinegar and they will keep a long time.

Historic Candlesticks.

INTERESTING COLLECTION COLLECTED BY A CALIFORNIA PHYSICIAN.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

The candlestick fad is decidedly a most interesting one when the life history of each is known. Collectors of antiques take wonderful pride in the age of the candlestick as well as the romance attached to it.

The oldest and most romantic candlesticks in private possession the writer has yet found, belong to a physician of Nevada City, Cal., Dr. Ormiston Swayne.

During extensive travel at home and abroad, the doctor has searched diligently for only the rarest to add to his collection, and sometimes they came to him without any searching. Perhaps the most pathetic story attached to his candlesticks, is that of one given him while in England.

One Christmas eve, in his wanderings over that historic country, he found himself delayed for a time, at a little old Yorkshire inn. Generation upon generation, for 200 years, the same family and its ancestors had lived in this inn, and most of its few possessions spoke of age. The family was very poor, and two of the children lay critically ill. This man of the world and of medicine did all that lay within his power to do for them. When it came time for him to continue his journey, the spirit of gratitude and Christmas-tide was so strong in those English folk that they could not let him go without some token of appreciation, so the mother thrust into his hand at parting, her long treasured candlestick, which was over 200 years old, and breathed of the tragic years of George III. The little English woman's eyes were full of tears when she closed the doctor's hand about the candlestick, as he sat mounted on his horse ready for departure, and then quickly ran into the old inn. The doctor had no time to remonstrate and indeed, hesitated to do so, fearing to wound the strong English pride.

Somewhere in this big world, there was a little weary, penniless teacher of Spanish. She treasured as her one worldly possession, besides her ability to instruct others, a beautiful antique candlestick of St. Joseph lilies. The lilies were of opalescent glass with nine spun brass petals. It had come to her from the altar of an old Spanish cathedral in reward of some past service to her church. She clung to it through years of poverty and almost starvation, but at last had to part with it. She sold it to the doctor, however, realizing he would at least appreciate its value and the sentiment she attached to it. As the weary little teacher did not live very long after this, the doctor did not regret the price he paid and was pleased he could get in his possession such an unique piece of antique workmanship.

In the year 1776, Richard Churchill gathered together his movable worldly possessions, among them a candlestick, and left his ancestral home in Pelham, Eng., for New Brunswick. He perhaps never dreamed that the then commonplace candlestick tucked in an obscure corner of his baggage would some day be placed as a valued article among his great, great nephew's collection of antiques.

The significance and companionship of a candlestick is most interesting in tracing back what it meant to those people of so long ago. Today with the modern conveniences of gas and electricity we never think when traveling to another country of taking our "light" with us. Then scarcely a family left the old country for this new land without bringing a candlestick with them, and if the candlestick could tell of all they witnessed from the many nooks and corners, from which they flickered, what sad, what merry tales we would hear?

In 1740, an English loyalist arrived in Virginia, and wrapped carefully among his few belongings was his little keepsake of his own country. This was called "John D's" candlestick. When England no longer held authority over the colonies, loyal to his country, he migrated to Canada, taking "John D" with him. As generation succeeded generation, the candlestick passed from father to son, to daughter, until now it stands among the great-grand-daughter's collection, the doctor's wife.

Strange how human nature will cling to a cherished heirloom, even to the point of starvation. Among the Polish Jews the candlestick is highly prized and their hold upon it will not loosen until the outlook is one of such utter wretchedness that the sacrifice has to be made. Such was the condition of a Polish Jew who sold his candlestick to the doctor, who was greatly impressed by the quiet dignity and gentleness of the man at parting with it. The candlestick was of beaten copper and was considered by collectors to be the finest in his collection.

Dancing Statistics.

M. Giraudet, the president of the International Academy of Authors, Masters, and Professors of Dancing, Behavior, and Deportment, read some startling statistics to his colleagues of the I.A.A.M.P.D.B.D. this afternoon.

He has decomposed, he says, various dances into their component movements, and this is the result:

To become a good waltzer you must dance fifty waltzes. This will take four hours and ten minutes. The patient—I mean the pupil—in his four hours and ten minutes will have traveled ten thousand yards, made seven thousand steps, seven thousand turns, and moved his feet 42,000 times.

To dance the mazurka you must work three minutes at a time thirty-five times, and by the time you have learned it you will have made 2815 steps, 1207½ turns, you will have traveled 600 yards, and you will be rather tired.

But when you dance the polka you need twenty-three spasms of four minutes each, 4000 steps, 2000 turns, 500 bars of music; you will have moved your feet 12,000 times, and you will have traveled three miles and a half.

I wanted to know how many pairs of shoes the operation would wear out, but the upper lip of the president of the I.A.A.M.P.D.B.D. curved haughtily at my question. "Sir, I am not a cobbler," answered Mr. Turveydrop of Paris.—[Paris Correspondence London Express.

HELPFUL WIVES.

How Sensible Women Can Make Their Husbands Succeed in Life.

[Nina A. Gorst, in London Mail:]

From the fuss which is being made about woman's suffrage, one would suppose that women are deprived of any share of influence in managing the affairs of the world.

As a matter of fact, not only is a great deal of the wire-pulling behind the scenes done by active-minded women, but it is open to every married member of the sex to help make or mar a man's career.

Nor does the husband's success necessarily depend upon his own intrinsic merit. Even the average normal uninspired plodder can acquit himself almost brilliantly in the eyes of the world if he has a moderately clever woman at the back of him.

The secret lies in the possession by woman of natural weapons, which are either lacking in man or are of no avail to him on account of his sex.

Almost every woman possesses gifts which are, when judiciously utilized, of incalculable value in the severe competition of modern life, whether it be in the field of politics, business or art.

What are these natural weapons possessed by woman, which, if rightly used, exercise the most far-reaching effect in advancing a man's worldly interests?

They are simply personal charm, a soft voice, a wheedling tongue, a winning smile, and, above all things, the power of intuition and of reading character.

There is no reason, if she will make the effort, why a wife should not be domesticated—a quality that always appeals to men—and at the same time take a practical part in advancing her husband's career. In France, for instance, this kind of partnership has become so common that it is a national characteristic.

The question is, in fact, whether it is not absolutely the duty of the wife to think of ways and means to help on her husband in his profession or business, as well as to superintend the home.

The necessity of "managing" the rougher and cruder sex has caused woman, from the cradle upward, to train her powers of observation.

She uses her intelligence in learning to read human nature; whereas the man-cub exercises his body, crams his mind with geography and mathematics, and spends the intervals between eating, sleeping and working in horse-play and other forms of amusement.

The woman sharpens her wits and becomes an expert reader of human character. She learns the value of diffusing sweetness equally upon those she instinctively likes or dislikes. Above all things, she acquires the art of acting a pleasant part in life.

Young men, meanwhile, fit themselves for the particular work to which their life's energies are to be devoted. They gradually become experts in some field of work, and as soon as they are earning a small competence the majority of them plunge into matrimony.

At this stage wise people shake their heads and say to each other what a pity it is that So-and-so has "done for himself" by marrying on insufficient prospects.

Now, my contention is that these wise people, if only the young wives would bestir themselves, could soon be proved to be utterly wrong in all cases—as they often are in numbers of existing instances.

Women have at their command such excellent facilities for helping on a husband's career that matrimony should be, to the average man with a normal capacity for work, a stepping stone to success.

In this world even discerning people are apt to take you at your own valuation. A wife can do incalculable benefit to her husband's prospects by taking care that his talents—whether he have any or not—shall not be hid under a bushel.

She can boast about him in a subtle and inoffensive way until people begin to think that there must really be something in him and he ultimately acquires a general reputation for ability.

A man cannot obtain clients, or orders for work or lucrative appointments, unless he can get into personal contact with those who have these things in their gift. While he is attending to his business his wife can make friends, be civil to everybody she meets, in case some one may prove useful, and spread the good tidings of her husband's prospects of future success.

Given a man of normal brains and health, I am fully convinced that a clever wife cannot only help him to success, but can actually make him succeed by devoting herself wholly to the undertaking.

Hand over to the keeping of a resourceful woman a man who can acquit himself satisfactorily in some particular sphere of work, but whose talents are restricted to performing his allotted task, and I venture to suggest that she will find ample opportunity to make him a conspicuous success, where he would have failed, if left to his own devices, to rise above the dead level of mediocrity. The truth is that the relation of husband and wife can be made a splendid asset if they will only grasp the value of such a partnership.

Nowadays the greatest successes are generally due not to the achievements of a solitary individual, but to the efforts of a combination. No combination can be made more irresistible than the subtlety and personal influence of woman allied to the skill and industry of specialized man.

Oyster Stew.

For the inexperienced cook the recipe for a fine oyster stew is given in the October Woman's Home Companion:

"Put one quart of oysters in a colander, and pour over three-fourths of a cupful of cold water, reserving the liquor. Pick over the oysters, being careful that no particles of shells adhere to the tough muscles. Heat the reserved liquor to the boiling point, strain through a double thickness of cheesecloth, add the oysters, and cook, stirring occasionally, until the oysters are plump and the edges begin to curl. Remove the oysters with a skimmer to a heated tureen, and add one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one-half tablespoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, the oyster liquor, strained a second time through a double thickness of cheesecloth, and four cupfuls of scalded milk."

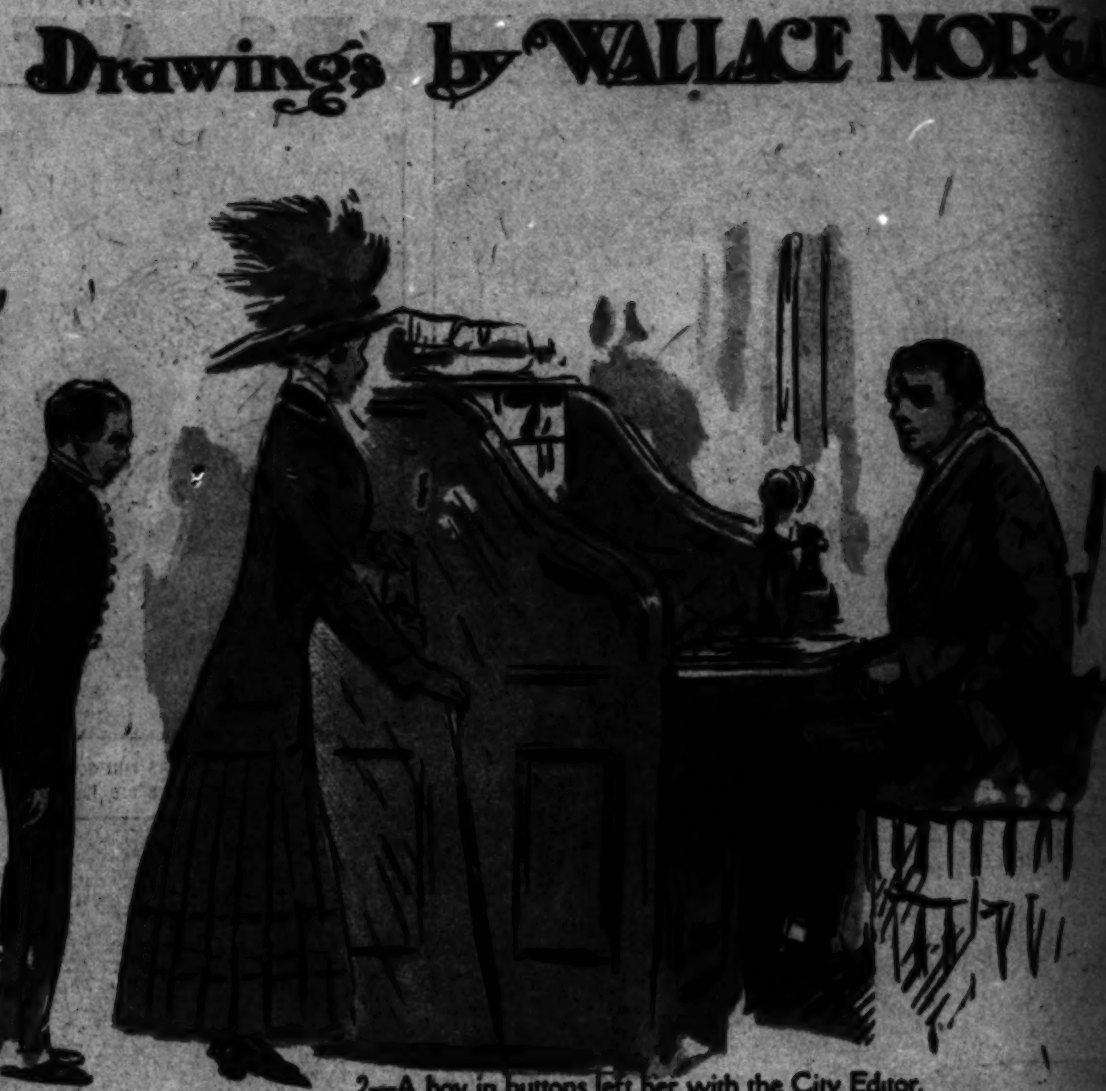
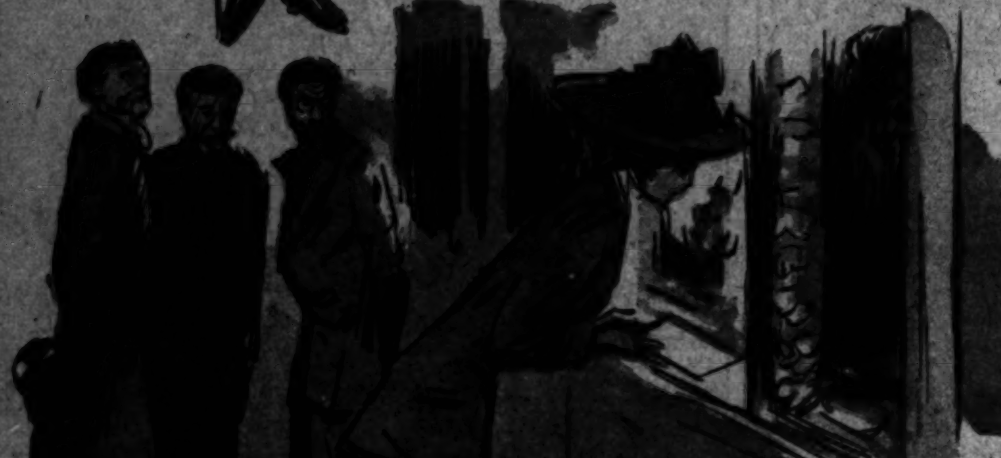
FLUFFY RUFFLES

Drawings by WALLACE MORGAN

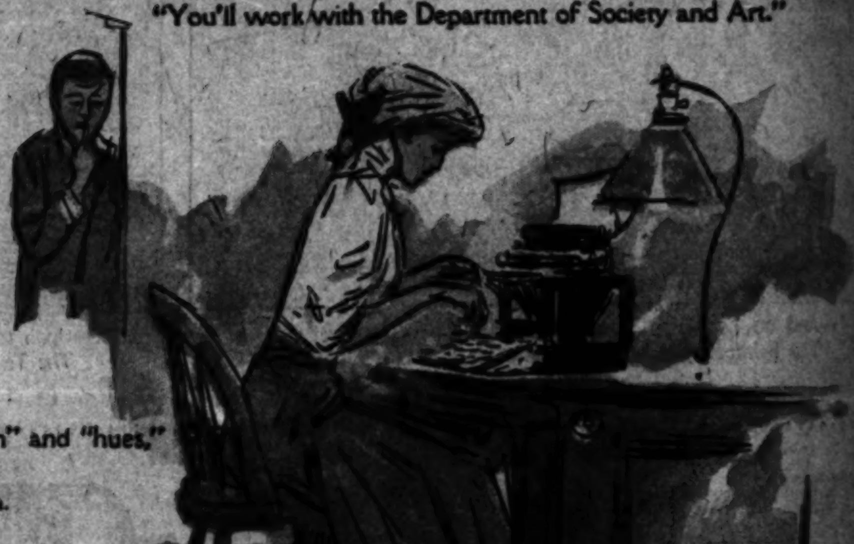
1—It set Miss Ruffles thinking as she passed through Herald Square
And saw the crowds of people who were always standing there
To watch the presses running and to read the latest news.
"I really think," said Fluffy, "There's a job that I won't lose."



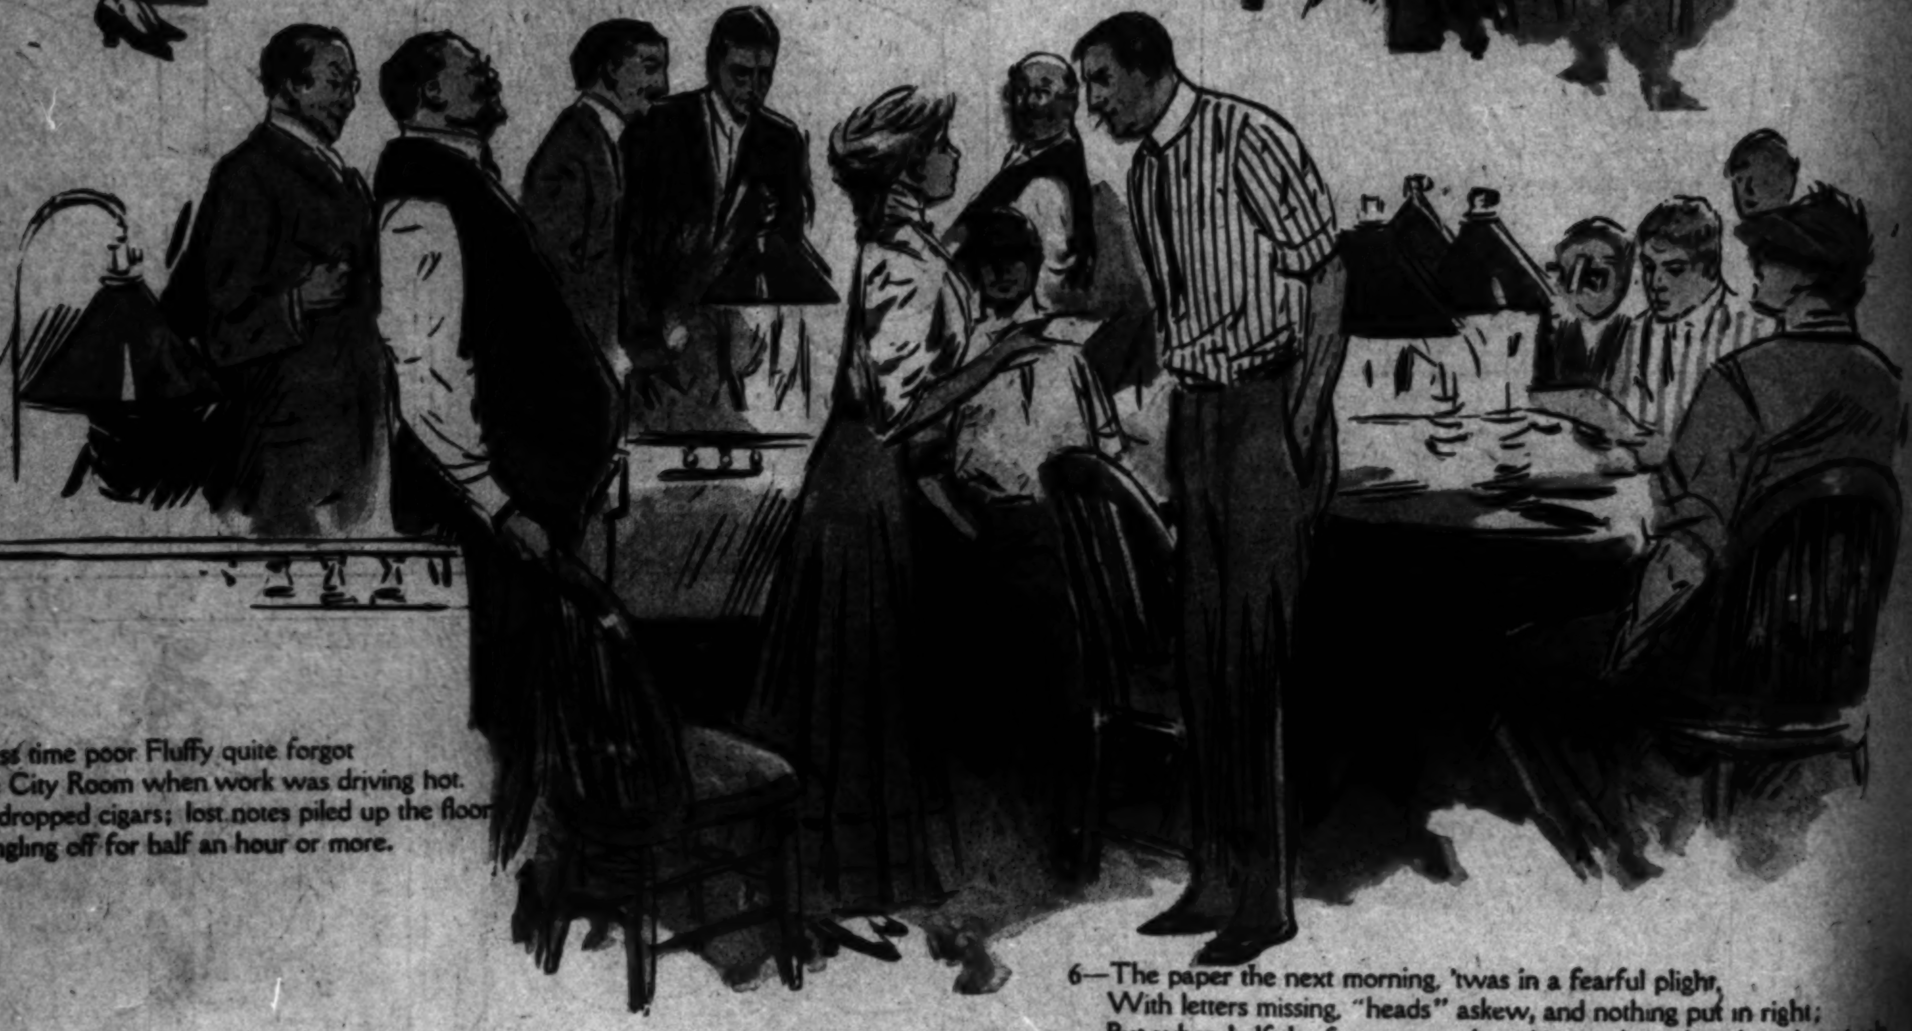
2—A boy in buttons left her with the City Editor.
She really was more frightened than she'd ever been before.
He looked her over coldly, and his voice made Fluffy start—
"You'll work with the Department of Society and Art."



3—Society was out of town, so Fluffy wrote reviews
Of "Gainsboroughs" and "Velasquez," of "genre," "wash" and "hues,"
The typos liked her "copy," it was all so neat and plain,
And even artists owned her tastes were decent in the main.



4—She had pencils red and yellow, with points two inches long,
A desk and chair, a typewriter she picked up for a song.
And in each morning's paper, it made her flush with pride
To find the things she wrote herself in columns long and wide.



5—But one night just at press time poor Fluffy quite forgot
And rustled through the City Room when work was driving hot.
Then twelve reporters dropped cigars; lost notes piled up the floor
And sentences went tangling off for half an hour or more.

6—The paper the next morning, 'twas in a fearful plight,
With letters missing, "heads" askew, and nothing put in right;
But when half the force stopped smoking and got deathly sick and pale
Miss Ruffles had to write at home and send it in by mail.

FEATURES OF GAME.

Stanford, 21; California, 11.

California led at end of first half, 8-5.

Stanford's speedy backs won the game.

Stanford scored five tries, converting three.

California scored three tries, converting one.

Koerner, Owen, Vandervoort and Holman scored the tries for Stanford.

Tuller and Johns scored for California.

Fenton was the individual star.

Holman's 45-yard run was the longest of the day.

Both teams played in whirlwind style.

Both teams were in perfect physical condition, though both used full quota of substitutes.

THOUSANDS WITNESS DESPERATE CONTEST.

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a score of 21 to 11, the faster Stanford football team defeated California's squad for the fourth consecutive year, on Stanford Field, this afternoon, before a crowd of 14,000.

California desperately fought every inch of ground, but the speed of the Stanford backs and Fenton's phenomenal kicking made victory for the blue and gold impossible.

Stanford made five tries and converted three. California made three and converted one. Each side used three subs.

Butler, California fullback, was injured early in the game, and did not play in his usual form. In the second half, after California's try, which brought the score to 12 to 11, Freshman Renouf went in for Butler of California to convert, and if possible tie the score. He failed, and the substitution was costly, as two Stanford men got by him in the back field and scored.

Freshman Brown, who took Cadwalader's place at Stanford fullback, played valiantly and averted two threatened scores. In the second half Taylor substituted Glasscock for Harris in the scrum, and Dyer for Sorenson at three-quarters, while Reynolds took Miller's place among the Stanford forwards, the latter going out with an injured knee. Valle was also sent in at five-eighths near the end of the game, when Mitchell slightly injured his knee in blocking a rush.

STAR PLAYING.

Every man on both teams played excellently, but Fenton, Vandervoort, Holman and Pemberton shone in the Stanford team; while Cerf, Johns, Dwiggin and Stow were the California stars. Both teams were in perfect physical condition, though the Stanford men seemed to be a trifle more aggressive at the finish and forced the play during the latter part of the second half.

The California scrum did not prove as fast or as heavy as had been expected, and the Cardinal forwards were able to heel the ball out of the scrum fully as often as their opponents. In dribbling rushes the blue and gold forwards made larger gains, but the Stanford backs were more accurate in blocking rushes at critical moments.

In line-outs the height of the California men gave them a noticeable advantage, and they secured the ball on a majority of the throw-outs. In the back-field the Cardinals were clearly superior. Both teams passed well, but the Stanford backs were more accurate and much faster and worked together better.

Bad generalship in the California back-field was responsible for at least one of the Stanford scores. In kicking the Stanford men again had a slight lead over the opponents. Punting duels between Butler and Fenton were common, and the clever little half generally made a substantial gain. One of the most clever plays of the day was a backward kick into touch, which "Kenny" made while running at full speed.

Shaeffer and Renouf also did good booting for California, but could not offset the long, accurate punts of Owen, Cadwalader, Brown and Miller. On defense the hard tackling of the Cardinal backs was invaluable.

Time and time again the fierce dribbling rushes of California were broken up by the work of Ganong, Mitchell and Cadwalader. In individual work Fenton was the most valuable on either team and was the largest individual factor in the Cardinal victory. Cadwalader's cool judgment at fullback justified the selection of the coaches, though Freshman Brown did good work in the short time in which he was in the game. Ganong and Mitchell played well together at five, while Vandervoort at center was a revelation even to the Stanford rooters who have been watching him at practice.

Holman and Owen at wing had an unusually large amount of work to do on account of the frequent punting matches, but both showed fine staying qualities. Holman's 45-yard run for a try was the most spectacular event of the day.

In the scrum Koerner, Miller and Crawford were most prominent. On the California side of the field Freshman Dwiggins was the most dangerous man. He is speedy and uses excellent judgment. Johns made good gains on bucks while Cerf at five was a good ground gainer. The California backs lost ground often by poor judgment.

In the scrum Stow was the most aggressive man, though Budelman and Barnicott were fast for big men and blocked many Stanford passes. Scrums were numerous on account of off-side plays and forward passes, mostly caused by over-eagerness on the part of the players.

Referee Jenkensen gave entire satisfaction and was especially careful. His watchfulness saved another score against California when he blew his whistle for an off-side play just before Fenton drop-kicked a beautiful goal from the 30-yard line.

PENALTY KICKS.

Penalty kicks were frequent and one awarded to California threatened to place her in the lead at the middle of the second half, but Renouf failed to kick the goal. The game was full of long runs and spectacular passing rushes.

A peculiar event occurred when Fenton punted over the California goal line and Sorensen, after pursuing Holman clear around the goal posts, secured the ball and kicked to safety.

Stanford's scores were made by Owen, Vandervoort and Holman, while Johns made a try for California. There were a number of minor injuries, but

BALLOONS MAY REPLACE AUTOS.

Air Navigation Feature of Big Palace Show.

Inveterate Motorist Gets Sky-Sailing Fever.

America to Lead World in Aeronautic Feats.

BY ROY BRADLEY WHEELER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—On the top floor of the Grand Central Palace there is a section of the automobile show which is attracting fully as much attention as the automobiles themselves. In reality it is not a section of the automobile show, but a little show in itself. It is the third annual exhibit of the Aëro Club of America. Everything connected in sky piloting is shown there, and while many of the exhibits are almost unintelligible to the average spectator, yet neverthaless th Aëro Club exhibit is crowded every day.

The main reason for this is, of course, interest in the balloons used in the Aëro-Gordon-Bennett contest recently raced at St. Louis. The winner, the German balloon "Pommern," is on exhibition, together with several other silk air cars that took part in the race and gained lesser positions.

The most astonishing feature of the exhibit is not anything shown, but the fact that balloon makers represented there have sold ten balloons since the show opened. These have all been bought by amateurs, who are giving up automobile racing for ballooning—or, perhaps, it would be better to say supplementing the older sport by the newer. A. Leo Stevens has had so many requests for balloon demonstrations that he will be busy from now on until extreme cold weather puts a stop to ballooning for the winter. He will make ascensions from his Pittsfield plant three times a week, as demonstrations to intending purchasers.

AUTO ENTHUSIASTS.

The roster of noted automobile enthusiasts who have been converted to the sport of balloon racing, is headed by the inveterate motorist, Charles J. Glidden. Even Col. John Jacob Astor has expressed himself enthusiastically about ballooning, and intimated yesterday that he would take up the sport himself, "when they get the gas bags to working better."

M. H. Heiman, a wealthy St. Louis amateur, has gone into the sport enthusiastically. Before the show had been opened a couple of days, he ordered a $1500 balloon, capable of carrying three passengers. H. H. Hitchcock, assistant engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, has made up his mind to enter the ranks of the aëronauts, and is negotiating for the purchase of a balloon with large carrying capacity. Mr. Hitchcock is one of the moving spirits of the Aëro Club in Montreal. J. C. White of New York is going aloft from Pittsfield with Mr. Stevens on Saturday, and Mr. Glidden will make an ascent on Monday. At the same time Allan R. Hawley and J. C. McCoy will ascend from Philadelphia.

A group of interested visitors at the Aëro Club show is composed of five young men of the United States Signal Service, who form the nucleus of the United States Balloon Corps. They are learning details of balloon rigging and basket work. With them is Rear-Admiral Colby M. Chester, retired, U.S.N., who is taking a vast amount of interest in ballooning. He is attached to the Equipment Bureau of the United States navy, and after he makes several ascensions with Mr. Stevens, it is possible that he may head the government instruction faculty.

Ballooning is not as expensive as motoring, and for that reason may appeal to a good many persons with sporting blood. Some of the balloon makers at the Aëro Club exhibit are prepared to furnish a good balloon for as low as $900, and the cost of an ascension is not often more than $50—which will not buy a good automobile tire.

FLYING MACHINES.

In addition to balloons there are at the exhibit several "heavier-than-air" machines, the details and workings of which are so complicated that an expert is needed to unravel them. Most of these are shown in models. There is one helicoptere, and two models of bird-flight flying machines, in addition to the aëroplanes.

To the layman, perhaps the most interesting feature of the exhibit is a collection of photographs taken from balloons at various altitudes. There is a series taken of Kingston just after the disaster there, which shows the extent of the destruction much better than any set of photographs taken on the level. Another collection is of famous French towns, which immediately impresses one with the value of the balloon in war time. Every detail of the towns, the principal buildings, the main streets, the connecting alleys and every point that could possibly be of use to an assaulting force is shown with much greater fidelity than any may could possibly present.

One whole wall is covered by this exhibition of photographs, which includes, besides those mentioned, portraits of famous aëronauts, pictures of ascents and descents of the Aëro Club, and pictures of famous European dirigibles. Included in the latter category are some fine pictures of Count Zeppelein's immense sausage-shaped balloon flying over Lake Constance.

According to Mr. Stevens, the United States is on the verge of a balloon furore. Canadians are taking rapidly to ballooning, also, and it is Mr. Stevens's firm opinion that between the United States and Canada, America will lead the world in aëronautics, as it does in almost every other sport.

Motorcycle Club Will Attend Riverside Hill-climb—Many Will Take Part in Races.

Members of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club have planned to attend the yearly automobile and motorcycle hill-climbing contest at Box Springs grade, Riverside, Thanksgiving Day, in which motorcycles will take an important part. The coming contest at Riverside promises to be the most successful ever. Enthusiasm is on tap. Many who were disappointed because of the rain last Thanksgiving date, expect to compete this year. Weather permitting, there is no doubt of a large attendance.

Several members will go out the evening before and some will leave in the early hours of Thanksgiving morning.

Motor bike riders are planning to take such part in the Riverside affair that their presence will be indispensable in future meets. All of the events which are open for gasoline bicycles will be contested by men who have already established records as riders of ability. The bike men are expected to contribute liberally to the enjoyment of the Riverside meet.

The regular pleasure run of the club will be held today. The riders will leave the clubhouse, No. 123 West Thirty-second street, at 9 a.m., and ride to the foot of Mt. Wilson trail, Sierra Madre, where a picnic and luncheon will be enjoyed. This run was postponed from October 28, owing to the weather. All motorists are invited.

The Bombay (India) reliability trials, which will be held in December, will cover 585 miles, and will include hill-climbing tests.

CHIME OF AUTO HORN CLOSES GARDEN SHOW.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a great rush of excitement and noisy celebration the Madison Square Garden automobile show closed tonight at 11 o'clock. The telharmonic horns played "When the Ships Come In," as they have done every night during the past week. Then the band in the gallery played "Home, Sweet Home," and late in the evening "taps" were sounded by the telharmonic instruments, ably assisted by twenty-eight chime automobile horns in the gallery, and with the tooting of the ordinary hand-power "squawkers," the electric buzzers and a multitude of other devices exhibited in the galleries, the immense crowd slowly and reluctantly went out of the building for the last time.

The exhibitors and attendants threw white sheets over their exhibits, and while some went away for a well-earned rest, others took the night train for Philadelphia, where anothed automobile exhibit opened tonight. In the opinion of members of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, all the motorwise critics of New York and the automobile loving public, the Garden show this year has been by far the most important and successful exhibit of the kind ever held in America.

The Garden show last year almost settled, for technical observers, the comparative standing of American and European cars. This year's show has amply satisfied the technically-minded, and has impressed the general public with American equality, if not superiority. The most enthusiastic supporters of the foreign car, after a thorough view of the exhibition, have been compelled to admit the American manufacturer has placed before the American public cars which are in every respect the equal of the European product.

AMERICAN CARS BEST.

In last year's show the major elements of automobile construction were found to be uniformly excellent, and in accord with the tenets of the best automobile practice. This year refinement of detail has been so carefully looked after, and the most intricate points of designing have been worked out to such satisfaction, that mechanical parts of cars leave little to be asked for. In addition to this the progress in body building and body finishing, a progress more marked this year than ever before, has resulted in convincing practically every automobile critic that the day for the American automobile has at last arrivel. This feeling, dimly felt at the beginning of the show, and emphasized by every succeeding day's examination of cars exhibited, has been one of the greatest factors in the success of the eighth national automobile show.

Certainly no previous automobile show has been so whole-heartedly supported by the general public. In spite of occasional bad weather, and the adverse condition of the New York money market, attendance at the show has been steady and extremely large. In the first few days the attendance regularly exceeded that of last year by 10 per cent., and in the last two days by a considerably larger margin. Both last night and tonight the entire building was crowded, not alone in the basement and ground floors, but in the balconies and the galleries.

MANY VISITORS.

In the visitors' gallery, where last year scarcely a score of seats were occupied at a time, for the past two days it has been almost impossible to get a place during the late afternoon or evening. It is well known that very much less paper was put out this year than ever before, and the attendance figures are very gratifying, both to the management and to those interested in the automobile. It is not alone in the pleasure class of automobiles that interest has been displayed. The makers of commercial cars feel, as they never have felt before, that merchants are awakening to the possibility of automobile transits. One of the most important manufacturers in the commercial field stated tonight that he felt the public was just on the eve of a great awakening, and that the interest displayed by business men convinced him that the commercial end of the industry was about to follow the strictly pleasure end of it into an assured status.

POOR MAN'S AUTO.

For the first time motorcycles have been exhibited at a national automobile show, and among the makers of the poor man's automobile there reigns the same feeling that there does among the automobile makers. Interest in the two-wheeled car, and appreciation of its constructional points, has been so manifested by the general public that motorcycle makers are seriously considering an independent show next year. Not only have the crowds been exceptionally large, but they have been of exceptional character.

Society has decreed that it is the proper thing to be motor wise, and with the general interest displayed all over the country in the automobile, the result has been that the people who thronged the Garden during the past week have been surprisingly well informed on the mechanics of the automobile. In fact, so marked has been this manifestation of interest that some critics not intimately connected with the automobile "gang" have seriously asked if New York were not automobile mad.

AN ADVANTAGE.

The experiment of holding the annual exhibition much earlier than usual has proved to be an advantage to all concerned. The manufacturers have had an opportunity to gauge the public demand much earlier in the season, with the result that in most cases factories will go to work with an absolute knowledge of how many cars will be required and of what models. Sales managers all say that the early show has aroused a great interest in town cars for winter use without lessening the interest in touring cars.

The individual motorist is, of course, greatly pleased at being able to see 1908 productions so early, and to have such an ample opportunity for selecting his car before the touring season arrives. It is probable that the early date will continue next year. While buying at the Garden show has not been much better than last year, advance wholesale orders have been extremely satisfactory, and all of the established makers are pleased with the big aspect of the show.

ELFCTRICS WIN.

By far the greater number of orders at retail have been placed for limousine, landaulet and coupé cars, and naturally the makers of electric vehicles have profited greatly by this tendency; successful and so thoroughly American in character has been the present automobile show that some seriously prophesy that it will never be surpassed. It has been a reliable manifestation of the growth of the American industry, and in the character of the attendance that it drew, it marks emphatically the change of the automobile industry from the position of a fad and innovation to the place of a factor in modern social life, a factor which cannot longer be denied the importance which is its due.

SNAG PROOF.

SPRING WHEEL AIRLESS TIRE.

LOS ANGELES MAN PERFECTS NOVEL MODEL.

Much Is Claimed for This Latest Invention Which Modeler Expects Will Revolutionize the Motor Trade. Cost Is Less and Wear and Tear Is Not So Great.

An automobile wheel that will be proof against nails, glass and snags of all kinds, has been the dream of many a motorist; a wheel whose tires need not be replaced after every hard drive; a wheel that will cost only half as much as that now in use. Many efforts to make such a wheel have failed. Another try at the knotty problem has been made by a Los Angeles man.

The pneumatic tire plays no part in this latest invention. The outer rim is fitted with a casing of hard rubber, which is expected to withstand the wear and tear of the roads. The wheel has not been thoroughly tested. It is an unknown quantity. Its inventor is confident that it will mean much in the future of the automobile trade. A severe test would be interesting. A car could be equipped with the wheels at a cost of about $400. Then it is claimed they would run for years without repairs.

John M. Shiner of Los Angeles, who has had considerable experience in the automobile business, has perfected a model of a spring cushion automobile wheel, which he believes will be of great benefit to auto men, and be a saving of money and material. The springs in the wheel are so arranged that they offer an efficient resilient action upon the wheels.

The springs are placed in the wheel with an initial pressure outwardly against the outer rim. Those on the top of the wheel are allowed to expand, while the ones on either side, it is claimed, will simply slide over the inner periphery of the outer rim. The free ends of the springs are provided with slots through which bolts, secured to the outer rim, project.

This hub is made to hold two sets of spokes. Each of these sets is provided with a guide flange, which is somewhat similar to an angle iron of unequal legs in cross section. A spacing ring between the flanges and bolts passes through the flanges and inner rim and projects outwardly to a point alongside the outer rim.

The guide flanges do not come into positive contact with the outer rim, allowing it to move freely between them to a motion in one plane. This construction prevents any wobbling motion on the part of the outside rim, and therefore provides that the driving of the rim shall be more uniform and efficient.

Because of the peculiar mounting of the springs the inventor claims the wheel is perfectly resilient, and that the outer, or driving rim, is constrained to move in a regular path so that the driving of a vehicle by the wheel is possible. The different parts of the wheel may be constructed of wood or metal by slightly altering the relative dimensions of the different parts.

Enthusiastic over the record-breaking twenty-four-hour contest on the State Fair Park circuar track, Milwaukee automobilists are demanding more racing contests.

The new car which Fire Chief Baxter of Philadelphia is using to respond to alarms is a 30-horse-power machine capable of a speed of fifty miles an hour.

One person is killed every fifteen hours of the day by trolley cars in New York City, according to figures compiled by Coroner Harburger, making the number killed by automobiles small by contrast.

A scheme to sell gasoline to motorists on the nickel-in-the-slot plan is under consideration in Cleveland, the promoter of the scheme offering to rent the voting booths of the city to use as automatic supply stations.

From fifty to seventy-five cars are now expecetd to participate in the reliability contest to be run by the Chicago Motor Club for three days preceding the opening of the Chicago show, November 30.

The Appellate division of the New York Supreme Court has unanimously decided that the New York City ordinance fining motorists $10 for speeding is illegal and not conforming with the State law in that the city has not erected signs at every street or roadway affected by the ordinance.

Plans already are under way for next year's long-distance motor-boat race, from New York to Bermuda. It will be limited to boats of seventy feet or under, and will start from New York June 6, the first boat to arrive being the winner, time allowance being eliminated.

The speed laws in nearly all European countries are less stringent than in the United States, the ability of the operator to handle his car being taken into consideration.

A Swiss court has acquitted of manslaughter Ernest Stahl, chauffeur for Heinrich Conried, the New York impresario, who ran down and killed a deaf peasant in August.

A characteristic feature of automobile development during the past few years has been that the opening of the season, or the time at which particulars of new models are made public, has advanced slightly each year.

In sharp contrast to the salaries paid chauffeurs in the United States, the French government is offering but 50 cents a day to drivers of motor trucks to be used during the next army maneuvers.

According to the head of Philadelphia's police, 19,300 cars out of the 20,000 motorists who operate cars in that city have neglected to take out city licenses this year. Prosecution is threatened the delinquents.

The sixth annual Boston show, which will be held as usual in March, will occupy the entire Mechanics' building, thus extending the floor space to 105,000 square feet.

To meet the demand for automobile fuel, the Standard Oil Company recently brought 6900 tons of benzine from Sumatra to San Francisco in a tank steamer. It was the first time such a dangerous cargo ever had been carried in bulk.

Although the ordinary insurance companies are not permitted to insure automobiles against loss by fire by the Massachusetts laws, the marine companies may do so.

The most serious invasion yet of the French automobile field is that of an American manufacturer, who has placed on sale at Paris a light, four-cylinder car selling for $600.

Searchlight cars, carrying two men and a powerful lamp, have been added to the Austrian army equipment, and experiments are under way with a transport car provided with two motors, one of which may be used if the other be disabled.

Charles Blake, a farmer, living twenty-five miles from Waterbury, Ct., who uses a large touring car to take his produce to market, estimates he saves ten days' time in a year as compared with a horse and wagon, averaging one trip a week.

The Connecticut Highway Commission has received requests from 134 towns asking for the State appropriation for road improvement.

Paris has just put into service some new electric taximeter cabs, which are less noisy than the old ones, and which are expected to drive the horse-drawn cabs out of business, as their rates of fare are the same as for the slower vehicles.

Inasmuch as presidents of the American Automobile Association heretofore have been bankers, brokers and lawyers it is now proposed that the next executive be a business man.

Following a decision by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania that road supervisors are punishable for neglecting or refusing to repair highways, a grand jury recently found indictments against twenty-four alleged delinquent officials.

Pittsburgh owners of six-cylinder cars have formed the Six-Cylinder Club, to which only persons possessing automobiles of that class will be admitted. The initiation fee is to be $6, and but six new members will be received at a time.

Glasgow's powerful new motor fire engine is driven by a fifty-horse power motor, capable of propelling it at a speed of thirty miles an hour. Upon arriving at the fire the power can at once be transferred from the car to the pump, which will deliver 450 gallons a minute.

If the motor stops firing suddenly the trouble will most likely be found in either the sparking system or the valve mechanism. Sometimes a small drop of water will get on the vibrator points and it should be seen to that they are kept clean.

A feature of the decorations of the Chicago show, which will be held November 30 to December 7, will be 142 oil paintings of motoring subjects, covering 8704 square feet of canvas.

One of the new foreign cars this year has its carbureter placed above the tops of the cylinders. Another for several years has carried it on a level with the inlet valves. Most designers, however, place it well down to get a good flow from the fuel tank.

BAY CITY AUTO SHOW WILL ATTRACT MANY.

INTEREST in the San Francisco Automobile Show grows apace. Los Angeles dealers are watching the preparations for the big exhibit, which is to be housed in the Coliseum the second week of December. Many from this city will attend. N. R. Cooper, who will manage the show, was formerly a well-known auto man of Los Angeles. He has made good in the Bay City and is meeting with a large measure of success this year.

The Automobile Dealers' Association, under whose auspices the exhibit will be held, is sparing no expense to make the affair a signal success. Hundreds of cars will be shown, and all the latest 1908 models will be on display. Mostly American cars will be seen. The possibilities for an elaborate show are the best ever. Well-known automobile men from all over the country will be present.

The Coliseum building is situated opposite the main entrance to Golden Gate Park. It is roomy and pleasant. Space has been reserved already for enough cars to make a most interesting exhibit, and requests are constantly coming to the management for more space.

A feature of the show will be demonstrations daily by cars on exhibition. Near the Coliseum is one of the steepest hills in San Francisco. Machines will be taken to the foot of this incline and tested for the benefit of possible purchasers. The smooth roads of Golden Gate Park are accessible for speeding purposes.

The showing of six-cylinder cars at the Bay City auto exhibit promises to rival the big New York shows. The demand for space for these big cars is such that the showing of extra cylinder models promises to be the greatest ever.

Special honors will be paid to the California Automobile Club in the decorations, which are to be green and yellow. These are the official colors of the club, and will consist largely of potted plants and green shrubbery. Because of objections from the fire department, autumn leaves probably will not be used in the decorations.

Parties of automobilists from Los Angeles will visit the northern show. Many who are planning to visit San Francisco are delaying the trip until show week. This will mean a large delegation of Angeleños in the show city next month.

CARMINE GLOW ON NEW MODEL.

HANDSOME NINETEEN-EIGHT TOURING CAR ARRIVES.

Gasoline Buggy Is Ideal Women's Machine—Can Be Managed Easily and Is Showy—Fuel-Saving Precautions and Other Features Add to Attractiveness.

One of the handsomest of the 1908 Models has just arrived in Los Angeles, the Stoddard-Dayton "8-F" four-cylinder touring car. Finished in bright carmine, the auto is showy and attractive. The machine was seen on the streets for the first time yesterday, and Mrs. Harry Olive was photographed at the wheel. With her is Miss Ruth Elliott, at the side of the wheel, and immediately behind, on the center seats, is Mrs. Mary Bibby and Miss F. Root. On the rear seat is Miss Flossie Fairchild, Miss M. Rose and Mrs. C. W. Kelly. All are enthusiastic autoists.

The party enjoyed a jaunt about the city's streets. The Stoddard-Dayton is an ideal touring car, and while it shows to greatest advantage on the downtown tours, is capable of excellent road work. Its smooth, almost noiseless running, commends it to many who like a silent car. Harry Olive, of the Stoddard-Dayton local agency, expects a consignment of the cars the first of this week. He will use the carmine model as a demonstrator.

An advantage which is of special interest to the women drivers is the ease with which the big car can be handled. Most of the objections urged by women drivers against the gasoline buggy have been eliminated by the makers of this stylish model.

The machine is fitted with an adjustable top which can be easily run back. With the hood up the car has a somewhat heavier appearance than when the top is rolled back. It is capable of a high speed, and is rated at from forty to forty-five horse-power.

As a fuel-saving precaution the greater per cent. of the heat caused by the explosion is used as propelling power. The explosion occurs directly over the piston, and the power is transmitted straight to it. The cylinders are cast in pairs.

BUILD OF CAR.

The valves are 2¼ inches, actuated by one double-acting cam. The crank is drop-forged, of nickel steel. The circulation is maintained by a centrifugal pump.

In the new model splash lubrication is entirely done away with. A gear pump makes lubrication of all bearings positive. Pipes from this pump lead to the different bearings and insure a constant stream of oil flowing to them.

All brakes are on the rear wheels, internal and external on each. The internal brake shoe is an expanding stel rinf. This brake is controlled by a foot lever.

The frame is made of pressed steel, whipped into shape in the Stoddard-Dayton factories. Much care has been taken to have this frame of the finest forged steel, so as to make the car as strong as possible. These frames are also assembled in the Stoddard-Dayton factory. Open hearth steel has been used in the forgings.

The car has been fitted with parts that are interchangeable. This fact will appeal to the automobile owner, who can insure himself against serious road troubles. The driver can repair a break without being under the necessity of having the car hauled back to the nearest repair shop.

The touring car owner who has a machine fitted with interchangeable parts can enjoy a long ride and be comforted by the knowledge that if anything goes wrong he can repair the damage with parts which he cannot make a mistake in adjusting. Now that so many autoists who purchase cars are in the habit of studying the mechanism of the automobile this interchangeability of the 1908 model will have special significance.

The Stoddard-Dayton factory expects to turn out 2000 cars next year. In 1905 the factory made 125 cars. This increase in capacity gives an idea of the increase of business which has come to the concern in such a comparatively short space of time.

GLENDALE WINS GAME.

Has to Play Off Tie Score With Alhambra in Great Contest in County League.

GLENDALE, Nov. 9.—The basketball fives of Glendale High defeated the Alhambra team in a fast game by the score of 32 to 30, at Glendale, yesterday afternoon. The contest was played on the latter's court. The score at the call of time was a tie. Play was resumed until one side should score.

Sprinkle, a forward of the home five, tossed the basket that finished the game. A large and enthusiastic gathering witnessed the contest. Williams of Alhambra played in good style. His work received the majority of applause. The result of the first half was a tie, at 12 points. The line-up:

Baskets—Sprinkle 1, Moran 9, Goodsell 4.

Tennis at Glendale.

GLENDALE, Nov. 9.—The tennis players representing the Glendale and Whittier High Schools played a series of games on the former's court yesterday. McPeak was beaten by Buckmaster in the first event, by the score of 6-4, 6-3.

In the second, Walton of Glendale captured the event from Thomas, 6-4, 1-6, 6-2. In the doubles, McPeak and Walton won from Thomas and Buckmaster, 6-4, 6-2.

Lacrosse Practice.

The Los Angeles lacrosse team will practice this afternoon at Fiesta Park. Much interest is being taken in the revival of the sport. Those who play the game, and others who desire to learn, are welcome to play with the men who are practicing regularly.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

J. D Mercereau has purchased from Ralph C. Hamlin the first 1908 Franklin. The car is a handsome four-cylinder tourer, and was delivered to Mr. Mercereau the past week. F. G. Calkins also purchased a Franklin touring car.

Ben Myers has purchased a Pierce Great Arrow from Bush & Shields. The car will be delivered this week.

Earl Anthony of the Western Motor Car Company is in San Francisco. He witnessed the Berkeley-Stanford football game yesterday at Palo Alto.

Automobile row has been partially deserted during the past two weeks. Visitors to the big shows are leaving New York for Los Angeles. Many will arrive the latter part of the week.

The Success Auto Company has received their first consignment of 1908 locomobiles. The cars are finished in bright red, and are handsome in design.

John C. Cline has purchased a Packard touring car. J. M. Armstrong has bought a Buick, and a Buick touring car was also sold the past week to Charles Kessler. The above sales were made by the Western Motor Car Company.

John W. Catron and family of Butte, Mont., have arrived in Los Angeles. Mr. Catron brought with him his handsome White Pullman. He will spend the winter with his family in Southern California.

The ban has at last been lifted on motor cars in Turkey. Although good roads are non-existent in that country, its wealthy inhabitants delight in novelties and are expected to purchase machines. The tires will have to be made solid, however, on account of the inequalities of the road surfaces.

Charles Fuller Gates, who was injured Sunday in an automobile accident on the Box Springs grade at Riverside, is still at the California Hospital suffering from his injuries. He is convalescent, but may be confined to his bed for several weeks. His leg was crushed when a Ford car turned turtle on the grade, pinning him beneath the wreckage.

For Better Roads.

"Take the loose stones out of your roads and erect suitable signposts or we will prosecute you individually," was the warning sent to road supervisors, Township Commissioners and Borough Councilmen of Luzerne county, Pa., by the Wilkesbarre Automobile Club.

Friction-Driven Car.

After several years of scoffing at friction transmission as an Americanism in the way of automobile design, England is in a fair way to have a friction driven car, the transmission of which in many respects is a close counterpart of one which has been in use in this country several years.

Money Prizes.

One of the features of the projected big road race for non-racing cars, both American and foreign, in New York State next spring, will be the awarding of money prizes to drivers of American cars who never have competed in European races.

To Find Leaks.

Leaky valves can readily be found by trying the compression with the inlet and exhaust pipes detached. If the inlet pipe leaks the motor will start hard and will require carbureter priming, and when the throttle is opened the engine will choke and emit black smoke from the muffler.

Take Cars Along.

More Americans took their cars abroad with them this year than ever before, according to the managers of London garages. Two or three years ago the man who did so was an exception. Now it is the other way around. The majority of those who do so also take their chauffeurs.

Auto Cowpuncher.

When two maddened Texas steers broke away from a Cleveland stockyard and defied the efforts of the police to recapture them, employés of the stockyard gave chase in automobiles and shot the animals with rifles as they were about to charge a crowd of 250 school children.

Medicos Immune.

The Police Commissioners of Newark, N. J., are considering requesting physicians who own cars to display upon them some conspicuous mark so that they will not be delayed by the police when answering calls. The doctors are expected to object on the ground that by so doing they would violate professional ethics.

Direct Drive.

A forty-horse-power car has been transformed by an ingenious Paris inventor in such a way that direct drive is secured on all four speeds by a method so simple and effective that the problem of a really first-class transmission is well on the way toward being perfected.

Mme. Tetrazzini, who, at the Royal Opera in London last week, won the title of "the new Patti," has accepted an offer from Oscar Hammerstein to sing in New York. Mme. Tetrazzini has sung in San Francisco, but never in New York.

HERE ARE A FEW REASONS WHY, IF YOU DO NOT BUY A REO IN PREFERENCE TO ANY OTHER CAR, YOU WILL EVERLASTINGLY REGRET YOUR MISTAKE:

1. One-twelfth the entire number of automobiles registered in California are REOS. As there are more than 150 makes of cars sold in California in competition with REO, you will observe that the latter is getting its full share of the trade. Why?

2. I carry a bigger line of Reo automobiles and parts for the same than any other automobile dealer in the world, and I have sold more cars in Southern California than any other two dealers combined.

3. Every car I sell is guaranteed—not by the factory, but by me personally—for one year. This ought to establish my confidence in the car.

4. No intelligent man will doubt my word when I tell him that REO has all the power and speed that any reasonable man can require.

5. REO contains the best materials, piece for piece, and is the best built car of its class sold in the world. I will prove this to the absolute satisfaction of any one.

6. The price of REO cars is within the reach of any buyer who has the right to own an automobile; and they will run, month by month, mileage considered, with less expense than any other car in the market.

STANFORD VICTORIOUS.

no one was seriously hurt throughout either of the long fifty-minute halves.

The style of play of the two teams was radically different, as the Stanford men relied on their fast passing rushes and Fenton's kicking for their gains and tried to get the ball out of the pack as soon as possible, while California placed her confidence in her forward division, and attempted to keep the ball on the ground, making her advances by dribbling rushes or smothering the ball in the scrum.

On this account, it is hard to judge which of the two teams played the better game of real Rugby, but the opinion of the expert players who witnessed the contest seemed to be that Stanford had the better team and played a better game and won by phenomenal speed, while California showed a great tendency to hang on to the ball and buck the line, after the style of the American game.

PERFECT WEATHER.

The day was perfect for football, and the green turf of the Stanford field, backed by the red horseshoe bleachers, seemed as an emerald set in rubies. The cardinal jerseys and white Rugby knickers of Stanford and the blue, gold and white suits of California, combined with the green of the turf, made the gridiron a scene of beauty.

Stanford occupied the north stand in the middle of which sat 500 rooters wearing red hats and waving Cardinal megaphones. Opposite them sat the 800 California men, who wore blue and gold hats and sweater-vests of the same colors. On each side of the rooters were hundreds of white-gowned co-eds, fluttering countless banners.

The stunts were not so numerous as in other games, but the feature acts were better. As Butler kicked off a storm of red confetti and toy balloons rose from the Stanford rooters, and as it settled it was seen that the letters L.S.J.U. diagonally across the stand had been formed by men wearing white capes and hats.

Meanwhile the California rooters had removed their coats, and were ranged in blue and gold lines three rows deep clear to the top of the bleachers. The effect was secured by the use of their colored sweater-vests. The usual balloons and pigeons were released. Both rooting sections introduced several new songs and yells. After the game the joy-mad Stanford students dedicated the new turf field in a monster serpentine.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF CARDINAL PLAYERS.

W. Koerner, '08, won his 'varsity emblem as end on the 1906 team. He played in the front rank of the scrum last year, and will occupy the same position this year. He has every quality for a good captain, is a hard fighter, understands the game, is cool in action and enjoyed the confidence of his men.

L. R. Minturn, '09, played center forward in the 'varsity last year, and is a strong, aggressive player; his weight made him especially valuable on the Cardinal scrum.

D. P. Crawford, '09, was the famous freshman tackle in the 1905 team, and has proven a clever Rugby player. He is an especially good tackler, and invaluable in defensive play.

J. R. Pemberton, '10, played on the Rugby team last year, and also was on the winning crew. He is heavy and fast and a hard fighter, his worst defect being a tendency to fumble.

C. A. Thorpe, '10, played on both the freshman and 'varsity teams last year. He is fast for his weight, and dribbles the ball better than any other forward, with the possible exception of Pemberton.

J. O. Miller, '08, is the fastest and most tireless of the Stanford scrum. He is always after the ball, and is a reliable kicker and a very heady player.

H. Ryner, '07, is the lightest man in the Stanford scrum, but he offsets this deficiency by hard fighting qualities, and ability to heel the ball out of the scrum.

M. M. Mitchell played five-eighths on his freshman team last year. He is cool under fire, and a good ground gainer on a dribbling rush.

C. F. Ganong, his team mate last year, is another hard fighter, though he is not so fast as Mitchell.

B. Mayers plays his position well, is continually after the ball, and is a good man to break up opposing rushes.

H. L. Fenton is the best all round player on the team. He played full on last year's 'varsity, and occupied the same position part of this season. He is fast and heady, an accurate kicker, hard tackler and a good ground gainer. He is captain of the 'varsity baseball team, and holds the punting trophy offered by the Quadrangle Club.

C. C. Owen was half on the team last year. He is fast and a good all-around man, having been thoroughly tried out at half, wing and five-eighths. His worst fault is a tendency to overrun on a pass.

J. R. Holman, '09, is the fastest man in the team. He played wing on the 'varsity last year; is also a sprint man.

T. Vandervoort played end at the old game in 1905. He is accurate in passing rushes and a good defensive man. He also is a track man, running the sprints and taking a place in the broad jump last year.

T. R. Cadwalader is another all around man. He can play full, wing or five-eighths. A severe injury to his shoulder kept him off the field much of the time, or his position on the team would have been certain the season through.

N. E. Reed was the star of the Freshman team this year. He is about as fast as Holman and a hard fighter. An injured knee kept him out of the game a great deal.

F. C. Brown was fullback on the Freshman team this year. He is a good kicker and fairly accurate, but has once or twice gone to pieces at critical times.

A. B. Cook was substitute wing on the 'Varsity last year. He is the hardest fighting man on the squad and is invaluable in defense.

D. G. Heinley, who plays half, had a tendency to fumble, owing to nervousness. Otherwise he was an earnest player.

S. M. Vail is a fast man, but injuries have kept him from getting much practice.

C. C. Terrill, '09, is fast and plays hard, but caused a good many fouls by raising his feet too quick in the scrum.

S. Reynolds, '10, played forward on his Freshman team last year, and is a dangerous man in a scattered field.

C. Pemberton played wing forward on the Freshman team last year. He understands the game well, but lacks accuracy.

Castaways Jubilant.

There is considerable jubilation among the members of the Castaways team over Stanford's victory. Manager Knupp of Stanford promised, a couple of weeks ago, that if Stanford won the big game, and with it the privilege of going North to play Vancouver, that they would take the Castaways to San Francisco for some practice games. This was conditional on the gate receipts being sufficient to make the guarantee for traveling expenses comfortable for the university. Dispatches state that there was a large attendance, so it seems that all obstacles are withdrawn from the Castaways' northern trip. All the local players are very anxious to have another try at Stanford, and they feel confident that they can reverse the last decision and defeat the 'varsity players. Should they go North, they will doubtless have games with Berkeley and the Barbarians.

SAN BERDOO WINS.

RIVERSIDE WEAKENS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the first league game of the Citrus Belt League played here today, San Bernardino defeated the local High School team by the score of 11 to 8.

At the end of the first half it looked to those on the side lines like Riverside would have a walkover, as they finished strong, the score being 8 to 0 in their favor, but when the second half started things changed, and the Gate City lads put up the most remarkable game ever played on a local field.

San Bernardino kicked off and for over half the time the ball remained in Riverside territory. After several dribbles, the local team worked the ball over for the first try. MacDonald kicked an easy goal.

During the last few moments of play Riverside again scored, but failed to kick goal, and the half ended 8 to 0 in Riverside's favor.

The second half started off with a rush, the ball going up and down the field on several occasions, when it looked like either side might score. During the last fifteen minutes of play is when the San Bernardino lads started things, and with some fine scrum work and fast passing the ball was run to Riverside's 25-yard line, when Easton, wing three-quarters on the visiting team, dribbed the ball over for a try. Pore kicked a difficult goal.

The next try was made by Atwood, and the third by Miller, both three-quarters.

Although Riverside played much better team work and were superior in passing, the San Bernardino boys were sure on their tackles and were hard men to stop on a run.

The scrums of the two teams played fine works and were very evenly matched, both in weight and in the heeling out from the scrum.

MacDonald, Warren and Dole of the local team played the best game for the Riverside team, while Miller, Forker, Easton and Atwood were the stars of the visiting team.

There were many bad mixes during the contest, but no one was injured, which is a decided change from the old game.

Edwards of the Castaways acted as referee. Next Saturday Riverside will meet the Castaways on the local field, and San Bernardino and Pomona will meet at San Bernardino for the final game for the championship of the league.

CALIFORNIA STARS WHO HELD STANFORD TO CLOSE SCORE YESTERDAY.

STORY OF BATTLE.

CALIFORNIA'S FIGHT AGAINST STANFORD.

CALIFORNIA won the toss and Butler kicked off. Play centered around the center line with frequent scrums on account of over-anxiety of the players. The play was then forced into California territory. A rush by Dwiggins was stopped by Mitchell. Miller gained twenty yards. The ball was forced back to Stanford's 40-yard line.

After a punting match between Fenton and Shaeffer, Cadwalader was forced to a touchback.

After dropout Stanford forced back the Californians with passing rush by Fenton, Mitchell and Ganong. Fenton converted. Score, Stanford, 5; California, 0.

California then rushed play and kept the ball close to Stanford goal. Butler tried for a drop kick, but failed. Stanford dribbled into California territory, and the rush was stopped by Butler on the five-yard line.

On a passing rush California worked back to center where Cadwalader blocked a dribbling rush. California was awarded a free kick. Vandervoort, Ganong, and Holman passed back to California's 10-yard line. California was given a free kick. Vandervoort ran it in to center.

On a free kick, Butler found touch at the 15-yard line. Johns bucked through on the throw-out, Tuller scoring a try which was not converted. Score, Stanford, 5; California, 3.

California rushed to Stanford's 20-yard line. Barnicott secured from Loose, passing to Johns, who scored. Butler converted. Score, California, 8; Stanford, 5.

The half ended with the ball on California's 25-yard line.

SECOND HALF.

Fenton kicked off. Butler returned to the 30-yard line. A series of line-outs followed. After a fierce punting battle Holman secured from loose, and gained 45 yards before grassed by Butler. Sorenson kicked out to center, where Holman intercepted a pass from Schaeffer, and ran 45 yards for a try. Fenton converted. Score, Stanford, 10; California, 8.

California rushed, and a try was averted by Brown. Cerf and Dyer gained 20 yards. Crawford punted, and Stanford dribbled to the 5-yard line. Koerner scored a try, but Budelman blocked Fenton's kick. Score, 13 to 8.

California dribbled to the 5-yard line. Cerf gained two yards. Fenton punted out of danger. Butler secured from a punt and a passed to Johns, who scored. Renouf failed to convert. Score, Stanford, 13; California, 11.

California was given a penalty kick, but Renouf failed. Fenton's kicking averted another try. Mitchell secured from loose in the center of the field, passing to Ganong, who made 25 yards before passing to Vandervoort, who scored. Fenton converted. Score, Stanford, 18; California, 11.

Stanford then played California off her feet. Budelman gained on a good kick, but a passing rush by Vandervoort and Owen brought the ball back, Owen scoring the try. Fenton missed the goal. Score, Stanford, 21; California, 11.

The play was then fast and hard, but California was kept on the defensive. Time was called with ball in the center of the field.

SAINTS WINNERS.

DEFEAT BEACH CADETS.

The second St. Vincent's football eleven defeated the California Military Academy by the score of 28 to 0, yesterday afternoon at Fiesta Park. Weight and too much experience tells the story of the game. The linemen of the Saints broke through their lighter opponents with ease, and the backfield interference was too heavy and fast for the light ends of the academy eleven.

Bordie, right halfback, played the best ball for the Military School. On several occasions he made the distance by end runs. The play during the first half was fairly fast and very ragged in spots. During the second period both elevens played a better article of ball, the Saints scoring but once.

St. Vincent's held on the first two downs and blocked a kick. Two bucks were sufficient to register the first score. Beatson failed at goal. Five plays carried the oval the length of the field for a second touchdown. A forward pass resulted in a third. Beatson bucked for the fourth as the whistle blew.

In the first three minutes of play in the second half Gray ran through a scattered field for forty yards, and the final touchdown. Beatson was the only player to leave the field with an injury. A badly sprained ankle retired him from the game early in the second half. The line-up:

Chritchly	R.T.L.	Whycoff

Saints Beat St. Joe.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] St. Vincent's College defeated St. Joseph's College of Indiana, 63 to 0, in two short halves, here today. St. Joseph's College was unable to make first down against St. Vincent's line once and resorted to the forward pass without avail. Tonight critics are comparing the St. Vincent's team with teams in the big nine.

GAME AT THROOP.

INDULGE IN FIGHT.

The Throop Polytechnic School football team yesterday played a game with the alumni and the second team on the Throop's grounds. In the first half the 'varsity squad met the second eleven, and defeated them by a score of 12 to 0. The second team played a good game and held the 'varsity eleven for downs several times.

The first team showed a considerable improvement since its last game, and succeeded in playing the forward pass to good advantage.

In the second half the first team played the alumni. The alumni defeated it, 6 to 0. There were several of the old football stars in the alumni line-up, and they had little trouble in making their yards.

Near the last of the game a fight started, which looked for a while as if the entire team would join. Brown of the alumni team was playing end, and was always interfering with the referee's decision. Tyler, who was acting as referee, told Brown that he would have to stop, or be put out of the game. The two soon came to blows, but the timely interference of the other officials saved them from any injury.

The Throop team was scheduled to play the Santa Ana eleven, but the latter team canceled its date, and will meet the Crown Hill boys later in the season.

Downey Team Wins.

The Azusa High School basketball team defeated the Downey High School by a score of 22 to 19 on the Citrus Union grounds yesterday.

HOLLYWOOD WINS.

SANTA ANA PLAYS LOOSELY.

Santa Ana High defeated the Hollywood eleven by a score of 16 to 12, yesterday afternoon, on the Hollywood gridiron.

The game was one of the most interesting ever played on the Hollywood grounds, and until time was up both teams were hopeful of victory. Santa Ana made the first touchdown, but was soon followed by one for Hollywood. Before the first half ended the foothill lads scored another touchdown, making the score 12 to 6. Early in the second half the visitors made their second touchdown, which tied the score. It was not until near the end of the second half that Santa Ana made its final four points by a place kick.

Santa Ana's punting was good, and Hollywood made most of its gains by Taylor's quarterback runs and "fake" punts. The star play was made by Taylor, when he scored a touchdown, after a run of 70 yards. H. Gower also made a touchdown by a run of 50 yards. Slaughter's, Carlock's and Brower's tackling was excellent. Whitney, Pumphrey and Vanderlip were the best players for Santa Ana.

In the second half, some of Referee Noble's decisions were criticised by Hollywood. Once he refused to penalize Santa Ana for hurdling when Umpire Sellen wished to inflict the penalty. Tedford, Santa Ana's fullback, was disqualified in the latter part of the second half for kicking at Knowles, when he tackled a Santa Ana player. Santa Ana played very loosely during the first half, and will have to improve if they hope to make a showing against Los Angeles High next Saturday.

The teams lined up as follows:

Santa Ana.		Hollywood.
Adams	R.E.L.	H. Gower
Eaton	R.T.L.	Carlock

Thompson-street School Wins.

Thompson-street grammar school defeated Cambria-street school's football team, by a score of 11 to 5 yesterday. The teams were very evenly matched, and the one feature of the game was a ninety-yard run to a touchdown by Howard, right tackle of the Thompson-street eleven. The field was crowded with the noisy supporters of both schools, who interfered with the play on various occasions. The schools faced each other as follows:

Thompson.		Cambria.

STAR WHO SHINES.

POLY'S "MONK" PIERCE BEST COAST FULLBACK.

"Monk" Pierce of Polytechnic, considered one of the best Rugby fullbacks in America.

[illegible]

Smith is another of this type and has shown what may be done by a slow man when he follows up conscientiously, as he has scored twice this season, a rare thing for a forward to do. The rest of the forwards are strong and fast enough for their positions.

The Polytechnic team is made up of the right kind of players in the right proportion. Some fast and brilliant men to do the scoring and the balance strong and steady players who are always there when they are wanted, which, after all, is the sum and substance of good Rugby football.

RUGBY.

REDLANDS HAS GREAT FIFTEEN.

OVERWHELMS POMONA BY BIG SCORE ON WET FIELD.

Visitors Discouraged and Play Poor Game, but Picks Up in Second Half and Makes Desperate Stand—Hentschke Kicks Fine Goals from Difficult Angles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Redlands High School 22 (two goals and four tries;) Pomona High School, 0.

In a very poor game of Rugby played just after a drenching shower and in several inches of water, Redlands outdribbled the slippery ball and defeated Pomona by a decisive score. The leather was handled only once or twice during the entire game, and as the home forwards were the cleverer with their feet, their line was never really in danger, and they succeeded in passing the visitors' defense almost at will.

Redlands kicked off down hill, and soon had the Pomonans guessing. The home forwards heeled the ball, and Arthur Sanborn took it from the halfback and ran over for the first try. Hentschke failed to convert. After the kick-off, the Redlands forwards took the ball at their feet, and, after passable dribbling, sent it over the line and Pearson touched it down. No goal was kicked.

Then Tom Sanborn scored a try, and Hentschke improved with a neat kick. Arthur Sanborn scored again before half-time, and the score stood 14 to 0 at the interval. The Pomona team complained about the ball, which was the recognized English Rugby shape, and Coach Hill of Redlands agreed to play with an intercollegiate ball during the second half.

The visitors started out with a rush after half-time and, had they kept it up, might have scored, but they seemed disheartened, and took no advantage of the downhill slope. They allowed the home forwards to wade through the mud and water uphill, taking the ball with them. Redlands lost one sure try by the off-side play of Pearson, but they made up for it by scoring another dribbled try shortly after, touched down by Ford. Hentschke kicked a splendid goal from near the touch line, and the score stood 19 to 0.

Toward the end of the game Pomona seemed to be doing better, and threatened the Redlands line once or twice, but without effect. Then a forward push resulted in another try for Redlands, and the whistle blew for no side, with the score 22 to 0. The line-up was:

Redlands.		Pomona.

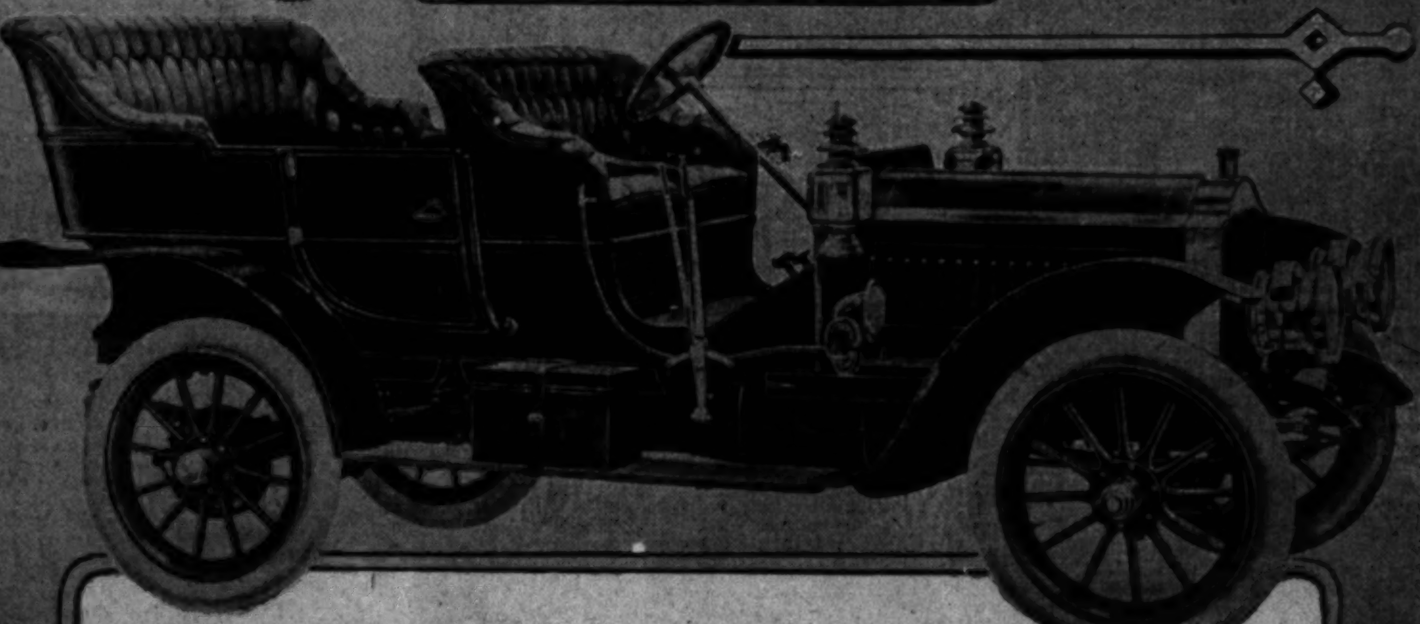
CLAIM SELF-DEFENSE.

DURANGO (Colo.) Nov. 9.—William R. Mason and Joseph Vanderweide, accused of the murder of Joseph Walker, secret-service agent of the government, who was shot and killed by Vanderweide at the Hesperus coal mine last Sunday, were admitted to bail in $20,000 each by Judge Pike in the District Court today, over the protest of the District Attorney.

In support of the motion for bail, affidavits were submitted from Mason and Vanderweide, affirming that Walker fired first, and that the shooting was done in self-defense.

The Car That Has No Valves

1908 Elmore 1908
VALVELESS 2 CYCLE



One Year Ago We Promised You Remarkable Results in the 1907 Elmore Because of Two Cardinal Features in Its Construction---Continuous Turning Power and the Absence of All Valves.

Fresh from the brilliant fulfillment of that promise, we come to you now with absolute assurance of a betterment equally as vital as either of the others, to-wit:

We now have with the installation of the Atwater-Kent spark generator the most perfect system of ignition ever placed in an automobile.

That you may immediately appreciate the extraordinary nature of this newest Elmore development, let us say that with this system of ignition the Elmore four-cylinder car has repeatedly been run 2500 miles on one set of six small dry cells.

If you still fail to grasp the far-reaching significance of this improvement, let us explain further that this means practically an entire season's use of your car on two sets of dry cells—with which every Elmore is equipped.

If you will try and conceive, in addition to this economy of current, an ignition system in which you absolutely escape all the mental strain and worry incident to the troubles which arise from batteries, timer or coils—you will begin to understand why we rank this achievement in importance with the continuous torque of the Elmore two-cycle motor; and its freedom from valves.

As to the incalculable advantages of the latter, the evidence of years attains a volume in 1907 which actually removes the entire question from the realms of controversy. The great increase in six-cylinder cars is in itself a confession of the inherent defectiveness of the four-cycle principle of intermittent impulses—and an admission that the continuous turning power of the Elmore is indispensable to the perfect car.

We would advise every owner who wishes to keep in touch with the most important development in automobile construction to study the valveless two-cycle Elmore for 1908.

QUAKERS BEATEN BY METHODISTS.

WHITTIER IS OUTWEIGHED AND OUTPLAYED BY U.S.C.

Local Men Easily Drive Through the Visiting Line, but Opponents Do Good Work and Surprise Rooters by Strong Rallies—Monograms to Be Issued by U.S.C.

Outweighed, outplayed and outclassed, the Whittier College eleven met its Waterloo yesterday afternoon on Bovard Field, when the husky U.S.C. team ran up an old-time score of 46-0. Four touchdowns and three goals kicked in each half tells the story of the score, but the surprise of the day was the excellently hard fight put up by the Quakers, who time and again pierced the heavy Methodist line for telling gains. Several times the visitors held the 'varsity for two downs on the very brink of the goal line, but the terrific plunging of the university backs, with an occasional cross-tackle buck by Capt. Haigler, inevitably carried the sphere over for the desired effect. It was a pitiable struggle for the Quakers, who put up one of the pluckiest games ever witnessed on Bovard Field.

About 800 rooters attended the game, and the Methodist contingent on the bleachers, aided by a brass band of twenty pieces, cheered the players of both teams impartially. Whittier, loyal as usual, was represented by a small, but strongly vociferous delegation of enthusiasts and paraded some clever college songs and yells.

The honors of the day were pretty evenly divided between Burek, Capt. Haigler, and Woolin on the 'varsity, while N. W. Renneker, fullback on the visiting eleven, was easily the particular star of his team. He used his 190 pounds to excellent advantage, and frequently broke through the 'varsity guards, unassisted, for good yardage. Stokes, the man with the wooden leg, distinguished himself, and was a conspicuous figure in every play. Kerr and Boyle, the Quaker ends, had the Methodist wing men guessing quite often. Skinner showed up stronger on the 'varsity than any other time this year, and shared with Haigler, Burek and Shute the glory of annexing two touchdowns.

Coach Thompson of Whittier said after the game that his men put up by far the best exhibition of ball played this season, and added that the Methodists played a much stronger game than Pomona did last Saturday.

FORWARD PASSES.

U.S.C. did not use the forward pass once in the entire game, and netted but few gains on the quarterback kick. What the university could do against a team of its own strength is a question the students and fans are asking, and if present plans materialize, a big holiday game will be scheduled with an outside team, so that the players may pit their skill against a really strong aggregation.

The game was delayed in starting by the non-arrival of the visiting players, and it was after 3 o'clock before the teams faced each other, two periods, one of thirty and the last of twenty-five minutes were played, and the university received every kick-off with the exception of the last, when Burek booted the leather 50 yards to Renneker.

Wade opened activities for the visitors, and the Methodists began their side of the programme by sweeping Whittier off its feet. A touchdown was made in a few minutes and the Quaker rooters were quickly silenced. After that Whittier gave university a slight scare by getting down as far as the 25-yard line on steady gains. It looked good for a place kick, but a fumble turned the ball over to the Methodists. Several times during this half Whittier held U.S.C. and succeeded in making gains, but the latter clearly had the best of it, and after several long runs by Haigler, Skinner and Shute made three more touchdowns, making the score 23-0 in favor of the university.

It took U.S.C. fully ten minutes to make her first score at the beginning of the second period. The next also came slow and it looked for awhile as though the 'varsity had quit scoring. Then the locals gingered up and made a smashing parade down the field for the third touchdown of the half.

SHUTE KICKS GOAL.

Shute had struck his sights by this time and placed the ball squarely between the posts. Before the tired Quakers had time to recover the 'varsity again started a grand march down the field. With but two minutes to play it looked as if the effort would prove futile, and when the Whittier timer in overhaste blew his whistle for the end of the game, as he so thought, the rooters began to clamber onto the field. However, the referee decided a few seconds remained and over went the ball for the last touchdown. Bridewell kicked goal.

Whittier played but eleven men throughout the game, while a goodly number of scrubs went in the second half for the 'varsity, and such will be in line for the official monogram.

Whether the Methodists will have any more games this season is largely problematical. The athletic board of control of U.S.C. had a special session yesterday, and it is rumored that negotiations will be entered into immediately for a game with an eastern eleven. For the present the squad will rest on their laurels until a definite understanding is reached. Officials for the game were: Kinter Hamilton, referee, and Gladin Perry, umpire. Line-up:

First Winter Jaunt.

The San Vicente Riding Club of Santa Monica is to take its first jaunt for the winter season today. The ride will be through the cañon near the sea. The objective point will be at the point in Sepulveda Cañon, back of Soldier's Home, where the Santa Monica Land and Water Company is spending $75,000 in the construction of a reservoir. The start will be made from the beach at about 10 o'clock, and the horsemen will be closely followed by the supply wagon of the quartermaster. Dinner will be served in the open under the shade of the sycamores. Twenty-five members of the club are expected to take the trip.

Telephone Contest.

The members of the Santa Monica Bay Chess Club, with headquarters at the Venice Country Club house are arranging for a series of games with the Los Angeles Chess Club. The long-distance contest is to be conducted over the telephone, the beach defenders sitting in their clubhouse by the sea, while the players for the metropolitan organization will dictate their moves from the Huntington building in Los Angeles.

San Diego High Loses.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] San Diego High School was beaten by the "Schoolmen" football team today, by a 5 to 0 score. The winning team was made up of High and Normal School teachers, and scored early in the first half. Goode, a former Pomona tackle, playing with the schoolmen, had his collarbone dislocated.

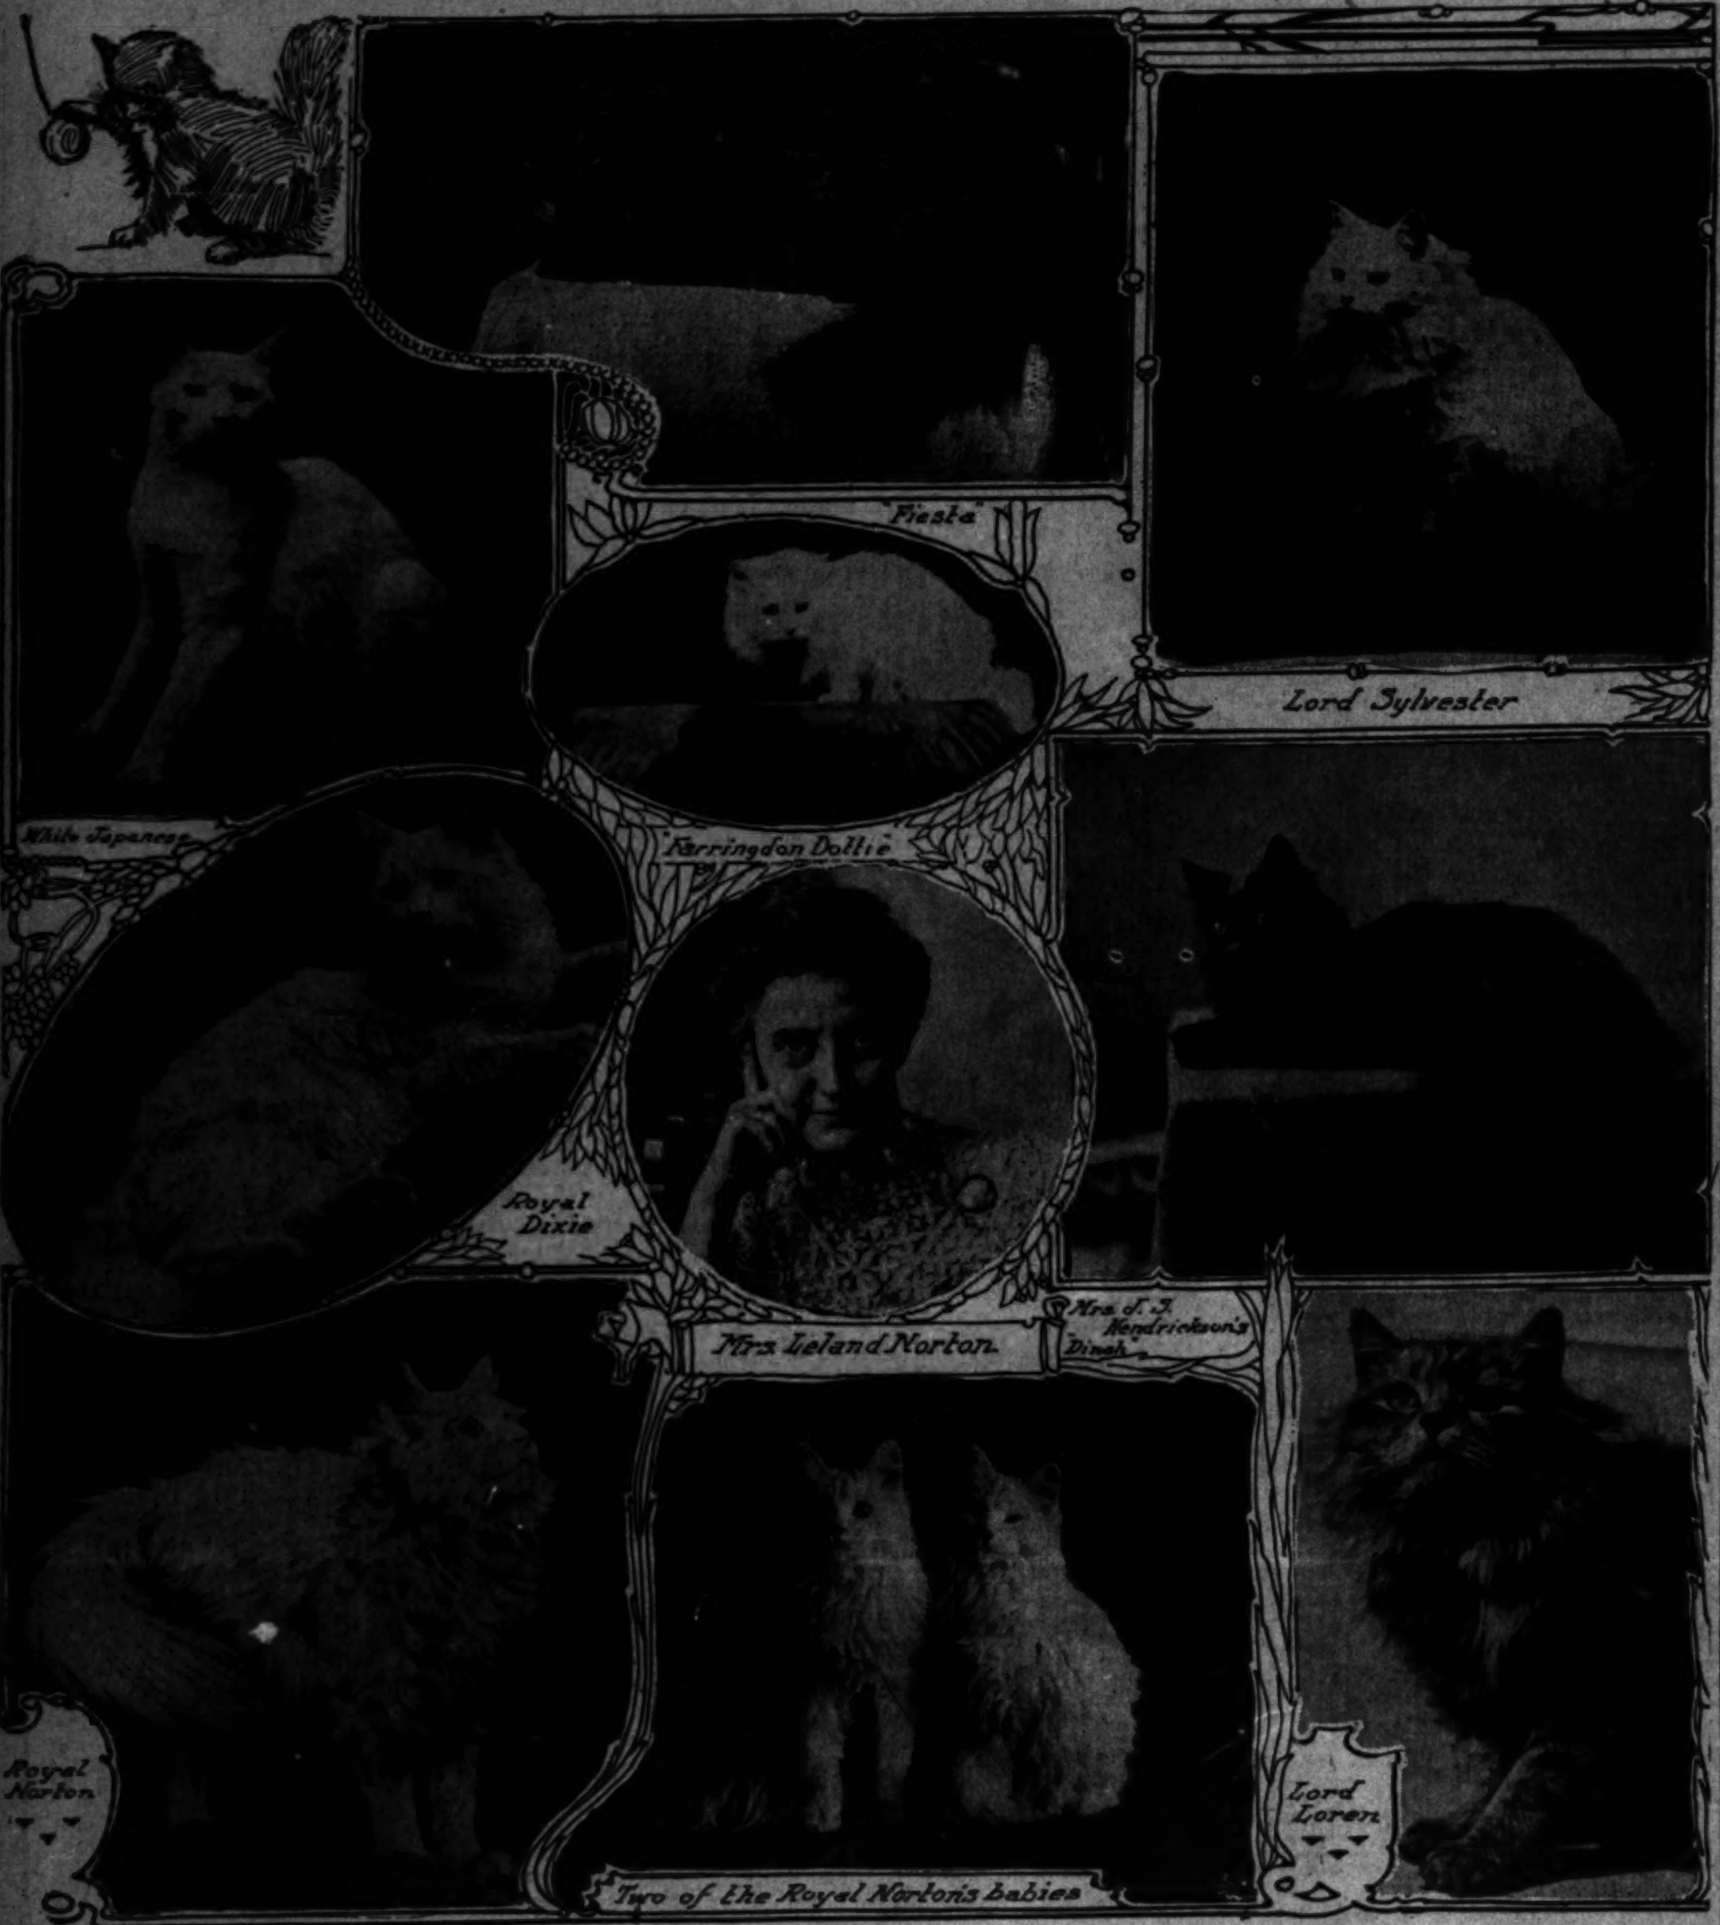
FELINE BEAUTIES TO BE EXHIBITED AT LOS ANGELES NATIONAL CAT SHOW



Mrs. Leland Norton and Prize Winners of For mer Shows.

Chief attractions at Chutes Park second week in December. Mrs. Norton is to have charge of the benching of the 250 cats expected in the entries.

MEOW!

MANY CATS IMPORTED FOR THE NEXT SHOW.

Annual Exhibition of Los Angeles National Cat Club to Contain 250 Entries — Prize Angoras Being Groomed for Feline Reception.

GREAT preparations have been made by the Los Angeles NationalCat Club for the annual cat show at Chutes Park, December 12, 13 and 14. Mrs. Leland Norton and her aides in charge of the benching have about completed all arrangements for the exhibition. The glass pavilion is to be decorated with the club colors, yellow and blue, and with foliage plants and palms.

Facilities for benching 250 cats have been secured, and many more may be shown. A large number of the champions will not be entered for prizes but merely placed on exhibition, thus giving the younger cats and those of lesser note a better opportunity to come in for a share of the awards. Many new cats have been imported in the last year, and most of them will be shown.

A strikingly peculiar feature of the display will be the introduction of several red cats of the French variety. They are owned by Miss Jessie E. Price, and are considered the finest specimens of the kind in this country. None of these cats are very old, and their coats show the richest colorings, fineness and silkiness.

Many well-known kennels will be represented this season, the Drexel, the Good Luck, Reynolds of Hollywood, the Los Robles and the Farringdon, are a few of the best known.

Mrs. Lovell, who is in charge of the Farringdon Kennels, will have a charming display, among the number being Champion Lord Sylvester, a big silver cat of great beauty; June, an orange queen, which has two beautiful kittens sired by Robin Mawe; Lady Sylvia, a shaded silver by Omar II, out of Daphne's Daughter. These cats are from the Lovell Kennels, and are owned by Mrs. C. C. Parks.

Mrs. Lovell's own exhibit includes Farringdon Nilo, a cream tabby; Farringdon Laddie, an extraordinary cat in that it is pure white with bright blue eyes and sound hearing; Farringdon Dottie and three kittens, sired by Royal Norton; and Farringdon Ranee and her family of seven beautiful babies, sired by Farringdon Nilo. Another Farringdon cat is Lady Babbie, whose plume-like tail measues twelve inches across. Two less noted, but beautiful Farringdon cats to be shown are Cherub and One-Two.

BROWN TABBIES.

Mrs. J. W. Searle will have two former prize winners in the pavilion. Coquette and Brownie, brown tabbies. There is another of the same variety which may also be there.

Fiesta, a brown male tabby, owned by Mrs. Harry G. Pollay, is nineteen months old. He has a large round head, green eyes, a rich black tail and is beautifully marked in orange and black. He won the silver cup last year and was the largest cat on exhibition. The sire of Fiesta was Billie Rafferty of Los Angeles and his grandsire was Capt. Jinks, known as the finest cat ever brought to the Coast by Mrs. Johnson, the "cat lady."

Miss Isabelle Olmstead will have on exhibition three orange geldings.

Miss Mary Dalrymple will display her handsome big blue Bonnie, which weights twenty pounds. Mrs. Edward Dunham of San Bernardino will place Colonel, a big white gelding weighing twenty-six pounds. He has taken numerous medals, ribbons and cups at the exhibitions in which he was a prominent figure. Rosie, with three kittens, will be shown also. She is a blue and white marked.

Other animals to be listed will be from the kennels of Mrs. W. S. Cauch of San Bernardino, who has several prize winners. Miss Ethel Bellamy of San Diego will bring to the show Royal Dixie, a blue-eyed, babyish-faced cat sired by Royal Norton. She will also shows her Tortoise shell Queen.

Mrs. H. L. Flash and Mrs. Hettinger of Glendale have arranged to put on exhibition two pure white cats, handsome because of their especially long, silky hair. Mrs. W. C. Hendricks of Mohawk street will place four of her choicest cats. Queen Bangalore is a tortoise, and Tessie is snow-white. Bangalore will be with her two kittens, one of which is orange and the other smoke. The dam's ancestor's came direct from India. Perhaps no prettier cat will be seen at the show than the one owned by Miss Florence Walls. She calls him Buster Brown, and he is loved far more than the costliest "Teddy bear" a girl ever fondled and held dear.

Mrs. James Hendrickson has several cats in her possession, but has not as yet decided just which ones she will place on exhibition. Two of her cats were prize-winners last year, a black one named Dinah, and a sable-smoked cat, called Cleopatra. Another attraction is called Rags, because it is so vari-colored. Friskerina, a new cat, is not likely to be placed on exhibition this year because Mrs. Hendrickson considers her the best queen she has, and the three days' event is wearisome.

A friend of Mrs. Hendrickson at Long Beach is caring for another of the Hendrickson cats, a big brown tabby, which may be brought up for the show. Tokio, a half-breed nightwatchman, was placed on the bench last year by Mrs. Hendrickson and was a prize-winner.

HEAVY ENTRIES.

Mrs. Cora B. Weston and Mrs. Mayme E. Goodrich will have big entries to the show this year. Mrs. Weston's cats include Babe and Kits, with four young kittens by Royal Norton. The kittens are brown, marked with white. Babe is a solid blue, with orange eyes. Susie, another small cat from Mrs. Weston's kennels, is a blue tortoise.

Mrs. Mayme Goodrich will have her big white Sappho, with three Lord Lorin kittens on display. Her red cat, Lalla Rooke, has a family of five red kittens. Another of Mrs. Goodrich's cats is a light silver color, and is one of the promising cats of the club.

Dixie, a blue and white male owned by Mrs. Lloyd L. Elliott, will be on display. Mrs. Arthur Shellhorne again will bring out Tootsie Willow. Tootsie is a daughter of Royal Norton and is one of the best specimens of that family.

Mrs. Leland Norton, who is in charge of the Drexel Kennels, will have in several of her best cats. Royal Norton, the most famous cat ever owned by Mrs. Norton, will be exhibited only. Norton has taken numerous medals, cups, and honor ribbons and has made large sums of money for his owner. He weighs sixteen pounds and celebrated his eleventh birthday anniversary recently.

EXHIBITION ONLY.

Mrs. R. A. Stearns of Pasadena has a large number of cats which may be placed in the exhibit this year, although none of them will be competitors. Mrs. Stearns will only list the most noted. Among these is Champion Lord Loren, a silver-shaded male, by Omar, out of Silver Flash, from Mrs. Champion's stock. Lord Loren is particularly handsome because of his round head and beautiful ruff.

Bengal, the tamed wildcat, which came into the possession of Mrs. Stearns when as a kitten, was captured in the Sierra Madre Mountains, will be on display again this year, having been a feature last winter. Another younger wildcat is caged, for he is so wild and ferocious as yet.

Zal, another big white Angora stud, is to be one of the new cats this season. A peculiar feature of Zal's kittens is that all are blue-eyed, or the bulk of them have that peculiarity. Princess Money, a white female, was imported to the Stearn's kennels from the East. She is one of the owner's best favorites.

Argent Dewdrop is another eastern cat, being brought here from the West Brighton show houses at Staten Island, N. Y. Dewdrop is 6 years old and is a shaded silver. The only red cat in the possession of Mrs. Stearns is a large queen called Rebricka, which won first honors at the Chicago show two years ago. Last year Mrs. Stearns had eleven cats on show; this year possibly there will be five.

Mrs. W. C. Smith of Pasadena is another contributor, and will send up three handsome specimens, Jethro Bath, a son of Mars, is a noted Chicago blue-eyed, white Angora, with many fine points; Adonis, another of Mrs. Smith's cats, is a brown and white tabby. He was sired by Royal Royal, out of Altadena, and Royal Norton is his grandsire. The third one is a blue male, a new cat, which will be placed if in condition.

Indians' Forward Pass.

The efficacy of the forward pass has been demonstrated clearly by Carlisle. The reason assigned for the success of the Indian footballists is that they are months or years better equipped, physically, than their college opponents. Football has been reduced to a science at Carlisle. From the three-quarter-ton charging sled to the thoroughly-equipped football quarters, cage and field, everything humanly possible has been done to show the great athletic qualifications of the Indian.

Superintendent of the Carlisle school, Maj. W. A. Mercer, an army officer, is enthusiastic over his football protégés, and shows his great interest in the college game by accompanying the eleven to nearly all of their big games. Carlisle's coaching staff is one of the highest-paid aggregations of its kind in the country.

Automobile racing has reached the Hawaiian Islands, the Honolulu club recently holding a 106-mile road race over mountainous highways.

SOMETHING NEW.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUN PLANNED.

WHITTIER AND U.S.C. TEAMS IN NEW COMPETITION.

Wrestling Bouts to Be Inaugurated With First Contests at Whittier, While Initial Runs Will Take Place at Bovard Field With Course Over Agricultural Park.

Athletics at Whittier took a decided boom, last week, and the outlook for the year in all branches of sport is brighter than at any time this year.

Baseball stock rose mightily on Wednesday when Perry, last year's captain and star pitcher, reappeared on the campus. It was thought that he would not be in college this year so his unexpected appearance was more than welcomed by the Quaker supporters. With Perry in the box and the new material available the Quakers should prove to be more than a factor in the college baseball race.

Paul Todd, last year's basketball captain, probably will return from his trip in Europe in time for the intercollegiate series. Todd is practically in a class by himself in Southern California as a guard and the Quakers believe that with him again on the team they should have little difficulty of annexing the championship.

The return of Branscome on Thursday was hailed with great rejoicing by the track supporters. Brascome is a star long distance man, and is expected to prove a valuable team-mate to Mills in the mile and to White in the two mile. He entered college at the opening of the year, but owing to business had to leave.

Coach Thompson arranged with U.S.C. for some wrestling matches and a cross-country run. The wrestling, to be held in the Whittier gymnasium December 6, will consist of three matches: lightweight, under 135 pounds; middleweight, under 158 pounds, and heavyweight.

The cross country run, which is something new in Southern California intercollegiate athletics, will be held December 13. The run will be started on the U.S.C. track where two laps will be run, then the runners will go to Agricultural Park, run two laps there, return to Bovard Field and finish with four laps on the track, making the entire distance about five miles.

A few years ago the sport was very popular and widely followed, there being three or four clubs in this city alone, but for lack of suitable range facilities it died away. CLOSE CONTEST AT RIVERSIDE.

POMONA DEFEATS SHERMAN BY ONLY TWO POINTS.

Poor Lo Unable to Work the Forward Pass Successfully and Had to Resort to Straight Football—Congregationalists Show Good Form in All Departments.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a stubbornly contested game, the Pomona College football team defeated the Sherman Indians by a score of 6 to 4, this afternoon, at Chemawa Park.

The hard training which Coach Scholder has given the Indians the past week told in their playing, which was steadier and faster than in their game with Occidental last Saturday. The redskins were not outplayed, but luck was against them. Pomona played a good game from the start and never weakened.

When it is taken into consideration that the Indians have only played one game prior to their contest today, and that many of their stars are missing from the line-up, while Pomona has had over a month of hard practice, it is not to be wondered at that Sherman lost.

The many fumbles made by the Sherman boys and their inability to work the forward pass brought about their defeat. Time and again they tried the forward pass, but failed. Pomona rarely tried the forward pass, and depended upon line plunges and kicking.

Ardillo, Scholder and Magee did the best work for Sherman, while Metcalf, Valle and Robert Spurgeon played the star game for Pomona. The kicking of Ardillo was a feature of the game. Several times he got his team out of a tight place by his vigorous punting. On one occasion, when the ball was on the Indians' ten-yard line and a touchdown for Pomona seemed almost certain, he sent the ball almost across the field. Metcalf's punting was also good, but Ardillo outclassed him.

Neither team scored in the first half. On account of the failure of the Indians to work the forward pass, that style of play was abandoned and the game became a kicking contest. The Indians drew the first score. In the second half, after twenty minutes had elapsed, Ardillo kicked the ball from the 20-yard line for a goal, for four points. Eight minutes later Bob Spurgeon made a spectacular run of 15 yards around left end and plunged across the line for a touchdown. This run turned the scale for Pomona. Metcalf easily placed the ball between the goal posts to make the score six points.

Enthusiasm ran high. The Pomona eleven was accompanied to Riverside by 300 rooters, who cheered on their favorites. Sherman was also backed by enthusiastic friends. The Indian band furnished good music and the purple of Sherman was in evidence everywhere. The game was witnessed by fully 1000 people.

The game was played in thirty and twenty-five-minute halves. C. L. Moorman was head linesman. E. E. Chandler was time-keeper for Pomona and H. E. Mitchell for Sherman. C. S. Hauverman of Banning was referee, and J. W. Reeder of Haverford College was umpire. Line-up:

Lobsters for the Pacific.

The Fred B. Higgins Lobster Company, of Boothbay Harbor, has taken the contract to furnish the United States government with 1500 lobsters. These lobsters are to be shipped alive by express across the continent to the Pacific Coast, where they will be used experimentally in Pacific waters to ascertain whether or not the lobster can live and breed out there. The contract is one of if not the largest ever taken by any lobster dealer, and the crustaceans must of a necessity be "count" ones. The shipments will commence this month.—[Kennebec Journal.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—King Edward boasts of many successes on the turf this year, the most recent of these having been gained with his horse "Coxcomb," which won the much-prized "Welter Handicap" at Doncaster from a strong field. The result of this race, which the King witnessed, is known to have pleased His Majesty greatly, and a day or two afterward he sent for his trainer, Richard Marsh, and congratulated him warmly on the satisfactory showing made by the royal stables.

"It is no use giving you any more pins," said the King, and placing a small package in the trainer's hand, he added, "therefore I ask you to accept this as a little souvenir for your wife." The "little souvenir" was a handsome enameled brooch, studded with diamonds and representing a race horse at full gallop with a jockey wearing the royal colors. The incident illustrates both the good nature of the King and his high appreciation of Marsh's services.

"Dick" Marsh owns the most palatial training establishment in the world, Egerton House, Newmarket. There are gathered one hundred race horses, owned by the King and some half dozen of the wealthiest noblemen and gentlemen on the British turf.

Marsh has been a trainer for twenty years. Before that he was a steeplechase jockey and prior to that a jockey on the flat. He is a genius in his profession. Horses he has trained have won races valued at a total of more than $2,500,000. The average winnings at Egerton House have been $125,000 a year. Marsh's annual income from his training establishment alone is $100,000 a year, and percentages and gifts make a grand total of between $125,000 and $150,000.

Egerton House is an expensive establishment. There is a small army of employés from stable boys to typewriters in the office. The training quarters make up a small village, with its own shops and school and chapel, which has a surpliced choir of stable lads. There are long lines of model stables and enclosures where are quartered troops of thoroughbreds from unraced two-year-olds to aged veterans. And there is also a model farm with many prize cattle, and a stud farm.

Marsh is treated as a friend rather than an employé by the King and the many other noble and wealthy patrons of racing. His is a familiar figure at the big races and he always has a place in the royal enclosure and at the royal luncheon table.

Marsh has a master-mind for horses. This is proved by the fact that he is the most successful race horse trainer of the day. He is a good man of business, too, which is shown by the systematic and ordered way in which his princely establishment is conducted.

He is strictness itself in financial matters and patrons, even the King himself, must be prompt with their cash. He is a stern disciplinariar, for which his army of employés can vouch. He is a true born Englishman, a farmer's son, and has made of himself not only a successful man but as the social scale goes, a gentleman.

King Edward watching his horse, "Coxcomb", win at Doncaster.

MEN'S DISEASES ONLY

I HAVE THE LARGEST PRACTICE BECAUSE I INVARIABLY FULFILL MY PROMISES

Success isn't attained at a bound. It is made up of many little triumphs. A large medical practice doesn't await the young physician at the college door. He must prove himself. He must work toward success day after day, doing well each day's tasks.

YOU CAN PAY WHEN CURED

It has always been my rule to promise nothing that I am not absolutely certain of accomplishing. Realizing that no one physician can successfully undertake to cure all diseases, I entered special courses of study in preparation for my present work. For 16 years I have been proving my ability and building my success. I have mastered, first the simpler diseases, then the serious complex and stubborn ones that others neither cure nor comprehend. I have confined my efforts to diseases of men exclusively and there is no ailment belonging to this class that I cannot fully conquer. I make broad and definite claims. I tell men that I can cure them, even though others have failed. Jealous doctors have charged me with claiming too much. But, I ask, wherein have I failed to fulfill a promise? My practice is now fully twice that of any other specialist upon the Pacific Coast treating men's diseases. It has grown to these dimensions because I have made promises and fulfilled them. Each cure I have effected is a triumph and a manifestation of skill that has had its part in the making of my success. Each day new cures are completed, and my present growth of practice is more rapid than ever before.

Consultation is free. If you are afflicted, consult me. You can rely upon what I tell you, and if I accept your case you can rest assured that a complete and permanent cure will follow my treatment.

All necessary X-Ray examinations are absolutely free to patients. My equipment for X-Ray work is the finest and most complete ever produced, and equally perfect results are not possible with an inferior apparatus.

All medicines are prepared from standardized drugs in my own private laboratory and are supplied to patients at actual cost.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON.

I know this leprous disease completely. The system is thoroughly cleansed and every poisonous taint removed. The last symptom vanishes to appear no more, and all is accomplished by the use of harmless blood-cleansing remedies.

"WEAKNESS"

To produce temporary activity of the functions in cases of so-called weakness is a simple matter, but to permanently restore strength and vigor is a problem that but few physicians have solved. I never treat for temporary effects. Under my system of treatment, every bit of improvement is a part of a permanent cure. Though other physicians have, through my success in effecting permanent cures, been convinced that prematureness, loss of power, etc., are but symptoms resulting from chronic inflammation or congestion in the prostate gland, none have as yet been able to duplicate my cures. My system of local treatment is the only effective means yet known for restoring the prostate to its normal state, which always results in full and complete return of strength and vigor. Such a cure is absolutely permanent, because the condition responsible for the functional disorder is entirely removed. It is the only kind of a cure a patient desires, and is the only kind of cure I will treat for.

CONSULTATION FREE

I state nothing in my announcements but the straight, square truth. It will cost you nothing to call and talk over your case. You can find out all about your trouble and you can later arrange to begin treatment any time you like. My offices, comprising ten rooms, are the largest, most elegant and best equipped in the West.

Do you feel that you are not the man you once were? Do you feel tired in the morning and easily exhausted? Is your back weak? Is your memory failing? Do you have difficulty in fixing your thoughts? Are you losing ambition? If you have any or all of the above symptoms, you surely do not desire to remain in your present condition. Let me explain to you my methods of rebuilding the vigor of men, and refer you to the thousands I have cured.

I Cure All Diseases of Men

There is no ailment peculiar to men that I cannot cure. For sixteen years I have devoted my entire time and energy to the treatment of men's diseases.

My methods have been perfected by actual experience, with a thorough theoretical knowledge as a basis. I am the only physician thoroughly and permanently curing those functional derangements commonly classed as "Weakness," and my success in overcoming such cases has placed me foremost among specialists treating men's diseases, and has brought me the largest practice of its kind in the West.

No Better Treatment In The World

This Is My Fair Offer to Every Patient

VARICOCELE

An average of one man in five has varicocele. Most men that have this dragging, draining weakness are not aware of it until it has wrecked their lives. Varicocele causes congestion of the blood in some of the most vital blood vessels of man. It causes a dull, heavy, listless feeling which is often mistaken for nervous debility or general decline of power.

"WEAKNESS"

My cures of this disorder are permanent and lasting. No tonics that stimulate temporarily, but thoroughly scientific treatment for the removal of conditions responsible for the functional derangement. "Weakness" is merely a symptom of inflammation or congestion in the prostate gland, and under my own original local treatment this gland is promptly restored to its normal state and complete functional activity is the lasting result.

Free Consultation and Examination

I invite every weak or diseased man to call for free advice, and if desired I will make a free examination and diagnosis, but the visit will not obligate him in any way to become my patient. Office hours, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sundays, 10 to 1 only.

Patients living out of the city and coming to Los Angeles for treatment will be furnished with fine room free of charge. Check your trunks direct to 453½ South Spring street.

OCCIDENTAL IS AN EASY WINNER.

HAS NO TROUBLE IN BEATING SAN DIEGO ELEVEN.

Victors Excel in Every Department of the Game—Southerners Hold Down Score in First Half, but Go to Pieces in the Second—Wieman Is Star of Game.

By superior brawn and team work, Occidental College took the San Diego Y.M.C.A. eleven into camp yesterday afternoon on the Presbyterian gridiron, the score being 24 to 4. The southerners put up a strong fight, particularly in the first half, when they held the collegians down to no score, but in the second half the Presbyterians increased their gait and rushed the ball across the visitors' goal line four times.

Shortly after the second half began, Capt. Littlefield kicked a pretty goal from placement, on the 30-yard line, registering the only tally that his team secured. It was the only opportunity the San Diegans had to make a score, as they could not get the ball near the Presbyterians' goal, and Littlefield was equal to the occasion. With the score against them, the Presbyterians woke up and for the remainder of the game the southerners were out of the running.

Both sides used the forward pass for good gains. McClung and Johnson, the Presbyterian ends, handled the long passes in a clever manner and netted large gains for their team. Johnson put up the best defensive game that any Presbyterian end has played this year and shows promise of developing into a first-class player in that position. McClung played a strong game on the other end of the line.

Reed, who played on the Throop eleven two years ago, put up the best game for the visitors, hitting the line hard and backing up the men well on defense. Littlefield played his position with good judgment and made a couple of pretty runs.

"Locomotive" Wieman did the best work for the Presbyterians. The big tackle ploughed through the opposing line, both on offense and defense, and gave a fine exhibition of goal kicking, booting the ball over the bar on each touchdown.

The San Diegans, though showing good team work, were not in good physical condition and took time out many times during the game. The Presbyterians showed the effect of the training table diet, upon which they have been subsisting for the last week, by being able to stand the strain without asking for any time out.

Brower at quarterback was slow in executing plays, but showed good judgment. The Presbyterians used a couple of new formations that worked effectively and displayed by far a better knowledge of the game than in any previous contest this season. Collins and Merrill made the long forward passes with accuracy.

In the first half the Presbyterians twice got the ball within the San Diegans five-yard line, but on both occasions it was lost on fumbles. San Diego was on the defensive most of the time and stubbornly contested every yard.

The southerners scored first on Littlefield's goal from placement, shortly after the second half opened up, and two minutes later the Presbyterians rushed the ball over the line for a touchdown. Merrill went through the San Diego line and just as he was tackled on the 22-yard line, passed the ball to Thomson, who was interfering, and the big fullback planted the ball behind the goal posts. Wieman kicked goal.

The Presbyterians followed up their advantage by making three more touchdowns on forward passes and tackle bucks. Collins and Merrill ran the ends for big gains, and Thomson and Wieman smashed through the line with great effectiveness. The line-up was as follows:

Occidental.		San Diego.
McClung	r.e.l.	Humphrey
Crane (c)	r.t.l.	Butler
Patterson, Kellogg,	r.g.l.	Chadwick
Conrad, Willoughby,	center	Barker

DEBTS OF DUKE.

FATHER'S GOLD AIDS DUCHESS.

DUKE OF MANCHESTER UNABLE TO HOLD JOB AT COURT.

American Wife Is Ill With Worry About Nobleman's Financial Troubles and Her Only Hope Is That Millionaire Zimmerman Will Leave Her Fortune.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Being in rather delicate health, the Duchess of Manchester was unable to appear with the Duke in Belfast last week. They now are tenants at will of Tanderagee Castle, their landlord being Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, who bought Tanderagee and Kylmore to protect the Duke from creditors.

The Duke seems to have absolutely no prospect before him, unless Mr. Zimmerman leaves the Duchess a large fortune. He cannot get any public position because of his financial straits. He had to resign a position at court worth $5000 a year, obtained for him by his mother, because he would not discharge even the trivial duties attached to it.

Naturally, the Duchess is depressed and worried. But for her father's help her position would be intolerable.

The Dowager Duchess of Manchester is exercising all her ingenuity to devise an acceptable birthday present for King Edward. This is no easy task, seeing that all the wealthy people are competing to find something a jaded man will like. The Duchess once gave him an ebony cane, with a top formed of a round gold box, encrusted with two rows of fine diamonds. Touch a spring and the lid flies up, disclosing a cigar-lighter.

ON THEIR WAY.

DUCKS LEAVE; LIMITS RARE.

Majority of Gun Clubs Find but Poor Sport.

Storm Impending Drives Out Many Local Birds.

Bags Supplemented by Snipe. Some of the Scores.

Not nearly as many ducks were in sight on the Bolsa gun clubs, yesterday, as were noticed during the midweek shoot, and scores took a decided tumble in consequence, those who bagged the limit being few and far between.

Quite a lively first flight was experienced in some sections, although it was not equal to the lively movement of the early birds Wednesday last. Notwithstanding a dull, cloudy day threatening stormy weather, the fowl did not come back from the ocean as freely as usual, doubtless because the morning was not hot. Then the gunners found sitting hour after hour in the blinds such wearying work that a great deal of needless marching about was done.

One of the clubs, the Sunset, according to R. Mausard, has made a rule that any member leaving his blind to pick up any ducks before 8 o'clock is fined $5 for each offense. The object is team work to give all a fair chance, and Mausard says the fines are not only assessed, but collected. This is an innovation in the line of gun club fines for infractions of the shooting rules.

Hunters generally were somewhat surprised at the relative scarcity of birds, yesterday, as compared with Wednesday, and think it must have been due in some measure to the fowl leaving ahead of the storm," locally, and the other birds from the north and east which should have taken their places, not arriving. Continuance of the storm is reasonably sure to send in a new flight for the next shoot in the opinion of the experienced gunners. A few newcomers were seen yesterday, mostly widgeon.

During the second shoot they will sail around dizzily at telescopic altitude, and thus encourage all manner of gun straining stunts from the shooters below.

JACKSNIPE HERE.

The slow sport of yesterday morning was not altogether a misfortune as it caused many who otherwise would have contented themselves with ducks to prospect around the edges of the marshes for snipe. In many instances these quests were successful. A number of snipe were seen, and some killed on several of the clubs, notably the Canvasback and Chico.

Quite a number of bluebills were seen yesterday and most of the clubs had shots at them. They seem to be newcomers, and are, as a rule, big, heavy birds.

Spoonbills still are numbered among the absentees. Teal are scarcer than they were ten days ago, and comparatively few widgeon have arrived as yet. The shooters are awaiting the mid-November flight of northern birds, and most of them do not expect any more limits by 9 o'clock until another flight of ducks is in.

Good-sized squads were out on most of the clubs, rather larger than for several shoots past. The usual long-shooting and walking about was noticed. On the Westminster Gun Club, Marshal Stimson hac the honors with a bag of twenty-eight. F. E. Browne and C. C. Carpenter also shot with fair success, and E. H. Barmore made a good bag. H. A. Hoffman bagged about seventeen on the Golden West, and the same number was high on the Los Patos grounds.

On the Sunset club, A. T. Jergins got twenty, R. Mausard the limit, G. Rector thirty, and Dr. Stivers thirty-one, Mr. Watts twenty-five, W. H. Hollingsworth twenty-five, Collins twenty. On the neighboring club, the Center, Otto Schmitz was high, with thirteen, and George Gordon got ten.

The usual Saturday squad was afield on the Blue Wing grounds, and had rather better luck than most of the rest of the club, as usual, but found it necessary to stay with the game in order to get a good bag.

On the Christopher, Godfrew Fritz had seventeen, J. W. Morrison got thirteen, A. Foix half a dozen, and William Frick, who stayed out later, was going strong at last reports and reaching toward the limit. He thought he was shooting ducks for the Schuetzen barbecue today, not knowing that a lamb feast had been substituted for the webfooted features. H. C. Dillon bagged fifteen in the morning. Morrison's son also shot a few birds.

The usual full turnout was busy on the Lomita ponds, George Dotter being high, with twenty-four. Fred A. Hines had twenty-two. John M. Larronde accounted for fourteen, Earl Mueller fifteen, and Joe Amestoy, his brother Pete, Dr. Lasher, Austin Martin and Harry Martin and Walter Callahan, another guest, had from fifteen down.

Fair sport was reported on the Chico and Green Wing clubs, with rather few out. Plenty of ducks wandered over that way during the day, but the Wednesday sport was much better, the birds decoying better and giving chances for cleaner kills, with less cripple chasing incidental thereto.

QUAIL AND DUCKS.

GOOD SPORT REPORTED.

George P. Wilson returned yesterday from a motoring excursion of nearly three weeks into the interior of San Diego in his Thomas Flyer, under the pilotage of J. B. Wood, who knows the interior of the southernmost county like a book. Besides Mr. Wood and his wife, A. B. Brewster and Miss Miller made up the party, and their headquarters was Witch Creek, a little place about twenty-eight miles east of Escondido in the heart of the quail country.

The party left Los Angeles in the big machine October 21 and returned November 8. While away they burned 250 gallons of gasoline, killed more than 600 quail, and 286 ducks, nearly all of the larger varieties. The first day out on the homeward trip they killed seventy-two quail along the road without going a quarter of a mile from the machine, and made their run as far as Elsinore, so they could not have lost much time either.

The exact location of the lakes on which the duck shooting was done the party refuses to divulge. There were several of them, all cold and fresh, and the birds could not be driven away, the lakes being the only water for miles. The mode of procedure was to hide in blinds at one end of the lake and send the chauffeur to the other with the machine, tooting his Gabriel horn, opening the muffler cut-out, and generally making all the noises the big car could make. The ducks would come whizzing back overhead and the fun was fast.

Not being prepared for ducks, the party had to use quail loads. Had it been possible to secure larger shot than No. 7½, even more ducks could have been killed, but none more could have been disposed of. The birds were in splendid order; very fat, and decidedly better than most of the seacoast marsh ducks, being so remote from salt water that they probably never visit it. The scarcity of water in that part of San Diego county has a tendency to corner the supply and make certain the sport.

Wood states the roads are good, but it is a tedious way to go, although a very pleasant run for any auto enthusiast with plenty of shooting along the road.

One day the party killed seventy-six ducks; another, fifty-four; a third, sixty-seven; a fourth, seventy-three; once only sixteen. The shooting was about twenty miles from headquarters; a mere trifle to an automobile, easily done in a scant hour.

Mr. Wilson is going right back early in the week and proposes to remain all winter.

NEEDED ACTION.

REVISE RULES FOR BIG FISH.

TUNA CLUB MAKES CHANGE IN TOURNEY CONDITIONS.

Proper Definition of Butt and Tip to Avoid Misunderstanding or Evasion—Gradual Lightening of Gear Employed in Tuna Chase and New Specifications Written.

The Santa Catalina Island Tuna Club has revised and modernized its tournament rules. The changes have been made with a view to making the rules more definite and easier to understand. Not only the light-tackle rules, but also the blue button specifications have been amplified.

Election of applicants to membership as well as previous qualification by catching a 100-pound tuna for the blue button or a fifty-pounder for the red on tournament tackle, also is insisted upon. The blue button has been opened to the specifications of the red button class. A 100-pound tuna taken on nine-thread line and five-foot, six-ounce tip with fourteen-inch butt is eligible for the highest honors the club has to bestow.

In line with the light-tackle movement, the Tuna Club has now reduced its heavy-tackle specifications to a point where they call for a much smaller rod all around. A wooden rod is insisted upon for both classes. It must be not shorter than six feet, nine inches over all, the tip of not less than five feet and not over sixteen ounces in weight, and must be of the conventional butt and tip type. This cuts out the "billiard cues" formerly so much used in black sea bass fishing.

The light tackle specifications call for a rod not under six feet over all, tip not less than five feet long nor more than six ounces of weight, and butt not over fourteen inches in length. Standard nine-thread line is the limitation in the light class; standard twenty-four thread in the other.

By tip is meant that portion of rod from outer end of rod to point where same is assembled at butt with tip fully seated. This is to prevent persons offering their rods for examination with tip only partly seated in order to make the length limit.

Several changes are made in the fishing rules. Anglers must bring fish to gaff entirely unaided; the fish must be reeled in; a broken rod, either before or after gaffing, disqualifies. An angler must fish with but one rod at a time; all catches must be reported to a member of the weighing committee, weighed in his presence and recorded; tackle must be exhibited with the fish at time of weighing; the tournament is open to all amateurs, professional fishermen or those engaged in allied industries and members of their families being barred; membership in the club is limited to men.

One of the things that will be decided early in the future is the Clemente proposition. It having been customary for anglers to run over to Clemente Island from Catalina in search of bigger fish which are at times abundant around the farther island, many are tempted to risk a rather hazardous trip in boats utterly unfit. The practice tends further to place a premium upon the resident of Avalon in the button competition, which is a thing the officers prefer to avoid.

This year the record fish in several classes were taken at Clemente, one by a woman. The Southern California Rod and Reel Club already has established a precedent in strictly limiting its competition to the waters of Southern California.

ALL-AMERICAN ELEVEN.

Minor College Stars Stand Good Chance of Being Chosen for First Positions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Eastern college football has been turned topsy-turvey this season, and the oldest followers of the game are at a loss what next to expect. The Big Four is tottering, and the undisputed supremacy of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Pennsylvania is no more. Whether this is due simply to some unusual combination of circumstances, or whether the new rules are responsible, no one seems ready to say. There is no doubt that the new rules put a premium on speed and team work, and the coaches of the old beef and brawn days are floundering a bit in the endeavor to turn out smooth teams.

Perhaps nothing shows how greatly the minor colleges are breaking into the charmed circle of the Big Four better than gossip about the All-American eleven. It is still early in the season for definite prophecy, but the predictions are interesting. It is not Starr, for four years Harvard's quarter, or one of the Yale pair that is talked of for the position. Mount Pleasant, the Indian quarter, has been prominently mentioned, because of his wonderful use of the forward pass. Lange of the navy, who seems to be another Daly for open-field running, is also considered.

Shattuck of Amherst is said to be the best halfback of the season, and at least even with any Big Four player for a place on the All-America. O'Rouke of Cornell is almost certain of a place at tackle. Houser of the Indians is a strong candidate for fullback. In fact, the so-called minor teams are certain of more representation than ever before.

The defeat of Penn by the Indians had one rather amusing feature. Penn has not been happy since the antidote was discovered for her famous "guards back." This year the coaches spent some time in developing a play that would rival the "guards back." It is a form of tackle back double tandem, requiring the use of a fairly-long pass by the quarter. In preparation for the Michigan game, it was decided to uncover it against the Indians, and see how it would work. The Indians smashed it up every time, but in the general rout, the ruin of the pet play passed unnoticed by the rooters.

ROSE SMASHING RECORDS.

Tall Californian Lives Modestly and Eats Moderately—Secret of His Success.

Ralph Rose, the young California athlete who has been smashing athletic records at Jamestown and in New York, has been described by physical directors as the "perfect man," all of whose measurements are entirely symmetrical. While yet a schoolboy Rose put the twelve-pound shot within three feet of the long-standing world's record held by George R. Gray of the New York Athletic Club. He lived all the time on a farm, ate country fare, and practiced diligently. At the age of 19 he broke Gray's record for putting the shot.

Rose's athletic career was interrupter while he was a law student in Michigan, and he went out of all contests until about a couple of years ago, when he met his first defeat at Portland, Or., where Wesley Coe established a world's record over him. At Jamestown recently he met Coe and beat the latter's world's record by putting the shot 49 feet 6½ inches. He now holds world's records with the 8, 12, 14, 16, 18, 21, 24 and 28-pound shots, as well as a number of schoolboy records that have never been broken. Rose lives simply. He avoids pies, pastries and large quantities of meat, and takes no stimulants.

Rose stands 6 feet 6 inches, and weighs 245 pounds in athletic costume. His chest measures 48 inches, and his waist 10 inches less. His upper arms are 17 inches, his forearms 14, his thighs 26, and his calves 17. Next year he expects to be admitted to the California bar.

RACERS WORKING.

CASEY FLIES THROUGH AIR.

LOCAL HORSE CAUGHT BY CAMERA IN NOVEL POSITION.

Many Fast Birds Are Now Training at Agricultural Park for Matinee of Driving Club Thanksgiving Day. Vice-President Snowden Will Show a New Eastern Trotter.

That the Thanksgiving matinée of the Los Angeles Driving Club will probably be the best the club has ever given, is the opinion of every lover of the harness game in Los Angeles, and aside from a fine programme of speedy races, those who attend will see in Casey one local horse that the photograph instrument has been able to catch with all of his feet off the ground. Dan Patch is the only other horse that has ever been snapped in this odd position and owing to the fact that it has been almost impossible to duplicate the Patch picture, many have been inclined to doubt the statement that any animal ever has his four feet off the ground at one time. Casey is a well known local flyer and will be seen in the 2:20 pace at the Thanksgiving matinée.

The number of attempts thot will be made to break the Coast and the various track records will make the card an attractive ane and aside from these features of the day, the races should be all any horse lover could want, judging by the class of entries. Secretary Stewart says that the horses entered for this matinée are about the best the club has ever had on a programme and the activity at Agricultural Park shows that many of the best ones belonging to club members are doing good work.

Frank Long is working his well known Siegfried, with a record of 2:16, and the horse is showing good form. Dr. Dodge has out his pacer, Lohengrin, who made a mark of 2:09. Godfrey Fritz is working Gen. Boodle and this one stepped a quarter of a mile in thirty seconds on Friday. Bob Morehead will drive Boodle in the matinée. Fritz is also working his pacer, Billy Red, whose record is 2:08¼. Vice-president John W. Snowden has bought a new trotter in the East, which he will uncover at the meeting and, while he will give no information about the horse, it is known that it has an eastern record of 2:16. G. A. Pounder is training Glory, who covered a half mile in 1:05 last Friday. Glory will be in against Danube in the free-for-all trot. John Reynolds is tying out his trotter, Hazel McKinney (2:12½,) and this one will appear in the 2:15 trot with Gen. Boodle and Ida Millerton.

Dr. J. A. Edmonds, who has charge of the horse parade that will be seen just before the races, reports good progress and says the entry list will be large.

RACING AT OAKLAND.

LONG SHOT WINS HANDICAP.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Ten thousand people were present today at the opening of the winter racing season at Emeryville. Following the custom, an outsider, Jack Nunnally, won the Opening Handicap. Nunnally ran a sensational race, swerving all over the track, but closed like a cyclone and won from Montgomery by a nose. Twenty-eight books cut in, and notwithstanding the financial stringency the play was heavy. Results:

Seven furlongs: Martinmas, 109 (Davis,) 3 to 5, won; Phalanx, 112 (Sandy,) 4 to 5, second; Progress, 109 (G. Burns,) 5 to 2, third; time, 1:26. The Reprobate, Netting, Tasora, Etapa, Salable and Fisher Boy also ran.

Mile and fifty yards, selling: Elizabeth F., 107 (G. Burns,) even, won; Orchan, 107 (Davis,) 8 to 5, second; Nabonassar, 110 (Borel,) 5 to 1, third; time, 1:43 4-5. Byronerdale, the Captain, Miss M. Bowdish, Lone Wolf, Mina Gibson, Lucrece, Sahara, Santa Ray and Prince Nap also ran.

Mile, selling: Ed Ball, 107 (Burns,) 8 to 5, won; Cello, 110 (Buxton,) 3 to 2, second; Pleiad, 103 (Moreland,) 10 to 1, third; time, 1:49 4-5. Bantam, Gromobol, Gorgalette, Corrigan and Celeres also ran.

Indoor Bicycle Racing.

A three months' season of indoor bicycle racing on a regulation banked track will, it is expected, shortly be inaugurated at San Francisco's Pavilion. It is the intention of the cycling enthusiasts to devote two nights a week, Tuesdays and Fridays, to the sport. It is reported that several of the Salt Lake cracks and fully a score of the fastest riders about San Francisco have already been signed.

JUVENILE COURT MEETING.

The Juvenile Court Association will hold its annual meeting next Saturday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce building at 3:30 o'clock. The association is just one year old and has a wonderful record of work done in the interest of the children of the city. Already the nucleus of a George Junior Republic for Southern California has been started near the parent republic at Freeville, New York, and later on these young people will be brought out to the Pacific Coast to conduct the new enterprise.

DOESN'T PAY HALF.

Statement as to San Francisco County's Total State Taxes Refuted by Controller's Report.

Impelled by a statement that San Francisco county pays half of the State tax, which A. J. Rich is reported to have made at a conference with Gov. Gillett, Friday afternoon, S. T. Curson, of the tax collector's office in this county, yesterday made some mathematical calculations outside the regular line of his duties, to determine what proportion of the State taxes San Francisco actually does pay, and especially in relation to the proportion paid by Los Angeles.

The total tax to be paid into the State treasury by the various counties before the last of April, for the current year, is $8,360,041.60. Los Angeles county will pay $1,709,030.27 of this, while the amount to be paid by San Francisco county is $1,912,906.41. The amount the State will receive from these two counties approximates half of the total State tax for this year, but the part which will be borne by Los Angeles county is not inconsiderable.

The report of the State Controller for the year 1907, gives the basis for Mr. Curson's figures. In this report the total assessed value of property in San Francisco county is given as $429,866,609; that of Los Angeles county at $384,051,746. The State tax rate is 44½ cents on each $100 of assessed valuation.

STARS BEFORE THE TEACHERS.

The Southern California Teachers' Association, which will meet in Los Angeles the week preceding Christmas week, has secured several stars of the first magnitude to deliver addresses to the teachers. Luther Burbank is one of them, and he will doubtles give some account of his wonderful experiments in the world of plants. From Toronto, Canada, to Los Angeles is a far cry, as the Scotch express it, but James E. Hughes, a noted educator, is to make that long journey to give his peculiar message on the training of the young. He has been for many years a successful educator, as well as lecturer on many subjects pertaining to schools. He is especially known for his power of seeing things through the eyes of a child. His teachers are scattered all over the United States, there are several in Los Angeles, and they are all trained to recognize the viewpoint of the child. State Superintendent of Schools Ackerman, from Oregon, will also be one of the speakers at the meeting of the association. H. A. Adrian, the president of the organization, is again preparing to put in a forceful plea for the backward children, many of whom are simply crowded out of the schools of today, the school system, according to his ideas, being framed for the brilliant minority instead of for the average child, or the dull child.

HIGHBINDER'S AIM BAD.

Duck Chung and Quong Jim were arrested yesterday morning by officers of the Chinatown squad and locked up on charges of having fired at a member of the Hop Sing tong. Duck Chung confessed to the shooting. Members of both tongs are keeping the identity of the man fired at a secret. It is believed he was a vegetable man, a member of the Hop Sing tong, although this is not certain. Whoever the man was, he fled from the scene of the shooting and is probably hiding somewhere in the alleyways of Chinatown. The shots were fired from a building at No. 219 Napier street, a powder burned screen in one of the windows showing where the muzzles of the guns rested.

The Boston and Albany express from Albany for Boston struck a freight train, which was backing out of a siding, near Westbrookfield, Mass., yesterday, causing a bad wreck and killing Charles Hurd, a brakeman on the express. Several persons were cut and bruised, but none was seriously injured.

There may be well-informed persons who may feel disposed to question the correctness of this judgment, but a vote cast by those qualified to express an opinion would uphold it by a large majority. We do not forget the adverse decision of a great German of a former generation. Frederick the Great, being asked his opinion as to relative value of languages, is reported as saying: "Making love I should use the soft and voluptuous tongue of sunny Italy. Saying my prayers I should fall back on the dignified, grave and sonorous tongue of Spain. As a diplomat negotiating a treaty I should use the subtle, suggestive and elusive language of the French. If I were trying to sway the minds of a vast and intelligent audience in a great discussion of important subjects I would rely on forcible and copious English." "And, Sire," queried the interrogator, "for what purpose is our own German to be used?" "To drive oxen," the King is said to have answered.

Frederick, if he is correctly reported, could hardly have had a proper appreciation of his mother tongue. "Faust" disproves this harsh judgment totally. So do the Anacreontic verses of Heinrich Heine. The "Critique of Pure Reason" is not "driving oxen," but leading the thoughts of genius, and that up steeps of intellectual light where it is hard to follow.

But let us return to Scott and his study of German. One of the first writers to attract his attention was Goethe, whose first publication, "Götz von Berlichingen," was a great favorite with the gentle bard of Abbotsford. This story, which carried the reader back to feudal days, the days of romance and chivalry, dropped like seed into the fertile brain of Scott. Had this dreamer of beautiful tales in verse and prose become fascinated with the intricacies incident to the moving of "pawns" and "knights," the probability is not small that we would never have had the moving scenes set to such exquisite music placed before us in "Marmion," nor those varied thought vistas, some so soft and tender, others so soul-stirring and martial, in the "Lady of the Lake." We might never have had the marvelous stories illustrated by so great a picture gallery in the "Waverleys," which have set so many hearts throbbing, dimmed so many eyes with tears, and made the blood run boiling in so many veins. Set writing the lays of "Marmion" and "The Lady of the Lake" by Goethe's inspiration, furnished in a prose tale, Scott was driven from the field of poetry by the appearance of Byron in the literary sky. Scott is said to have laid down the first volume of Byron's verse with the remark: "I must seek some other field for operation. This is beyond me." To this resolution the world is indebted for the "Waverleys." Sir Walter's fame and future generations are the gainers by the change. Although the influence of Scott's verse on the world may be cleaner and more wholesome than that of "Don Juan," "The Corsair," or "Manfred," there is no question of the superior merit from an artistic standpoint and from the higher one of genius in the productions of the fiery misanthrope who, like a serpent mad with pain, turns his envenomed fangs into his own heart, yet the "Waverleys," whose power in the line of romance is still unexcelled, place Scott on a higher pedestal of fame than his verse could have won for him, and "Ivanhoe," "The Heart of Midlothian," "Old Mortality," and the rest have exercised a more potent sway over the hearts and the intellects of men than the stories told in rhyme and rhythm could do, musical as the verse and graphic as are the pictures.

THE DREAM THAT CAME TO ME.

When Our Lady of Dreams shook the tree,
The dreams all fluttered away;
And a little dream came to me
As it wandered and went astray.

Sorrow too deep for speech
And pain too keen for tears,
Which never a joy could reach,
Came with the marching years.

But the little dream led me back
To the days that lay behind,
When I knew no grief nor lack—
To the years when life was kind.

The little dream danced and played with me
Until the morning broke
Through many a path, all fancy free,
And then, alas! I woke!

—[Ninette M. Lowater, in New York Sun.

A SONG OF CALIFORNIA.

The North and the South claim the spring as love,
The Juliet spring with her laughter and roses,
Her song of wild thrushes and sweet, hidden closes
Of hawthorn where nests some amorous dove.

But I am bride of the Autumn—my king
A Hamlet whose kiss thrills the soul to awaking;
My blossoms and blades from their dull dungeon breaking,
Leap to his arms and sing and sing.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

RESPONSIBILITY IN HIGH PLACES.

BY all who reflect upon their conduct, who see each act not as an isolated performance, or as the execution of a personal wish or independent desire detached from the endless chain of facts comprehending the life of the world—by all such, every action or event which they initiate or for which they are responsible will be viewed as something irrevocably fixed in the universe with its entire train of baneful or beneficent consequences. Hence, they will have a care as to what sort of experience they set in motion; they will not regard as negligible the matter of responsibility attaching to each one for the kind of influence exerted upon his or her fellow beings.

All moral infirmity, whether with intention to work harm to society, or pernicious conduct culminating in calamity to individuals singly and collectively, without evil design, rises out of the separation or detachment from the idea of social unity and the rectifying principle of human interdependence. Once let the conviction of ethical interdependence take firm hold of us, then men in public office, principals in government, or any body of acknowledged leaders, social and political, serving by virtue of their prominence as influential models or patterns for the emulation of the populace, will no longer deem their personal and private conduct as a thing apart from their public career. They will not hold that a noble title, a series of decorations for "honorable service" to state or country, or a royal escutcheon, can exempt the men occupying high places from an honorable discharge of their respective responsibilities.

Since the people of civilized countries have outgrown the subjugating superstition of divinely appointed kingships or supernaturally elected rulers to wield absolute power and authority over them, the remaining "nobles by inheritance" or the traditional aristocracy are especially regarded with watchful and suspicious eyes by the commonalty. If superiority be the unassailable prerogative of men of noble or aristocratic descent, "Well, then," declare the plebeians or the "common people," and with right, "let these human exemplars whose pedigree ranks so high and mightily above ours, fill their places by at least practicing the same virtues which they exact from every decent individual among their humble subordinates."

This is an age with a bright omen; an age that augurs well, despite all the loathsome revelations of acute and chronic moral disorders tainting the atmosphere in high places. The omen is good, because showing the activity of a new growth underneath the diseased conditions of society. And it is the force of a healthier state of things exerting itself that is pushing aside, that is mutating and causing to become ineffective the rampant, malignant germs of perverted tastes and propensities observed at the very apex of civilization, among the presumably refined, educated, and extensively celebrated élite. Aye, ours is an age that will go down in history as one waging a noble war—a most righteous war, sanctioned by the highest principles of morality and common sense; a war against privileged vice, or against the socially, financially and politically eminent vicious.

Indeed, wherever this work of ridding a country of its polluting carrion, whether in gilded palaces or in the hut of the humblest, is indefatigably persisted in, there is done for the state what the Reformation aimed to do for the church. It is the beginning of the realization of the true spirit of democracy manifesting itself in both ethics and religion when in either sphere there is a telling restriction placed upon the "purchase" or "sale" of privileges, when neither a man's millions can absolve him from public or private sin or wrong; and when, so deserving, a nation's minions are not exempt from adverse criticism. For the time has come when the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" is answered in the affirmative by the aggregate voice of public opinion uttering itself through the public press.

"Yes," the answer comes thundering back to every questioner, "yes, you are your brother's keeper, whether prince or peasant, peer of the realm or petty commoner; whether you have flowing in your veins the ordinary red blood of the people, or the superior 'blue blood' of aristocracy; and whether you are privileged to hover in proximity of the 'royal purple' of a vast and dominant empire, it matters not; you are your brother's keeper, the maintainer of the welfare of society as a whole, and the loftier your eminence the heavier freighted will be your burden of responsibility."

We have said that this is an age of war, of a righteous and religious war, inasmuch as the attack is upon all those who perpetrate the great wrong of causing a dishonest divorce of honors, rights, power and privilege from their corresponding duties and responsibilities. The fire of criticism is directed toward those who would assume supreme control over men with impure hearts and unclean hands. They are the enemy that is to be driven to the purifying waters of expiation and contrite restitution, held captive until free from stain, thenceforward to yield obedience to the law of spiritual harmony, of social unity. This is to be done by adequate adjustment to the conditions underlying the perpetual progress of civilization.

Hence, men who would retain unassailed their reign in high places must testify to their superiority by presenting to the world their superior content of life. Thus they will not need to take refuge behind a noble title or a princely estate, but will demonstrate their nobility, not as an external adjunct but as the inherent quality of the man. They will show that it is not an inconsequential man that is "noble," but that a noble man is prince, and that the manliness of the prince is his highest estate, a princely manhood, the royal achievement lending luster to a great name.

The Cape-to-Cairo Railroad. By Frank G. Carpenter.

GREAT STEAM ROUTE.

HOW IT IS BEING CONSTRUCTED ACROSS AFRICA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HALFAYA (Nubia.)—I am in the Soudan, at the end of the northern section of the Cape-to-Cairo Railroad. This part of the route is now completed from the Mediterranean Sea to where the Blue and White Niles join to form the mighty stream which has built up the land of Egypt. I have gone on the railroad through the rich regions of the lower Nile Valley, and am now in the upper end of Nubia at the railroad station of Halfaya, which lies just opposite Khartoum. My distance from the Mediterranean is equal to a straight line from the Atlantic Ocean to the borders of Colorado, and I am just about as far south of Alexandria as New Orleans is south of the booming city of Winnipeg. From here I can get steamers which will take me up the White Nile for more than a thousand miles, and there is something like 800 miles of available waterways between that point and the other end of the road which has been constructed from Cape Town northward to far beyond the Zambesi River.

By Steam from Cairo to the Cape.

In thinking of the Cape-to-Cairo route most people consider it as a continuous railway system or of one iron track running north and south through Africa from one end to the other. This it will never be. We shall go by steam from Cairo to the Cape; but almost one-third of the way will be over navigable rivers and lakes. This was the idea of Cecil Rhodes, and it is the idea of every practical engineer who has examined the country and its traffic possibilities. There will be one railroad line running from Cape Town as far north as Lake Tanganyika, and another practically continuous rail system from here to Alexandria. The rest of the route will be made up of rail and water. The White Nile above Khartoum may be paralleled here and there by iron tracks, but for a generation or so, at least, the traffic will be by steamers as far as the Belgian Congo, at Gondokodo, a distance of over 1100 miles. At that point there will be a railroad strip of 100 miles or so to Dufile, and then the Nile will again be used and steamers will go up it to Lake Albert and across that lake to its southern shores. Between Lakes Albert and Tanganyika will be a little more than 300 miles of railroad, with a sixty-mile ferryage across Lake Kivu, which lies between. Then will come the long stretch of Lake Tanganyika, consisting of a deep waterway 400 miles long, and then the southern section of the road, going almost straight south to Cape Town.

So far more than 3000 miles of iron track have been laid on the northern and southern ends of the system. The southern section is now about 2000 miles long. It has been extended from Cape Town northward a distance of almost 400 miles above the Zambesi River, and there remain only 450 miles to construct before the trains can connect with the little steamers now on Lake Tanganyika. This section will probably be completed in the near future, as the late Mr. Beit, one of Cecil Rhodes's partners, set aside in his will at least $6,000,000 for that purpose. I have before me a diagram recently issued by the African World, which shows the line of the route, and the extent of water and rail it will contain when completed. According to this the total distance will be about 5900 miles, of which about 4000 miles will be railway and the balance taken up by the rivers and lakes to which I have referred.

Up the Nile by Railway.

I should like to take you with me over this first great section of the Cape-to-Cairo Railway. We shall need four days to go from the Mediterranean to the junction of the White and Blue Niles, where I now am, but the trip will be comfortable and there are great sights all the way. We start at Alexandria, the chief seaport of the Nile Valley, and, in three hours our express train carries us across through the delta to Cairo. Both Alexandria and Cairo have good railroad depots. The first city contains more than 400,000 people, and the second more than 1,000,000, so that there is a rapid and frequent train service between them.

We take the express, and as we go first-class we must pay 3 cents a mile. The second-class fare is only half as much as the first, and the third is still cheaper. Every train has first, second and third-class cars. Those of the first are divided up into compartments and are patronized by tourists and officials. The second-class cars are much like those of our American trains, having an aisle through the center; they are used by merchants, commercial travelers and well-to-do natives. The third-class cars are cheaply gotten up, and their seats are wood benches; they are always filled with the common Egyptians, and foreigners seldom travel in them. Our tickets are little blue cards with the price printed upon them in English and Arabic. We have to show them to the guard as we enter the train, and they are not examined again until they are taken up at the gates at the depot as we go out.

We have some trouble with our baggage, for, like the ordinary American, we are loaded with trunks. Only fifty-five pounds can be checked without extra charge, and my trunks often cost me more than my fare. We notice that the English and Egyptian passengers put the most of their belongings into bundles and bags, which they are allowed to bring into the cars with them. Many a single passenger is carrying four or five valises, each holding as much as a small steamer trunk, and the compartments are half-filled with such luggage. Every first-class car has a guard or porter who helps us off and on, and there are always fellahs at the depot ready to carry our stuff for 5 cents per piece.

Most of the Egyptian trains have a mail car next to the engine, an express car back of that and also cars for animals. Our train carries one, in which are two blanketed horses, with Syrian grooms to take care of them. They probably belong to some rich nabob of Cairo, and are going south by express.

The postal cars are carefully watched. The bags of mail are carried to them on red trucks made for the purpose. The trucks are pushed by the Arabs and mail is handled by them; but a dark-faced soldier, with rifle and sword, marches along with the mail and watches the bags taken in and out. When a truck is loaded the soldier goes with it to the postoffice wagons. There is always a guard on such Nile steamers as carry mail, and the letters are never left without some armed official to watch over them.

Government Railroads Which Pay.

Before we go on with our trip let me tell you how the railroads are managed. Both those of Egypt and the Soudan are under the government, and both systems pay. Those of Egypt, according to Lord Cromer's last report, are now earning about 6 per cent. on their capital stock, and their working expenses are only about 60 per cent. of the gross receipts. The business is rapidly increasing. They will carry 2,500,000 more passengers this year than last, and more than 1,000,000 tons more freight. Egypt now has something like 1500 miles of railroads which belong to the government, and in addition 600 or 700 miles of agricultural roads managed by private parties. The earnings of the latter are increasing, and they carry more freight and passengers from year to year.

The main lines are managed by Egyptian and European officials. The superintendents of departments, who receive $3000 and upward a year each, are mainly Europeans, and the inspectors and sub-inspectors, who get from $80 to $240 a month, are in the main foreigners. Under these men are the native guards, track workers and mechanics of various kinds, who receive less wages. They are almost all Egyptians, there being something like 2400 of them to about 150 Europeans.

As to the Soudan roads, they go through a thinly-populated country, but the receipts are considerably more than their working expenses, and they are rapidly increasing. In 1906 they were double what they 1903, the chief increase being from the fourth- sengers, who are natives.

Scenes on the Cape-to-Cairo Road.

This division of the Cape to Cairo road the richest countries on earth. I mean the Egypt, which is more thickly populated than part of the globe. The land is as black as and it raises two or three crops a year. It is $500 to $1000 an acre, and furnishes a heavy cotton and grain. The distance from Al Cairo is 133 miles, and all the way is through farms. There is no desert in sight until Cairo. Cotton is piled up at every depot, loads of it on the canals which the track at the stations cars of cotton bales fill the The freight of this region alone would probably expenses of the road, and in addition there passenger travel from Cairo to Alexandria parts of the Delta.

The next division above Cairo goes to is two or three hundred miles further comes the road from Assiout to Luxor, the narrow-gauge line from Luxor to these divisions are through the narrow Nile, with the desert in sight all the way. a thousand miles above Cairo the celebrated varies in width from nothing to about many places it is less than three miles wide. winds this way and that, but the railroad ratively straight, and it is often far amid the sand and rocks. THE CAPE TO CAIRO RAILROAD.

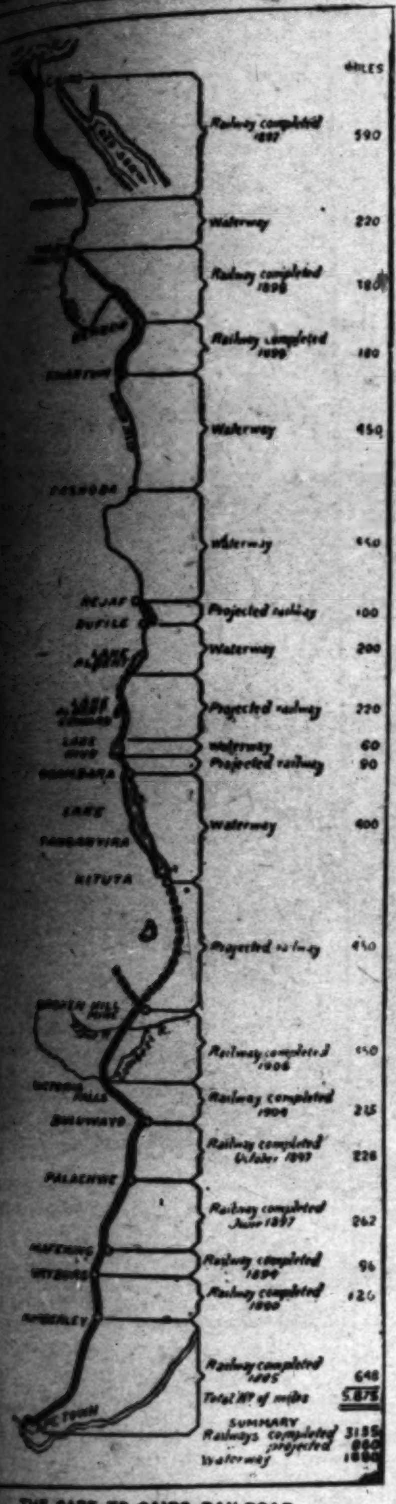
[illegible] strike the back of one's neck as he sits [illegible].

Through Nubia by Rail.

I found the conditions even worse in the Nubian Desert, which I crossed on the railroad from Wady Halfa [illegible]. That region is about the bleakest and dreariest on earth. It is all sand and rocks, with here and there a few thirsty mountain. The Nubians themselves call it "the stone belly," and the name is well chosen. The cars must be kept closed to keep out the dust. They have double windows and shutters, and in addition wooden hoods over the windows, in order that the [illegible] of the sun may not shine in. The cars have double roofs, and the doors have windows of smoked glass. There is so much dust that it comes in when



THE CAPE TO CAIRO RAILROAD.

[illegible] is shut, and the porter brushes out the cars [illegible] hour.

The scenery is dreary. The only water is that pumped [illegible] wells, and the stone stations have no green [illegible] about them. The stations have not even a [illegible]. They are known by numbers; and their only inhabitants are the railroad employés. This is the condition all the way from Wady Halfa to Abu Hamid, which [illegible] on the Nile some distance above the fourth [illegible].

[illegible] Military Railway.

This road is a part of the Soudan military railway, which extends from Wady Halfa to Halfaya. The line [illegible] is 576 miles long, and it has a gauge of only [illegible] inches. It is the road which was built by [illegible] during the war with the Mahdi. It was constructed in less than eighteen months by the English [illegible] and the soldiers, and is one of the most remarkable examples of railroad building on record. A [illegible] part of it was laid at the rate of one and one-[illegible] miles per day, and at one time more than three [illegible] were laid in one day. The track was constructed during the hottest time of the year, and the work was [illegible] that trains carrying 200 tons and drawn by engines weighing, without their tender, fifty tons, could travel safely over it at the rate of twenty-five miles per hour. It was built through a waterless desert, which had never been mapped until the surveyors went over it, and the survey camp was kept about six miles in advance of the rail head during its construction. There was always danger of attack by the Dervishes and the road was built through a hostile country.

Today the cars move as smoothly over Kitchener's tracks as they do over those of Egypt, and they give that country regular connection with the Soudan. There is now a train de luxe connecting Khartoum with Wady Halfa, and this has both sleeping and dining cars.

Soudan Sleepers and Diners.

The sleepers are divided up into compartments about seven feet square with two berths to each compartment. There is an aisle from which the compartments are entered, running along the side of the car, and the compartments are large enough to enable one to have a wicker chair in them, in addition to the berths. Each little room has an electric fan, and is lighted by electricity.

The dining-car service is good, and comparatively cheap. The meals consist of a cup of tea and some crackers, brought in by a Nubian porter at daybreak; a breakfast in the dining car at 8 o'clock, a table d'hote luncheon at 1 and a dinner along in the evening.

I have kept the notes of one luncheon and dinner. The lunch consisted of macaroni with cheese, broiled squabs, vegetable oysters, lamb chops and fried potatoes, a salad, preserved peaches, oranges and apples and a cup of Turkish coffee. The dinner began with soup and fish. These were followed by a salmi of pigeon, some spinach, roast chicken and fried potatoes, a salad, assorted preserves, fruit and coffee. The breakfast cost 50 cents, the lunch $1.20, the dinner $1.50 and the after-afternoon tea 30 cents. My bill was not presented until the end of the trip. By averaging it I find that my eating cost me 85 plastres, or $4.20, per day. The rates on that road also are dear. During ordinary seasons the first-class passage costs $35 for the 500 and odd miles, or between 6 and 7 cents a mile. When the tourist season begins the charges are raised to $50 one way or to $100 for the round trip. This is over 9 cents per mile.

In riding over the Soudan military road we stopped for a time at Atbara, where the Black Nile from Abyssinia flows into the main stream and where is the famous bridge built by Americans upon orders given by Gen. Kitchener. The contract was first offered to the English, but they were not able to build the bridge in the time required, and the Americans took the job and finished it. Atbara is now one of the railroad division points, and it is where the road across the desert to the Red Sea branches off. As we stopped at the station our engine struck me as being familiar. I walked to the front of the train and examined it. Sure enough, it was a Baldwin, and with the name "Philadelphia" standing out in the full blaze of the Nubian sun! A few moments later, as I was crossing the Black Nile over the steel bridge which our builders put up, I felt that I was being hauled by an American engine over an American bridge, and that in the heart of the Nubian desert, more than a thousand miles up the Nile. The thought makes one proud of our American mechanics and of American enterprise.

Where the Queen of Sheba Lived.

About 100 miles south of Atbara we stopped at Shendi, where the Queen of Sheba is said to have lived. This is a station on the east bank of the Nile, about five hours or more from Khartoum. It is a considerable town with railroad shops, about which are great piles of steel ties such as are used in the construction of desert railways. They are merely shells of steel, so made that they can be half buried in the sand and still hold the rails. The telegraph poles are also of steel, the white ants of this region making it impossible to use wood for such purposes.

The Shendi of today consists of an old and new town. The latter has been laid out by the English, and it has a park in the center watered by the Nile. In ancient times there was a great city here. It was the capital of the country and the residence of the Queen of Sheba. It is said that the Queen went from here down the Nile and crossed to Palestine, where she had her flirtation with King Solomon. The Abyssinians say that she went back by the Red Sea and stopped in their country on the way. While she was there she bore a son, whose father was Solomon and who is the head of the line of kings which rule Abyssinia today. The Mohammedans, on the other hand, say that the Queen of Sheba did not live here at all. They claim that her residence was in Yemen, Arabia, and that Solomon went there to visit her. The Queen's name was Bilkis. She was as witty as she was beautiful, and she gave the wise Solomon many a riddle which he was puzzled to answer.

Gold! gold! bewitching gold!
Precious metal, never to mold,
Rich in thy yellow, hot or cold,
Melted, beaten, twisted and rolled
Hard to get and harder to hold,
Hidden, stolen, bought and sold,
Begged and borrowed, begrudged and doled,
Worshiped today by young and old,
Passport free to Mammon's fold,
Cause of crimes that never were told,
Virtue bartered and honor sold,
All for thee, most beautiful gold.

Our Gold Well Guarded.

HOW THE UNITED STATES TREASURY IS PROTECTED.

By a Special Contributor.

CAREFUL readers have observed that whenever there is a panicky condition in New York's money market, the Secretary of the Treasury hastens to look into the situation, and, if possible, afford relief. As was stated by him: "Bad management by bad men produced the unfortunate condition recently."

The money which is used by the Secretary of the Treasury to avert panics is the money of the people, and it is well used when it is manipulated to relieve monetary stringencies. Visitors who enter the Fifteenth-street front of the Treasury at Washington observe inside the door of the first room to the left a small arsenal. It is a very small room, but it is the office of the captain of the Treasury watch, the man upon whom devolves the responsibility of protecting and defending all of the gold, silver, notes, bonds, bills and other securities of the government. This position has been held ever since 1871 by Harry A. Cobaugh.

Capt. Cobaugh recently told the writer that the large army revolvers in the case are distributed to the individual members of the watch force daily; and the Krag-Jorgensen rifles are for the use of the watchmen for the protection of the millions of the people, in the event of any overt act on the part of any marauding band that might be organized for loot. Although there is no prospect nor any seeming likelihood of any effort to capture the Treasury vaults, the watch force is organized and constantly ready for any emergency. Each man knows his position, and they are all as perfectly drilled as any military organization could be.

Previous to 1877 there were no rifles at the disposal of the Treasury watch force. In that year there were numerous riotous disturbances throughout the country, notably the riot at Pittsburgh, which was quelled only by force after many days. There were similar riots at Philadelphia and Baltimore. During the summer an anarchist named Cohen organized a band of lawless and riotous men. Daily and nightly he harangued them, and at last declared that all of the money in the Treasury belonged to the people, and ought to be distributed to the people.

At the instance of Capt. Cobaugh, a requisition was made on the War Department for rifles and revolvers. John Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury, and he was somewhat disturbed by the condition of the country, which led up to this demonstration right at the seat of government. Gen. Green B. Raum was Commissioner of Internal Revenue. He was a veteran soldier; a good one, too. By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury all of the clerks reported to Gen. Raum, individually, and he selected 500 able-bodied men for the defense of the Treasury. He drilled them nightly, and they were ready for any emergency that might arise. Finally Cohen marched to the Treasury one afternoon at the head of a band of more than a thousand malcontents. As he ascended the granite steps on Fifteenth street, Capt. Cobaugh came out onto the portico and met him. Swiftly placing his revolver against Cohen's left breast, he told him to order his followers to march on past the Treasury. Cohen did so. The riot was practically over. That was the occasion of first having rifles in readiness. They were the old Springfield rifles of 45 caliber. They have been replaced by modern Krags. The Colt's revolvers are of 45 caliber, with long barrels.

Out of this original call upon the War Department for ordnance there has grown a demand for weapons for the protection of all branches of the Treasury, so that, for the protection of the subtreasuries and mints the War Department now furnishes four Gatling guns; 300 feed cases for Gatlings; 1500 hand grenades; 137 Springfield carbines, caliber 45; 120 Colt's revolvers, caliber 45; 166 Colt's revolvers, caliber 38; 35 magazine rifles, caliber 30; 127 magazine carbines, caliber 30.

The ammunition supplied consists of 6000 revolver ball cartridges, caliber 38; 16,760 rifle ball cartridges, caliber 45; 4000 revolver ball cartridges, caliber 45; 13,000 carbine ball cartridges, caliber 45; 9000 Krag-Jorgensen ball cartridges, caliber 30.

The four Gatling guns, the 1500 hand grenades, 100 revolvers and 100 carbines, with ammunition for the same, are furnished to the subtreasury in New York. The remainder are supplied to the mints and subtreasuries at Philadelphia, New Orleans, Denver and San Francisco. The money now guarded in Washington amounts to $1,240,814,830, and is thus divided: United States notes, $72,175,000; gold certificates, $223,887,100; silver certificates, $33,951,200; gold coin, $9,035,528.28; silver dollars, $154,989,197; subsidiary silver, $452,414.55; minor coin, $13,287.43. Total, $494,503,727.26.

Bonds held: Security for bank circulation and deposits, $716,811,780.88; sinking fund District of Columbia, $3,624,739.72; miscellaneous trust funds, $25,874,582.55 2-3. Total, $746,311,103.15 2-3. Aggregate, $1,240,814,830.41 2-3.

The above includes new paper money held to replace unfit money redeemed and for use as otherwise required.

Vault No. 1, in which 105,000,000 silver dollars are stored, is 89 feet long, 51 feet wide and 12 feet high.

The vaults which contain all of this treasure are shown to scores of visitors every day; many thousands of traveling citizens having opportunity to see them annually. Guides are employed for this purpose, and viewing the millions of government money is one of the chief pleasures of sightseeing people.

New Seismic Freaks.

NATURE BEARS AN UNUSUAL CROP OF EARTHQUAKES.

By a Special Contributor.

OUR many seismic mysteries of recent weeks will be referred to the new international clearing-house for earthquake data that is now being opened for business in Strasburg, capital of Alsace-Lorraine.

A late seismic mystery was an earthquake shock which on October 17 gave Washington a half-inch twitch that knocked the writing hand of the official earthquake recorder clear off its score sheet. Although it was automatically recorded by a hundred or more of other instruments scattered over the face of the earth, and although these records show that at its center the disturbance was as terrific—perhaps far more so—than that which destroyed San Francisco or Kingston, not a soul in the whole world, civilized or uncivilized, appears to have felt the shock.

Straight Fence parted by Earthquake

Steaming Lake Bogoslof Island

New Mountain McCulloch Peak

But this new earthquake clearinghouse, lately constituted by coöperation of the powers—including us—is expected to determine where the center was. Records made by the scores of earthquake recorders scattered over the world are to be sent into this central station, those of the American instruments through Prof. H. Fielding Reid of Johns Hopkins University. Data from ten American instruments will be coming to Prof. Reid before the year is out.

New instruments are being installed at Ancon, on the Panama Canal; at Harvard and at the University of Colorado, while they have already been installed at Washington, Albany, two points in Maryland—Baltimore and Cheltenham—and at three in California—Oakland, Berkeley and Mount Hamilton. Then we have in our territory four more—at Honolulu, Sitka, Manila and in Porto Rico. Canada has three more and Latin-America two.

But how can the now unknown centers of these last two mysterious earthquakes be located at the world's new central bureau at Strasburg? A few years ago science would have sniffed at the student promising such a feat now made possible by improved instruments.

Computing Distance of a Quake.

First the distance of the earthquake center is computed. In press reports of recent shocks recorded by our instruments you perhaps have noted estimates that the center was so many thousands of miles away. Now the hand which keeps the earthquake score of our most modern instruments rests on a revolving cylinder and works gradually from edge to edge, like the fine chisel of a planing lathe. Under the hand is a paper, fastened about the cylinder, and the line traced day and night on this sheet is straight so long as Mother Earth remains normal. But when she quakes the hand trembles from side to side, writing a zigzag, slight at first, in the typical case, then dying down almost to a straight line, then swelling more than before, then subsiding again, and finally striking out boldly across the sheet on the record of the main shock. Now the rule has lately been deduced that the number of seconds between the first and second preliminary tremors when multiplied by eight and one-tenth (8.1) gives the distance of the center of disturbance in miles. Say that this distance as measured off by dots where minutes have been measured on the paper equals 5 minutes 9 seconds, or 309 seconds. Multiply by 8.1 and you have 2509 miles as the approximate distance lying between the quake's center and the instrument.

Locating the Center.

But this does not give the location of the center. It is 2500 miles away, but in what direction? Now when the new international clearinghouse receives from many different stations records of one of the mysterious quakes of the past few weeks it may proceed in this way: Suppose that the main shock was first felt at Tokio at three seconds past noon, at Hawaii five seconds past, at Sitka eleven seconds past, and at Washington twenty-seven seconds past. It will then be evident that of the four stations Tokio was nearest the origin or center of the disturbance. The distance from each point having an instrument is estimated as above. Then a map is laid down on a table and a compass describes around each of these points a circle having a radius proportionately equal to this distance. The common area where the greatest number of circles overlap is marked on the map as the probable locality of the mysterious earthquake's origin. The discoverer of this interesting method is Dr. Omori, secretary of the earthquake commission of Japan, who while studying the great San Francisco disaster was twice mobbed by anti-Japanese hoodlums of the Pacific Coast. Dr. Omori has been in Washington within the past few weeks. Lately he visited the Weather Bureau, whose new seismograph, or earthquake recorder, was invented by this same distinguished Japanese. Prof. Marvin, in charge of the instrument, took Dr. Omori to see it, and by a strange coincidence it commenced to record a great earthquake while the eyes of the inventor were fixed upon it.

Sixty-one earthquakes have been recorded on the Washington instrument in the last year. This was an average of over five per month, one every six days. Only about five of these are known tive at their centers, and none would in Washington had not the gover been working, although the ground much as half an inch. Since 1907 have been recorded nine quakes for the weather bureau to issue ing them. But the great majority are unaccompanied by any news ena noticed anywhere on the hence are believed to be "sea quake der the oceans. Few of their centers til the year's data have passed through inghouse at Strasburg.

See Quake Freaks of This Fall.

But how does the "sea quake" cently dawned upon your correspondent ment maintains in Washington a for data concerning all phenomena contours of our ocean beds. HE LEARNS ABOUT HOUSES AND HOUSEWORK IN THE EAST.

From a Special Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.)—Back in prehistoric times I believe I used to build various edifices with blocks, and from that day to this, I thought that I knew what was meant by the term "house." Since coming to Philadelphia, I have learned my mistake. And I'll venture that there are a lot of western-born people who would not know what a house is any more than did I when I came to Philadelphia. Look down that street: The front walls of whatever it is that they have built there extend in one unbroken line from one street to the next. There are windows and doors, but no other architectural annotations upon the monotonous surfaces of these walls. What do you call it? A house? Wrong! That thing, my friend, is "houses." Yes, sir! Separate and distinct houses, thirty-four of them in that block, owned by thirty-four different families, each living in its own house, and yet the whole thirty-four have but one front wall, and the only means of identification is the numbers on the doors. If some small boy should change those numbers some afternoon, I wonder what would happen when the husbands came home to roost that night? The thought is too awful to contemplate.

Most of these "houses," however, are rented of landlords, which does not change the situation much, except that if you got into the wrong house, you could leave the neighborhood if necessary. But the effect of such building is dreary beyond comprehension of those who have not seen it. Miles and miles of these block houses built like sandwiches, with no front yard but the sidewalk and no back yard except the garbage pail. And I have seen block after block where the garbage boxes were in front of the houses all day long, festering in the sun until some slow-going ash man came after it. In the Italian quarter of New York I saw a pile of trash in front of every door, the dogs and children nosing it about and picking out such choice tid-bits as suited the canine or juvenile fancy. I suppose that sometime somebody was to come and take the filth away somewhere, but it did not happen while I was in that part of town.

In an aristocratic suburb of Philadelphia I saw a stream of greasy dishwater running down the gutter of every street in town. I investigated a little and found that this was the only method of disposing of the drainage from the kitchens and laundries. What they did with the sewage proper, I did not stay long enough to find out. I had seen enough for one day.

I saw a sign "Rooms for Rent" on one of these brick walls in Philadelphia, and used the opportunity to investigate. The woman in charge of the house was an intelligent, ladylike person, who showed me through the house. The second floor was for rent furnished. The front room had a window on the street, and the back room had one on the alley. Between the two were a middle room which had one window opening into a sort of shaft, and a bathroom and toilet opening into the hallway. The bathroom was dark except for the gas light. The suite she assured me was a very desirable one and worthy of my serious consideration. I did seriously consider what I saw, and went on my way in a reflective state of mind.

Miles of these brick walls, with no spear of grass nor growing tree, blocks after blocks of unbroken rows of windows and doors, with the streets swarming with children like fleas in a pig pen; the sight is thought-provoking. In the late afternoon, every doorstep is ornamented with a woman more or less weary and disheveled after the day's work, leaning wearily against the door and gossiping or quarreling with her neighbor.

"This is tenement life everywhere," you say. But that is just where I made my mistake. These are not tenements. These are "houses." Philadelphia boasts that she has no tenements, and these sandwich houses are of course better than the awful swarming nine-story death-traps of the older New York. But how would you like to live in one of these numbered holes in the brick wall?

There are a lot of quaint, old-fashioned gothic roofs here that date back a hundred years or more, and they give the old part of the city a colonial flavor that is exceedingly interesting. White stone steps and casings with the old brick walls make a unique combination and the old narrow windows suggest the days when glass was a luxury.

"But there are real houses in Philadelphia?" Not very many, except in the suburbs. The trouble here is they have got the blockhouse habit and don't know how to build decently. Out on the edge of town you will see one of those awful brick blocks right in the middle of a field where there is plenty of room to build separate cottages, or at least two or three houses in one bunch. I saw some blocks of houses built two together, and inadvertently called them "double houses." I was promptly corrected. These are "twin houses," and, being rare, are expensive. A double house is a house with a hall running through the middle of it. Out in the high-toned suburbs, they have real houses with green lawns around them, as we have in California, and they rent for $50 or $100 a month.

That's a tender question, just as it is anywhere else. A few people have white help. But they pay for it, not only in coin of the realm, but in the lives of terror that they lead. Every act of the day, every event of life must be ordered in accordance with the wishes of the help. What we shall eat and drink, and wherewithal we shall be clothed, and especially when it shall be done, is all foreordained by the help. The servants strut about the house ordering its events, breaking the dishes and stealing the valuables, while the owners cow in terror and cringe every time the door opens. Is the coffee too strong? Don't ask for hot water, the girl is a little off today, and might not like it. Would you like to put on a clean collar? Don't mention it. The maid is cross this morning, and has not yet sorted the laundry. Would you like to invite a friend home to dinner tonight? Don't think of it! No telling what "she" might think. The last one quit because you stayed out after 10 o'clock one night, and this one has been here but three days. I do hope that she has a good opinion of us! There is so much in first impressions you know."

And by the way! Don't let me hear the word "servant" again! Nor "hired girl," either. Not even "help!" No, sir! Does not the good Book say that the head of the house is to be the "servant" of all, or words to that effect? Well, this day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. As for "help," may heaven help you if you fall into the clutches of these leeches. As for "hired girls," is not the engagement made by the maid, and references demanded of the employer? No, sir; the proper and only term is "maid," and it must be pronounced in a respectful tone of voice, too, or even that does not go. I heard the other day of a man and wife who went to the seashore with nine maids and two menservants! Think of that! Surely those people will have no need to pass through the fires of purgatory.

To be sure, there are lots of colored folks here, and they make their living by working(?) (for) those who will hire them. They are not so domineering in their management of their employers, and in some ways are more agreeable as living companions, but when it comes to doing the work they are pretty generally failures.

I observed one case of a girl named Wilhelmina. Her employer called her "Wooley" (Willie) for short, and she was, for her kind, fair to look upon. She was a specialist in her own department, which appeared to consist of eating and resting with occasional social stunts in the way of two days off and a grand excursion "downtown." The lady of the house was obliged to use strenuous efforts to get her out of bed in the morning, and when up, she could not cook, she only washed the dishes and made herself agreeable with the hired men.

Lots of people cut it all out and do their own work. So do we. When we rented the house, the landlord asked if we would keep help. I told him that we had troubles enough without anything like that. He grinned and said that he guessed we all had, for that matter. I don't mind doing housework (much,) but I am too lazy to wait on a "maid," and too cranky to be bossed about by any of these high-and-mighty autocrats of the breakfast table. I won't have it, and if we eat bread and milk, why bread and milk goes; that's all. However, it has not come to that yet.

This doing your own housework is not what it is cracked up to be, however. I've had a good deal of experience of many sorts, but I found a new one today. Yesterday we moved into our new house. It's half of a twin house out in a beautiful green suburb, with a lawn about it and vines all over it. We laid in a supply of grub, and this morning the queen of our household said to me: "George, you get up and make the fire." She said it pleasantly, and as I was used to that, I at once complied with that cheerful obedience for which I am noted.

I descended to the kitchen. The stove was there all right, and it looked very much like stoves that I had before met on the battlefield. The coal was in the cellar. They said it was hard coal, but I supposed that made no difference. I got some paper, and split up some green oak wood for kindling (there was nothing else,) and began to whistle softly a familiar hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," I think it was. Well, the paper burned all right, and then the dying smoke began to vanish with that sickening sense of irreparable loss that comes under such circumstances. "Well, no matter," I soliloquized, "difficulties are good for nothing but to be overcome. Here's for another try." Just as I got the charred ruins out of the stove, a gentle voice called downstairs: "Is the water in the kettle boiling yet?" "Not quite," I replied, truthfully, and quickly rearranged the elements of my embryonic conflagration.

Well, the third trial did get that wood to burn, and after about forty-five minutes I thought I could see that one corner of a little piece of coal was beginning to redden. By this time the entire family was present to encourage me with comments upon my progress and the show began to get interesting. I tore paper, I split kindling, I pounded coal, I longed for petroleum and solitude, I consoled the hungry children with tales of camping trips, when we lived for weeks upon a single bacon rind, and at last that hard-shell coal began to warm up and burn a little. In an hour and three-quarters you could feel the warmth by placing your hand on the top of the stove, and by 10:30 it was hot enough to cook breakfast. Two hours before I had resolved to take a half-day off. When we sat down to our early dinner, as we decided to call it, I elaborately explained to the family that this hard coal was slow in starting, but that when it did get going, it was a hummer, and no mistake. I had heard that it would get hot enough to do the cooking for all day in a few minutes. Then I got my hat and fled to the office, and I have not had the nerve to go home yet, and here it is 6 p.m. The fact of the matter is that I am wondering what about tomorrow morning. To have breakfast at 7 a.m. I will have to get up at the unrighteous hour of 2:30 and labor with that stove till 6 a.m., by which time, perhaps, the fire will be hot. I wonder how the men in this country manage to look so cheerful when they come down on the 7:49 train?

But I'm from the West, and there are a lot of things that I don't know yet, and what's more, I don't intend to stay long enough to learn them all. I am going back where they do things in a civilized way. If any of you fellows there want to trade jobs with me and see the world, and start this old fire every morning, speak up. I'm open to conviction.

A Day Among Moors.

A VISIT OF THREE LOS ANGELES GIRLS TO TANGIER.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN the little bewhiskered Cook's agent on Waterport street in Gibraltar sold our party our tickets to Tangier, he warned us that we were going into a "country forgotten of God," but we little dreamed how near he came to the truth, for we were too interested watching the parade of strange peoples that filled the narrow sidewalks and crowded over into the roadway. We certainly had no idea that the city we were about to visit would soon be filled with French and German soldiers and the shrieks of the natives would be stilled by the boom of the cannon. Our guide, Mustafa, would have been perfect only he wore modern, even fashionable, shoes and golf stockings. He was a tall, swarthy Moor, swathed in a fine array of colored robes and coats and a huge white turban around his fez. We afterward forgave him his error in shoes and clung close to his flying garments, for we all felt during what followed that he alone stood between us and death or some of the natives. Keeping close to Mustafa was no easy matter, for never have I seen such strides as his brown legs made as they burst from his flying draperies. Our party was breathless when he led us aboard the Gibel Dersa, a little 700-ton steamer that was to carry us around the point to Tangier on the northern coast of Africa. The voyage was very rough, and nearly all the passengers except our party were ill, much to the amusement of some big Moors who stood haughtily gazing at the unfortunates, and only hugging their cloaks tighter as a heavy wind or wave struck the vessel. If you are seasick, it does not matter much whether the Moor or any other man likes it or not, but when one man does not sympathize with his seasick brother it shows he is a pretty poor sort, and the kind you would hate to beg quarter from in case of need in his own country. I talked to the most fiercely-scarred one of the group, who openly despised foreigners and foreign civilization. His particular grievance was the threat of the Algerian Council to establish police in Tangier.

"Let them try," he said, "we show them. My Sultan, he kill them all."

When you realize the grade of civilization that has been thrust upon them you can hardly blame the Moors for not welcoming it, even though their arguments may not be wholly ethical. Some one has said that no one ever goes to Tangier to remain, except with some one else's money or some one else's wife. Every resident is there for a reason. Architects whose structures the earthquake showed were built with pins, some bankers and politicians from the United States, and a few titled gentlemen frequently seen at Monte Carlo to say nothing of several beautiful women from the courts of Europe, have found the climate of Tangier particularly necessary to their health and peace of mind. When you think what the Moor knows of us, and how little else he knows, you can scarcely criticize him for not respecting what we cast off. He hates everything civilized from the uninvited tourist, forcing his way into his streets with cries and sticks, to the big automobile his Sultan persists in using.

Among his people, Mustafa stood apart. He belonged to the upper class, and had the elaborate manners of a court gentleman. He had six languages at his command and, what was more to the point, a huge hood from which he produced oranges, figs and nuts. At first we hesitated to eat them, thinking

Tangier has no hospitals, no water-works, no sewer system, no public schools and no public buildings of any description or kind, so it is small wonder that the prison is in such a state.

Wearily we made our way to the hotel, and parted with our donkey drivers, who screamed at those who gave small fees, because they had not received enough, and screamed at those who feed them well because they thought they might get more. Dinner that evening would have passed in gloomy, hungry silence had it not been for the Chronic Grumbler who sat at the long table. He had been traveling for thirty-five years, and had seen nothing that pleased him yet. We were so amused by his tales of woe that we almost forgot the awful food. Course after course appeared only to be refused, much to the bewilderment of the turbaned Moors who served us. Most of the dishes looked as Tangier smelled. I need say no more.

Later Mustafa took us to a café chantant. One Moor, with an odd-shaped lantern, pretended to light our stony way as we followed stumbling and splashing in the rain and slush. Not one street lamp did we see as we made one dark turn after another. Finally we came to a narrow lighted stairway, which we climbed with many misgivings. Once up, it was not at all spooky. There sat a number of Moors, cross-legged on the floor, singing Andalusian airs and swaying with the twang of their stringed instruments. Occasionally they stopped to smoke long, slender pipes or sipped coffee or hot wine. We visitors were allowed to sit on benches and were served the famous Moorish coffee, which, dear friend, avoid as the plague, for it is sweet, thick like molasses, and has a horrible taste. It was a weird scene, and needed only the dancers to make it complete. When the air grew too thick we left and followed the queer old lantern and the ever-faithful Mustafa to the hotel with its welcome but incongruous electric lights.

The next morning from our balcony, far from the beggars, the dogs and the donkeys, we looked upon the bay and the flat roofs where one could walk from house to house. The old cannon pointing seaward lay beneath us. It was a fascinating picture, such as the ordinary traveler seldom views. We could see the men rise from the beach below, shake themselves like dogs and wade out to the queer little sailboats that bobbed in the harbor. Some stretched themselves half-naked on the rocks in the rising sun. It seemed as if we had stepped back centuries and centuries. With all its noise and smell, Tangier has a strange charm.

When we started to return to the Gibel Dersa, the blue flag, indicating rough weather, was flying, but after extra fees the natives rowed us to the steamer. When we reached the open sea a storm struck us and our little craft pitched and rolled until it seemed as if she could never right herself. We had an English captain, trusty and true, and he brought us safely into port after about five hours. Once we thought Gibraltar strange, but now we welcomed the British soldiers gratefully as old friends. We stepped from the boat, glad that we had visited Tangier, but thankful that it was a joy of the past. In spite of our physical discomforts we would not have missed its charm and primitiveness.

The next time we visit Tangier, the tardy Algerian council, forced to action, will have spoiled the city from a tourist's point of view. They are threatening to clean it, truly a herculean task requiring the courage of the Gold Dust Twins. Bold painted signs will point our way so that Mustafa will no longer be necessary to guide our footsteps, but will we not need him just the same, for can any council of nations civilize that barbarous people in a day?

GRACE WHITE LAVAYEA.

ACROSS SIBERIA.

OVER FIVE THOUSAND MILES WITH BUT ONE CHANGE OF CARS.

[New York Post:] Siberia has a great future. It is a country half again as large as Europe, with enormous rivers, vast timber wealth, extensive deposits of metal and coal, and in the southern section over a thousand miles of fertile farming land. Situated midway between the markets of Europe and of Asia, it is bound to become rich and populous. A foreigner's impression of Siberia is usually obtained through the windows of the world-famous Trans-Siberian express. This train leaves Moscow three times a week, and with only one change of cars, at Irkutsk, reaches Vladivostok, on the Pacific, a distance of 5527 miles, after a little over eleven days. It is too high praise to call this one of the most "luxurious trains in the world," as one writer has done, but it certainly is provided with all the comforts needed on a long journey. It is made up of a baggage, a dining, one first-class and two second-class cars. The second-class cars, which are fitted up in light oak, have eight staterooms each, opening from a corridor which runs along the side of the car. Each stateroom has two upper and two lower berths. During the day the upper berth may be lowered and the compartment made roomy and comfortable. The first-class has more handsome furnishings of polished cherry, but the chief advantage which it possesses over the second lies in the fact that the staterooms are not so crowded; as a rule, each accommodates but two persons. The dining-car, open to both classes alike, furnishes excellent fare at cheaper rates than the Siberian hotels; a glass of tea costs 5 cents, and a four-course dinner, with coffee, 65 cents. One part of the car, which may be used for reading and writing, is provided with a small library of Russian and French works. Considering the excellence of the service, the price of the tickets for the Trans-Siberian express is very low. For the eleven days' trip it costs, including sleeping accommodations, $145 first-class and $95 second-class.

Although the traveler from London reaches Japan, for example, twelve days earlier via Siberia than by the Suez route, yet the time across the continent could be still further shortened, for the average rate of speed made from Moscow to Vladivostok is only twenty miles an hour. This is due in a large measure to the many long stops made; the train is scheduled to be under way hardly more than twenty-one out of every twenty-four hours.

The Trans-Siberian express is far superior in both speed and comfort to the ordinary train by which the majority of Russians usually travel, even though they belong to the well-to-do class. The ordinary train through Siberia, which changes cars some half a dozen times, takes over four days longer from Moscow to Vladivostok than does the express, but for the 5500 miles costs but $50 second-class.

When the typical Russian travels he goes from the hotel to the depot in a droshky, a ride which costs from 20 to 30 cents; at the depot a porter takes his collection of bags, bandboxes, rugs and pillows into the railroad restaurant, where he drinks tea while the porter buys the ticket. After a time the train pulls in and the army of porters, each staggering under a heavy load, rushes for the platform. After a fierce pushing and struggling, during which maybe the car window is broken, the baggage is all deposited in the best seats, and the travelers leisurely follow their porters, give tips of from 10 to 20 cents each, and wait for the train to start. Soon the loud station bell is given one stroke. This is a warning that in ten minutes, perhaps, it will ring again; the second time it is given two strokes, signifying that in a short time, from a few seconds to five minutes, it will ring a third time. Finally three strokes are given; the conductor gives a shrill whistle, the locomotive shrieks once more, and then gradually, almost imperceptibly, the train pulls away. Each time a stop is made most of the same solemn process is repeated. On one day, by actual reckoning, the train's schedule called for stops which aggregated nine and a half hours out of the twenty-four. There were two four-hour waits, five of twenty and eight of ten minutes each.

When night comes on, each long car is carefully lighted by a few tallow candles; the backs of the long seats are raised to serve for upper berths; each person arranges two big pillows for his head, wraps himself in his rug and goes to sleep. In the morning there is never any difficulty in getting tea or coffee, no matter at what time one awakes, for the train will soon make a ten or twenty-minute stop at some station which has an excellent buffet. On such a long trip as the Siberian most people make their own tea; in the morning and the late afternoon stops a crowd of first, second and third-class passengers may be seen hurrying, each with his kettle, to the great stoves, where the railroad furnishes boiling water free of charge. In Siberia the peasant women are waiting at each station with all kinds of provisions; they sell a large bottle of milk, which holds three glasses, for 2½ cents, or a hot roasted chicken for 20, or a small game bird for 10 cents.

The Trans-Siberian line is a great credit to Russia. It is marvelous that this one-track road could carry half a million men some 5000 miles and keep them provisioned and reënforced. The roadbed is in good condition, probably about as good as that of the average American line. Some of the way the bed is rock-ballasted. The rails are heavy and there are frequent sidings; at relatively unimportant stations it is not infrequent to see six or seven, and in large towns, ten or twelve parallel tracks. Over the Urals, for a distance of some 200 or 300 miles, a second track is very nearly ready for use; in fact, for some few miles it is in regular operation. For about 100 miles west of Irkutsk, too, the work is beginning for a double track.

A "COWGIRL" RACE.

It was a great day; 'most everybody in Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska was there or represented, and from Texas and Arizona to Idaho and Montana came cowmen, to help Cheyenne celebrate "Pioneer Days." The show started with a series of thoroughbred races. Then followed exhibitions of hat-picking contests from horseback, "tater" contest, as one of the committeemen announced, in which two boxes were set on the track twenty-five feet apart, one filled with potatoes, and riders, with sharpened sticks, six feet in length, struggled to spear the spuds in the one box and empty them in the other. It counted one point to do this and two to knock the potato off the lance of another. Not during the entire three days did the crowds become so electrified as they did during the ladies' relay race. It was for two miles, and the most exciting contest of the show. In this number the girls had to change cow ponies each half mile, unsaddle the old and saddle the new mounts, before starting the ensuing relay. Miss Dierdon won by 100 yards on the first lap, but Miss Pawson, who finished third, was the first one to get going again and to finish that relay. On the start of the third, her pony bucked her off, but she was up and on him when Miss Dierdon started and was similarly dismounted. Miss Pawson opened up 100 yards on the last lap, but her mount was not the equal of her rival's, still running second, so she saved him, and wisely, for the home stretch, where by excellent jockeying she won by a head. It was all very wonderful, seeing these three girls riding hard running and often pitching horses for two miles, unsaddle and saddle, with danger always ahead.—[Sol Metzger in Recreation.

"No. What of him?" we inquired.

A VISIT TO VERMONT AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' ABSENCE.

By a Special Contributor.

TO be born in Vermont—that is good. To live one's life in Southern California, that is good. But to go back to Vermont for a visit after an absence of twenty-five years, ah, that is best of all. From the spiky palm to the sugar maple—from the roses to the goldenrod—from the Sierra Nevadas to the Green Mountains—from arroyos and cacti to bubbling brooks and ferns and damp mosses and the touch of Jack Frost's wanton fingers on the maple leaves—from seer October of the southland, the last month of the dry season, when everything is brown and the dust is knee-deep, to crisp October of the northland when the frost has glorified the foliage, and the meadows are green, these are contrasts which make life worth the living.

After the rugged grandeur of the snow-capped Sierras and the Cascades aflame with forest fires, the gentle rolling Green Mountains are exquisitely beautiful, clothed in their robes of green meadows, rich gold and wine of maple trees and the darker green of the firs and hemlocks. A quarter of a century had not changed them. Is it possible that I dreamed it could have? Neither has it changed the stuffy day coaches on the mountain road, nor the crowding on and off of the Vermonters at every station. A quarter of a century has not changed the station which is my destination. The neat New England cemetery across the track, with its white picket fence, has a few more headstones, perhaps. Across the little river the one pretentious house has a fresh coat of white paint, perhaps ten years old now, with the green blinds, all reflected back from the placid bosom of the water. In an instant I am a little girl of 6, clinging closely to my mother's hand, tremblingly awaiting the coming of the monster which is to whirl me away into the Far West; a little girl who has never before seen a train. Almost do I feel again the fearful thrill which curdled the childish heart at sight and sound of the roaring creature that swung around the sharp curve just beyond the station. The train which has left me is flirting its tail out of sight on that very curve, and I turn to the waiting stage, and my baggage. The stage is a new one, not in years, for it is rusty and has much sagging in its decrepit springs. But it is new in design. The one which brought me as a child was a closed-bus sort of affair. This one is simply a three-seated wagon with a top, and a rack in the rear for trunks. But the driver is the same. Him I had not thought of for five and twenty years. All the sights and odors and characteristics of my quaint old native State have remained keenly brilliant in my memory all the many years, but at the first sight of the stage driver whom I remembered immediately when I saw him again, I realized that faces had never been reflected in the child memory. He peered at me closely, for I was the only strange passenger. His chin whiskers were grayer, no doubt, than in years gone by. He was a spare, tall man with a twinkling blue eye and a thin, curious voice.

"Goin' to Morgan's be ye? Any relation? Don't say? So you be Ziba Wentworth's grand-girl. I vum. Grandma Wentworth, she's a mighty spry old lady. Seed her at your Uncle Morgan's yistday. Be you the young lady they's expecting from Californy? I want to know."

He packed my baggage slowly away, quizzing at me with his friendly, sociable eyes. "Favor your aunt, don't ye? All them Wentworths git stout. Your Uncle Nathan, now, he never did git any flesh on his bones. He's doin' mighty poorly this year! I want to know! Of course I remember; you and your ma went out to Californy to where your pa was, yes, yes. I druv ye down behind Nip and Tuck, yes, yes. I got a new stage the next year, I rec'lect. Both dead? Sho, you don't say. Been married ten years, you say. I vum!"

We clattered down the steep village street and pulled up at the weather-worn postoffice. A youngish woman came out with some mail. She looked at me with wide-eyed curiosity. "Mis' Morgan's niece come all the way frum Californy," the driver said, with a hunch of his shoulder toward me, for I had claimed a front seat, with the childish desire not to miss the first sight of old familiar landmarks. She flushed up as I inclined my head, but said nothing. We drove on, across the covered wooden bridge, which spanned the little river. There came to my ears the sound of falling water, the sound never to be forgotten in all the years of living in a desert country. It was the sound which had lulled me to sleep in my homesick childhood, the sound which had soothed my delirium in my one sickness, the sound I strained my ears to hear in every measure of fine music, the sound of the mountain stream as it dashed itself to death over a dam into a narrow gorge. Beside the dam was a whirring mill.

"G'an," says the old driver in his piping voice, to his horses as they lag a little at the foot of a tortuous hill. "What you gauming along like that fer. G'an."

The horses take the hill at a labored gallop. I look off across the gorge to the luxuriant mountain sides, and breathe deep of contentment. Never could there be such a riot of color, such blazing of crimson and gold as on these Vermont hills in October. Along the road there is ragged goldenrod, and in the fence corners blue asters like bits of sky, amid brambles of blackberries and clematis. I rhapsodize considerably.

"Guess ye don't see nothin' like this out in Californy," quizzes the old man, peering at me from under his bushy eyebrows.

"No, nothing half so exquisite in all the whole wide world," I say, faithless to my glorious California. He takes me into his heart after that.

The dear old road—hardly a step of the way have I forgotten—follows along the bawling river, rushing its clear brown water impetuously over boulders, with the roar and abandon which does my starved heart good. Water has been such a priceless, precious thing all my life, that to waste a drop was wanton crime. Clean, modest farmhouses nestle along the roadside. They are so immaculate in their white dresses and green fixings, and so thoroughly New England. After adobe, and stucco, and tiles and Spanish architecture, what could be a greater contrast than a Vermont farmhouse? Seed corn tied in golden bunches hangs against the side of almost every porch. There are gabled ends and fronts to most of the houses. The woodshed, windowless, is oftentimes one end of the structure. It is always painted white, and has a gabled end.

We come to another tiny village, with its church spire, its shaded street, the maples all aflame, and the earth sidewalk strewn with the gay-colored leaves, its store and postoffice, and just beyond, the dam, and the mill. This mill has great lumber piles about it. It whirrs and clatters until it drowns out the roar of the falling water. There is the pungent spicy odor of pine clapboards, which sweeps a wave of homesick child remembrance over me. The bark-covered resinous heaps of firewood are the acme of luxuriousness to the householder to whom firewood is a scarce and expensive necessity.

We pass many loads of lumber. The horses move slowly along. They have come from far up in the mountain and have been traveling with their heavy loads since early morning. The drivers are mostly boys. They grin sheepishly at the jocose remarks of the stage driver, and cast shy, inquisitive glances at me. At a narrow point in the road, there are three drawn up to allow the passage of the United States mail. The old driver regaled me with many stories of his forty years of travel along the way. But I scarce heed him. I am eagerly scanning all the intimate old spots, so clear in my memory. There is a lump in my throat. I see the road leading up Shepherd's Brook to where grandfather's old farm was. The same dilapidated sign posts point with debilitated fingers in the three directions. It is here that Shepherd's Brook sprawls with boisterousness into Mad River. The trees arch overhead, and frost's fingers have been laid heavily on the north slope. My heartache is lost in an ecstacy over the glorious coloring of the maples. A a day or two

Mrs. Annie Yeamans.

TO SEEK REST AFTER SIXTY-TWO YEARS ON THE STAGE.

By a Special Contributor.

A QUAINT little woman, with silvery hair and kindly old wrinkled face, stood quietly in the side of the stage. An array of gay [illegible] girls and dancers [illegible] gay skirts [illegible] lingerie across [illegible] approvingly [illegible] It [illegible] musical [illegible] which [illegible] the principals [illegible] chorus back [illegible] Suddenly [illegible] at the side away from [illegible] forward into the flood [illegible] black and gray skirt in her hands, and showing just the edge of a snowy petticoat did a graceful little jig, full of intricate steps, yet without the boisterousness which would have robbed the small, quaint figure of a certain dignity.

Why did the audience applaud like mad, then cheer, whistle and shout? Why did some, forgetting the conventional manner which should accompany evening dress, half rise from their seats to emphasize their enthusiasm?

Why? Because the little old woman was the unique figure of the stage today, the "Grand Old Woman" of the profession—Mrs. Annie Yeamans—who began to act before most of the audience saw the light of day, and was a veteran ere the majority passed beyond the realms of childhood.

ANNIE YEAMANS AND HER DAUGHTER JENNIE, WHO DIED LAST YEAR.

November 19 will bring Mrs. Yeamans to the seventy-second milestone on the journey of life, and this season rounds out the sixty-second that she has been before the public.

Sixty-two years as a performer! And now, upon her birthday, she will quit the stage, leaving behind a record such as is written few times in the annals of Thespis. She goes from the stage, but she will still remain a part of it, aside from mere memory, for she will open a school of acting and shed the light of her vast experience upon aspirants for histrionic honors.

And what an experience it is! Beginning as a girl with a circus in Australia, it takes her through the rough days of the gold craze, then into half-savage China and Japan, then to San Francisco and across to New York, before the days of the great transcontinental railroads; through stock, farce and comic opera—raising a family all the while—and finally leaves her a lonely old woman, but with the laurels of her great work and unique position to console her.

"I am all alone in the world," she said the other day. "My husband died in 1868. My two elder daughters and mother and father, whom I brought to America from Australia, in the early seventies, died prior to 1892, and the only joy I had left in life, my daughter, Jennie Yeamans, passed away last Thanksgiving Day.

"I declare, it's a wonder that I am not a hardened old hag. But I'm not, really I'm not. My heart is just as soft as it ever was."

The tears streamed down her wrinkled cheeks as she said this and clouded her gold-rimmed spectacles. But she took off the glasses quickly, wiped away the mist and resumed her usual cheerful demeanor as she talked of the old days when she first began to act.

Born in the Isle of Man, seventy-two years ago, Mrs. Yeamans was the daughter of William Griffiths, a Welsh singer, and his Manx wife. She was only a year old when her parents took her out to Sydney, New South Wales, where her father had an engagement in a stock company which opened Sydney's first theater.

For several years the little family moved about Australian towns, the father playing at various theaters. When Annie was ten years old, her parents thought it was time for her to help earn her living, so they got a child's part for her, that of "Little Julia," in a piece called "A Farmer's Daughter." She took lessons in ballet dancing, too, and soon attained a proficiency which, despite her years, remains until today.

Having learned to dance, Annie and her brother William were apprenticed to a tailor in Sydney, who was organizing a circus troupe. The tailor collected a company composed chiefly of "ticket-of-leave" men, ex-convicts who had been performers in the old country.

With this rough element, little Annie played in various places for several years. She learned something of riding, and used to dance on a flat pad on a running horse, jumping through paper hoops and skipping rope.

Gold was discovered at Melbourne just about the time the girl and her brother finished their apprenticeship, and the Griffiths family moved there with the crowd, getting an engagement with an American circus then playing in the town. Mrs. Yeamans tells how drunken miners, who came to see the show, flung gold nuggets into the ring as she rode, but adds that she never got any, as the circus hands gathered them up as quickly as they fell.

The circus girl had grown to be a young woman by this time—and a pretty young woman, too. In the same troupe was a young clown from New York—Edward Yeamans. He fell in love with Annie, and she married him out of pique—just to get even with an old sweetheart with whom she had quarreled in Sydney, and who had married another girl.

From the circus ring she and her husband went gold prospecting, and failing at that, they came back under the canvas again, going with a company to Java, and then to Singapore, Hongkong and Shanghai. In Shanghai her daughter Jennie, then a baby of six months, contracted cholera, and when her mother wasn't dancing she was nursing the sick child.

The Yeamans's fortunes took them next to Yokohama, and on the voyage Jennie got well. Finally Yeamans got an offer from Charles Wheatley, who was running the Eureka Theater in San Francisco, and the little family sailed by clipper for the Golden Gate. They remained there for a year and then went to New York, where Yeamans joined another circus, which drifted West and "went broke." The Yeamanses finally landed in Leavenworth, Kan., where Yeamans died, leaving his wife and baby penniless. Through a landlady's kindness they managed to get back to New York, where Mrs. Yeamans got a place in a stock company at Conway's Park Theater, Brooklyn. She says of this experience:

"Mark Bates was the juvenile man. His wife, Marie, who is a dear friend of mine to this day, was the soubrette. John and Jennie Carroll were doing the leading parts, and from time to time we had such stars as Maggie Mitchell, Lotta, Mrs. D. P. Bowers, John Brougham, J. Sleeper Clarke and John E. Owens.

"It was there that my little Jennie made her début in children's parts, the Gerry Society being as yet a bugaboo of the future. She did so well that in 1869 G. L. Fox starred her in "Humpty Dumpty."

Mrs. Yeamans soon made a name in the metropolis. With her daughter she played in Augustin Daly's Grand Operahouse Company in 1872 and 1873, and understudied Frochard in the memorable production of "The Two Orphans" in 1874 and 1875. McKee Rankin, Kitty Blanchard, Kate Claxton, Charles Thorne, Jr., and Ida Vernon were in that company.

Then came the Harrigan and Hart days—days which made the actress's real fame. From 1872 until nearly twenty years later when the firm dissolved, she played eccentric Irish and other parts which called for clearer character work.

Old-timers remember her as "Mrs. Mulligan," as "Peach Blossom," or "Under the Gaslight," or in "The Mother-in-law," or "Cordelia's Aspirations."

A more recent event was her appearance in "The Great Diamond Robbery," in 1895, with Mme. Janauschek, Blanche Walsh, George C. Boniface, and the rest of the all-star cast. Since then she has been doing quiet "old lady" parts, and in this, her last season, she is playing with "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl," in the last act of which she does the jig which sets the house wild.

OBJECTED TO FRENCH.

Howard Wilson, who pitched a couple of seasons for Washington a few years back, is now in the watch and clock business, and whenever any of the ball players want anything in this line they patronize the genial Howard.

Some days ago the versatile Mr. Waddell determined to buy a clock, so that when he retired to his home for the winter he would have a reliable timepiece that would arouse him from his slumbers each morning so that he could be in time for breakfast, which is a meal that Rube thinks a whole lot of.

So going up to the store kept by Wilson in company with Harry Davis and Stocks Seybold, George Edward began looking over the various timepieces that were put out by the accommodating Howard for his inspection.

Rube was hard to suit, and finally Howard said to him:

"Ed, here is an extra fine French clock that I will give to you for half price."

"It's a pretty piece of work, all right, Howard," replied the Rube, as he began scratching his head, "and I wouldn't mind owning it, only, you see," he explained, "It wouldn't be any good to me, as I want a clock that I can understand when it strikes."—[Washington Star.

The Diabolo Madness.

NEW GAME HAS CAPTURED EUROPE AND IS TAKING AMERICA.

By a Special Contributor.

DIABOLO has caught the world—fascinated it, hypnotized it.

The whirr of the little two-headed top, the twang of the string, the shrieks of delight at success and the unprintable exclamations at failure, have made the people of the earth brethren all.

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," and one try at diabolo initiates another candidate into the Order of the Diabolese, which has its chapters north, east, south and west, on mountain, plain and sea.

What is diabolo? Possibly it might be less amiss to ask, "Why is diabolo?"

To answer the first query the superficial observer might say casually: "That's the new game everybody's playing." But he who views all innovations with the measuring eye, who sees in each merely a development of something which has gone before, looks back into the musty past and knows that a new cycle is complete and that another amusement has found another reincarnation, so to speak.

Fair autoists play while men repair machine.

Away back at the dawn of the last century, to be exact, about 1812, when America and Great Britain were warring on the seas, all France got the diabolo craze. Some benefactor of the eternally bored had dug up out of the files of the past a game which he called "Le Diable." It is said by some to have been played in Europe 200 years before that, and others who go back still farther find that it was known in China even centuries before. At any rate its absolute origin was not considered important enough to call for a monument to the inventor, so history merely brands it as an ancient pastime and lets it go at that.

The Frenchman who started the 1812 craze for Le Diable used two sticks, a bit of string connecting the tip of each and a bobbin-like affair which he spun and tossed on the bridge of twine made taut by extending the sticks which he held one in each hand. France became so infatuated with the game that the craze inspired articles in the papers and cartoons which are to be found in museums at Paris to this day.

According to C. B. Fry, the great English cricketer, a French engineer, M. Gustav Philappart, came across the ancient implements for Le Diable a few months ago. He took the old-fashioned bobbin, and from it made a sort of two-headed top, cut with geometrical care to make the game one of precision. Then he gave his discovery to the country and to the world, called it "diabolo," and the world today is diabolo mad.

From Paris the revival of the game spread to London, and the British public, conservative in all things, looked at it with interest. Then King Edward saw some children playing it one day, and, so the story goes, he was initiated into its mysteries. He fell under its subtle spell, and the news went forth that the King had indorsed the game with his own royal hands.

This explains in part the query as to the reason for the craze, somewhat flippantly made above, so far as England is concerned, for with His Majesty playing diabolo, all his empire joined in forthwith.

Across the North Sea it went next, and all over the continent. Bridging the broad Atlantic at a bound, it landed on the shores of America, while the great ships that brought the crowds home from the summer rush abroad carried thousands who played the game all the way over. Into every State it has gone, and now it rivals the records made by ping pong and tiddlediwinks of blessed memory.

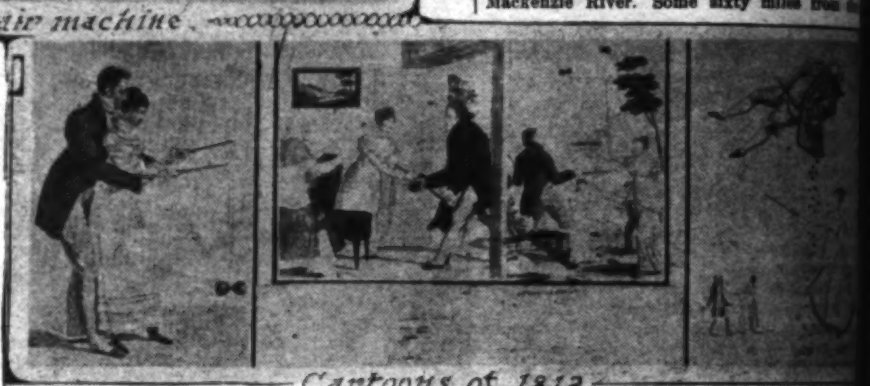
In England they have rigged up nets and courts and are playing diabolo along the lines of tennis. Two, four, six or eight play it when sociability is desired, but countless thousands make it a game of solitaire. Parlor, back yard, pavement and open field resound with the cries of the players, and youth and age know no distinctions where the craze is concerned.

It is almost as superfluous to describe the method of play as it was to describe the implements used, but for the benefit of those who are still loyal to ping pong, it may not be amiss to shed a ray of light upon the operation.

A lonely player merely delights himself by tossing the spinning bobbin in the air and catching it on the string again. He takes the sticks, one in either hand, holding them a foot or two apart, and placing the bobbin or diabolo with its cleft on the string, makes it revolve by moving the arms up and down alternately. Having worked the diabolo up to a good swift spin, he tosses it in the air and catches it on the string again. The player's vigor, or the degree of fascination, are factors in determining how often he repeats the performance.

When more than one play, the spinning bobbin is tossed from one side to the other, over a net, like tennis, or across any given space. The object of this sort of game is to catch the diabolo tossed by an opponent and to return it. There is also a simpler way of "serving" the diabolo over the net, and making it fall in a square diagonally across, following the tennis rule. In this case the opponent picks up the bobbin and begins to spin it all over.

The bobbins are made of wood, rubber or tin. Some have whistles inserted to give the top a musical sound when it spins.



Cartoons of 1812.

England's madness for the pastime has developed to such a degree that writers and speakers are making the craze the subject of articles and speeches.

It is contended by those who favor the game that it develops the muscles, the lungs and the figure. Athletic women who possess natural strength, but lack something of grace, have seized upon it as being as conducive to suppleness as dancing. Athletes contend that it trains the eye and is particularly beneficial in helping to judge distances.

From among the adverse criticism comes a minor chord from Emil Reich, who, in a very pessimistic article, traces the craze in France to the desire of the people to forget that their nation is, metaphorically speaking, on the "toboggan slide." He says they have lost power and prestige among the countries of the world, and therefore they seek to drown the thought in various diversions and excitements.

"It is the craze of the decadent, of the weakling," he says in a savage summing up of the indictment.

But he is particularly concerned about the Britons who are diabolo mad. He traces the disorder which drives them to the game to "modern boredom, hysteria, and a vague apprehensiveness," which he thinks has gripped the nation. "Pills of forgetfulness" he calls the distractions akin to diabolo, and he adds:

"In times when the nation is full of its high vocation, full of energy, full of great deeds done and doing, all such pills would be despised."

Meanwhile the craze grows like the ever-widening circles in the water raised by the falling stone. They are writing poems about it, singing songs about it, and holding functions in its honor. It is left for Bernard Shaw to dramatize it, and then the acme of the frenzy will have been reached.

Quaint Pageant.

[illegible] FETE HELD YEARLY TO INTIMIDATE WINE-WATERERS.

From Detroit News Tribune.

TO condemn a man to drink nothing but water for the rest of his natural life seems a hard sentence indeed. Yet it is one which in Germany is yearly [illegible]. The occasion is at the end of the vintage [illegible] of the Rhine, at the old castle of Marksburg.

[illegible] have been made in England in the last [illegible] or two regarding the gorgeous pageants that have been given there in some of the old towns, depicting the [illegible] of their history from the time of the early [illegible] down to almost the present day. Mark Twain [illegible] his recent visit was enchanted with such a pageant [illegible] at the University of Oxford. And there is talk of [illegible] of pageants in some of the American cities. In [illegible] a new word has humorously been added to the [illegible] language in the verb "to pag."

Germany smiles complacently when such pageants are [illegible] and marveled about elsewhere, for a gorgeous and [illegible] pageant has been given on the castle-crowned [illegible] of the Rhine for just 526 years.

[illegible], too, could take a lesson from Germany in this [illegible]. The recent troubles in the wine-growing districts of France were brought about by the adulteration of the wine. The sins of the adulterators were taken up, and Marcellin Albert, as readers will remember, [illegible] led the vineyard owners and workers into [illegible] strife. In Germany the wine growers do not go [illegible], but dress themselves up in fantastic garb and [illegible] and grow merry at the expense of the men who [illegible] profane water into the sacred wine of the [illegible].

The little village of Branberg, on the Rhine, nestles at the foot of a slope covered with vineyards. At the [illegible] crowning the heights, stands the ruined castle of [illegible]. Its moat and drawbridge, its great court- [illegible] its baronial hall and many battlements and tow- [illegible] stand, well preserved and well kept.

In the castle 526 years ago there lived the margrave [illegible]. He was a prince who ruled the whole [illegible]. His vassals tilled the soil and grew the vines [illegible] surrounded the castle, and lived in the village of [illegible]. The margrave's wine was famous. For [illegible] years he amassed great wealth from its sale. But [illegible] old age he became miserly, and although as much [illegible] as any man in those ancient days, he [illegible] for yet more riches and a quicker way of getting them. So in 1381, when the wine was all made and [illegible] in the huge tuns that filled the princely wine cellar, the old margrave had water fetched secretly from [illegible] and added it to each tun and hogshead and [illegible]. His work was not secret enough, however. The [illegible], the vine growers and winemakers discovered [illegible] in their rage they forgot they were but the vassals [illegible] mighty river baron. They summoned the warriors of the [illegible] to help them punish the old [illegible].

When the soldiers came, the margrave rang his alarm [illegible] in vain. No sturdy villagers, no faithful vassals [illegible] to his aid. The soldiers stormed the fortress and [illegible] it. They caught the margrave and loaded him [illegible] chains. In the great courtyard where for years [illegible] held court they tried and sentenced him to die. [illegible] to be shot, but a wag among the soldiers suggested that a quick death was too good for a rascal who [illegible] water wine, and that he should be imprisoned for [illegible] and condemned to drink nothing but water for the [illegible] his days.

[illegible] suggestion, hailed with delight, was carried out. [illegible] margrave lived some years in a dungeon and had to [illegible] on black bread and water—and river water at [illegible].

[illegible] many years the villagers made the day of his capture a fête day. They would visit the castle and reenact the scenes of its storming, and finally the affair [illegible] an annual pageant.

[illegible] a year has been missed. There is now a society [illegible] which takes charge of the pageant, and a [illegible] society in Berlin. Special trains are run from [illegible] and also from all the surrounding wine districts of the Rhine to Branberg. The day is the greatest in the year for the wine grower. The society [illegible] until now it is general, and all who favor [illegible] belong to it. It teaches yearly the lesson that [illegible] must not be adulterated. A royal prince is in[illegible] as the guest of honor, and a regiment of [illegible], 300 strong, is drafted into the district to keep [illegible] the crowds.

[illegible] villagers alone take part. The various historical [illegible] are allotted among them. Men, women and [illegible] become actors for that one day. Many of the [illegible] the part of pages. The village is a tiny [illegible] as there are 200 parts to be taken, the whole [illegible] has to dress up, and the appearance of various [illegible] women and men in garb of the middle ages [illegible] the enjoyment of the sightseers.

[illegible] of the village is selected as the margrave [illegible] in the castle. Then, led by a band, the [illegible] up the slope and make an attack on the [illegible]. The alarm bell is rung wildly, but the villagers, [illegible] soldiers of the fourteenth century, rush across [illegible] and seize the castle. Then the poor [illegible] who represents the margrave is seized, loaded [illegible] and dragged out into the great courtyard, [illegible] the trial is held.

[illegible] of the court delivers a homily on the [illegible] of adulterating Rhine wine, and others also [illegible] showing the awful consequences of putting [illegible] into good wine. Then the village toper is sentenced to drink water only in the future, and the pageant proper ends.

It is a hard day for the poor toper, though, for every one offers him brimming goblets of wine, which he dare not touch. Should he be caught drinking anything but water, dire penalties are visited on him, including a bath in the Rhine.

The whole affair is carried out with tremendous pomp and is free to every one. The society raises a fund every year for the expenses, such as they are.

The fête is always held at the close of the wine season, and is just over. This year Prince Joachim Albert, the warrior prince, who lately returned from the little German war in the Cameroons, was present, and presided at the fête and heard the sentence proclaimed.

Waiololoa.

FOUNTAIN OF PERPETUAL YOUTH IN SHADOW OF MAUNA LOA.

By a Special Contributor.

IN the remote Hawaiian Islands, in the shadow of Mauna Loa, the great volcanic igneous phenomenon of the world, in a secluded vale shaded by palms and forest trees latticed by tropical parasites that climb to the tops of the stately trees, is Waiololoa, the fountain of perpetual youth.

The native Hawaiians are imaginative and superstitious, and they have many legends of the gods who fire the volcanoes bathing in the boiling sulphurous lakes and pools that abound in the region adjacent to remove the begrimed livery of their calling.

The pool of Waiololoa is 500 feet long, and has a breadth of 150 feet. The surface of the pool rises and falls about four feet twice every day. There is a popular error prevailing in the surrounding country that this is caused by ocean tides, but the error is apparent, for the pool is 600 feet above sea level. The variation in depth is doubtless caused by a natural syphon in a precipitous rock that bounds one side of the pool, and it is thus kept supplied with clear, pure water by natural but invisible means, mysterious and inscrutable to the native Hawaiians. They have many fanciful legends of supernatural agencies, and believe that the presiding genii abhor old age and are patrons of youth and have the power of retrogressive transformation. May the illusion, if one it is, never be dispelled and may old age, if only in imagination, wash off its disfigurements and assume the bloom of early life, "esto perpetua." So realistic are their stories that as I followed the winding path in approaching Waiololoa, now passing around an abrupt precipice, now through a tangled jungle, my mind was in constant expectancy of startling surprises. I almost hoped that the tutelary deities would favor me, a stranger from so distant a land, with at least a furtive glance of their forms before they disappeared and that which legend and song described so poetically as corporeal vanished into thin air. But my hopes and excited imagination availed me nothing save buoyant spirits and a lively enjoyment of the surroundings. At last, under a grove of lofty cocoa palms, on a bank covered with short green grass, I stood looking into the clearest and most beautiful sheet of water I had ever seen. A sugar cane lying at the bottom, thirty-five feet deep, assumed to the eye an exaggerated size; every point was distinctly visible, and the smaller objects, the tiniest corn thrown as an offering to the goddess Pele, could be seen apparently enlarged. On the opposite side of the water an immense rock rises nearly perpendicular many hundred feet, and here and there is relieved from austerity by festooned vines and shrubs that grow from the many fissures in the rock cleft by quakes that the earth suffers when Pele, the great goddess, wakes in anger at the disobedience and wantonness of her children of the Hawaiian Isles. I was lost in contemplation of the beautiful scene—the products of nature unassisted, or should I say undisfigured by art. It is truly a fit habitation for divinity. I did not feel old, but I wanted to feel young and sportive. So I disrobed for a bath and my guide placed my clothes under the shelter of a projecting rock at a little distance and retired. I approached the water by natural stone steps and immersed my hand. So exact was the temperature with the cool air that sight alone convinced me that my hand was in the water. Like Manfred, I felt "the impulse," but I did not plunge into the pool ever sacred to Pele in Hawaiian myths, and I fancied that I could hear indistinctly a low but musical saraband for which I felt a strange reverence. Was I mistaken? The sequel will tell.

There was no habitation visible, and no impress of man's hand to mar the scene; no remains of felled timber, not even the pruning of a single bough. I was in solitude in Paradise, as I thought, and dreamed not of the barbaric hospitality that awaited me on my exit from the bath. I sported in the water for a [illegible] time. I dived, floated and swam to the opposite shore or rock-bound bank. I climbed up to a projecting ledge and jumped foot-foremost into the pool. I went down, down, but I did not touch bottom. I ascended the stone stairs and sat under a young cocoa palm. Where I had disrobed was a large sheet of tapa, a native cloth as white as snow, spread upon the verdant grass. I was prepared for any adventure, and accepted the proffered luxury as one accustomed to magic and enchantment; wrapping myself in a large Turkish towel with which I had come provided, I reclined upon the tapa, throwing [illegible] point of its capacious proportions over my nether extremities, and for a few moments I was left to reflection. To say that I enjoyed the bath would be as inadequate in description as it would be to paint a rose, the queen of flowers, with one color without tints. I was dreaming—almost in a trance—a trance is nothing more than emotional expectancy; a borderland between the visible and invisible—when I heard a gentle laugh and a sweet, low voice pronounce the sound "alohanui," which in Hawaiian means "I love you," the usual salutation, more than equivalent to bon jour or good morrow. I uncovered my face and on either side of me was standing with easy grace a pretty young native girl just budding into womanhood. With all the good nature and humor that usually beams from a female Hawaiian face, I knew from the mischievous eyes that I was to be the victim of an imbarrassing situation and about to take my first lesson in the "lumelume," a native cure for every evil and ill that flesh is heir to, and I yielded without even a mental protest. I felt their long, delicate fingers separating, as it were, the sinuous tissues of my ankles, with a searching gentleness of pressure at times so forcible as to verge on veritable pain, and then so soothing as to make one's thankfulness vocal. There are no words of thanks in the Hawaiian language, the only words analogous in meaning being "maitai" and "nui nui," which are used interchangeably, meaning good, strong, great. Time has no measure for such kingly pleasures. These houris were dressed in the Hawaiian frock called "Holikoo," a loose wrapper much after the pattern of a fashionable ladies' robe de nuit. Their feet were unconfined by shoes or even sandals, and their toes were almost as long and flexible as their fingers. These children of nature had never known a care, and were ignorant of want. The Kanakas are ever kind to their children; I have never seen one cry.

The service being performed, they tripped away as they had come, and my guide returned, bringing my clothes, and, hastily dressing, I started for Mr. Shipman's ranch, where I was being entertained during my visit to Puna. I felt as if an important epoch in my life had been reached, and that I had turned back on the road of life and was approaching by blooming paths the springtide of existence once again and that old ways were abandoned; and I felt happy, for I fully believe that "the days of youth are the days of our glory." At the ranch I found dinner waiting for me, simple, yet of peculiar excellence and neatly served.

Olyppees, a shellfish; "au naturel" pond mullett, the finest fish in the world, and tenderloin of beef, braised with sweet potatoes, such as are only grown on the Sandwich Islands; a bottle of California claret and a cup of café noir of native growth, an improvement on Mocha itself. When I returned to the veranda the stars were shining brightly and a young moon was tending toward the western horizon, while a breeze from the ocean of a temperature of about 70 degrees gave motion to the feathery fronds of varied palms, infusing just life enough to fill the imagination with strange images of the past and visions of the future. What were those thoughts? It would be profanity to translate them into words. The pure in mind have had kindred thoughts, and no sound, no language can make them vocal.

My visit was extended from day to day without any reasonable excuse except that, with repetitions of the bath, youth, with all of its alluring pleasures, was once more the controlling factor of my existence. Emotional life with its golden hopes was toying with the grim structures of age and reality, and laughing at despondency; and wrinkles and traces of care, the tokens and symbols of age, were rapidly passing away, and the zephyrs of a new spring drowned the voice of duty and forgetfulness made me the slave of insouciance. In a few days a friend came in search of me, and realizing the urgency and importance of my return to Honolulu by a definite time in the near future, and fearing that if my friend should indulge in the bath like myself, he would become oblivious to duty and recreant to business punctuality, I discouraged him from testing the virtues of Waiololoa, and we made a solemn compact to leave for Iloilo en route for Honolulu at 10 o'clock on the morrow.

At 9 a.m. heavy clouds were crowning the top of Mauna Loa and reverberations of loud thunder shook the thinly-crusted earth, but no deterrent circumstances were to delay our departure. At 10 a.m. punctually we vaulted into our saddles. There is no means of conveyance from Puna to Hilo by land except the sure foot of a trusted horse. The big drops that precede a deluge in the tropics were now falling as we passed out of the yard at a brisk canter. At first I felt a repugnance at riding thirty miles through a falling torrent, but after my clothes were saturated and my boots were full of water, I rather enjoyed [illegible] long shower bath that continued without intermission until we reached Hilo. In this region the rainfall is twenty-five feet annually, caused by the trade winds freighted with vapor drifting against the snowy peak of Mauna Kea, where the cold condenses the vapor into rain.

Thus ended my visit to Puna, on the Island of Hawaii. The bath of Waiololoa endowed me with youth that defies the approaches of old age, and were it not for the dangers that environ the ordinary mortal in appetizing temptations or retrogressions to the vanities of adolescence I would advise all who feel the blight of approaching old age or its infirmities to go forthwith to the pool of Waiololoa and regain their youth. With this caution old husbands should take their young wives with them, for old age, even unrejuvenated, is sometimes tricky; never to be trusted in a land of new and strange revelations, and, as Lord Bacon, nee Shakespeare, has wisely said: "The blood of youth burns not to that excess as gravity's revolt to wantonness."

DOUBLE FEES ON SUNDAY.

The doctors of Paris have decided that beginning next year Sunday visits to patients shall be treated as night visits with double charges. The only exceptions will be visits to patients already under treatment.

Dr. Leredde, who initiated this movement to secure Sunday as a day of rest, tells me that he is quite certain that Parisians will very soon get used to the change. He said: "Our new rules are intended to free us from needless visits. If patients know that they will be charged double for a doctor's visit on Sunday, they will, unless they are really ill, refrain from sending for us until the next day."—[Paris Correspondence London Express.

[illegible] DON'T believe it; I won't admit that I have a [illegible] of superstition left in me, and I don't believe [illegible] any other normally sane, healthy, educated [illegible]."

[illegible] Manning dropped the end of his cigarette into [illegible] his coffee cup and restlessly pushed his [illegible] back from the table where he and his three friends [illegible] dining. All of those at the table lived in the [illegible] hotel, and thus often found themselves together at the dinner table, and often, also, in a rather [illegible] discussion. This evening their talk had hinged [illegible] the abilities of a certain prominent business man [illegible] the evening paper had briefly sketched. [illegible], he was reported as having said, he attributed [illegible] to no particular quality in himself unless it were a [illegible] determination—a 'feeling that however hard a [illegible] might be to do, that at some time he would accomplish it; and that he had seldom failed.

[illegible] the doctor replied to such questions only by [illegible] stare, perhaps slightly raising an eyebrow or blowing a puff of smoke over the school teacher's [illegible] tonight he not only did these things, but [illegible].

[illegible] both or neither; perhaps it was just a bit [illegible] primitive instinct of superstition that will show [illegible] best of us. It is a heritage of the long past [illegible] many queer shapes. At the present time it manifests itself in a conviction of one's 'star' [illegible]' sometimes it is an 'inner voice' that urges [illegible] of the right moment; or again it may be a predilection for a particular number or color. "[illegible]," added the school teacher, "that recently a certain government official started on a [illegible] a Friday, the 13th day of the month, all the [illegible] recorded the fact?"

"[illegible] all right with Uncle Sam," replied "Out [illegible] knows that 13 is our Uncle's lucky [illegible]. Why, look here," and he pulled from his [illegible] he would have called a "two-bit piece," [illegible] the table with the eagle up. "Did you ever [illegible] the number 13 is repeated here? The eagle [illegible] in his beak bearing the motto "E Pluribus [illegible] letters; at the bottom it says "Quarter [illegible] thirteen letters; each of the eagle's wings [illegible] feathers, as has also his tail. On his breast he bears a shield with thirteen bars and thirteen stripes, while in his right claw he holds an olive branch with thirteen leaves and in his left claw a sheaf of thirteen arrows. How is that for superstition?"

And laughing over this fact, which no one had before noticed, the party broke up, each going to his own room.

The doctor's room adjoined that of Jack Manning, from which fact there had lately arisen a close friendship between the two young men. The quiet, calm deliberation of one seemed to supply a want in the impetuous nature of the other which was repaid, if in no other wise, at least in many a well-told witty story. Often they exchanged visits, sitting perhaps in silence for long hours in each other's rooms. As the doctor had expressed it, because if you set fire to one log it will soon go out, but if you place two close together they will burn brightly until nothing is left but ashes."

But this evening Jack Manning passed straight on to his own room, saying only that he was tired and would read for a while and go to bed. After closing his door and turning on the electric light, he slowly stripped off his outer clothes, replacing them with a loose wrapper. Then he exchanged his shoes for comfortable slippers, lighted a cigar and sank into a Morris chair. He did not read for awhile, but allowed his mind to wander over the events of the day while his eyes followed the cloud-like motions of the smoke as it whirled slowly about his head. Presently his hand mechanically selected a small book from the table at his elbow and held it open before his face. It was some time, however, before he distinctly realized that the book he had thus picked up was that weird romance of A. Conan Doyle's, "The Mystery of the Cloomber." A few pages of this already familiar work recalled the recent conversation at the dinner table; and as the two lines of thought converging seemed to harmonize with his languid mood, he slowly read through the dramatic climax of the story. At the end he tossed it carelessly back onto the table, exclaiming half-aloud:

"Patently fictitious and absurd! How can people believe such rank nonsense? And yet the doctor was more than half in earnest tonight."

He felt tired, and thought of going to bed. It was early, but he needed sleep and his head ached.

As he undressed he wondered why his mind kept reverting to that dinner-table conversation. It seemed to him he could remember every "old woman's tale" he had ever heard. He snapped out the light and stood for a moment in the dark. Instantly he remembered his childhood terror of a dark room. What was he afraid of then that did not frighten him now? Was it something definite—a burglar, or just because he had been told that ghosts lived in the dark? He groped for his bed, thinking of a good laugh he had once had on one of his father's old friends, who every night since childhood had taken a running leap to reach his bed, for fear, as he explained, that a man hidden underneath it might catch him by the heel as he stepped off the floor.

"But why his heel? Jack chuckled. "His toes would have been much handier for the rascal, if he had been there."

And still chuckling, he cuddled down among the pillows, settling his long limbs comfortably into the crisp, cool sheets, then groaned softly and sank into a deep sleep. No terrors of the dark could disturb him now, for it was the sleep of a tired, healthy man, following a hearty dinner and a still more hearty cigar.

But as it was deep so was its awakening on the following morning slow. It seemed to him he was at his usual place at the breakfast table. Everything appeared entirely natural, just as it should be. In the center of the table stood the usual bunch of flowers; his morning paper was arranged beside his plate; the waitress was asking him what he desired to eat.

"To eat? Why, I will have two boiled eggs, some toast and some coffee."

Just then the door of the dining-room pushed softly open and he saw the doctor cross the room. With a smiling "Good-morning" his friend took his accustomed seat on the opposite side of the table, and leaned toward him.

"Well, young man," the doctor exclaimed, "now we know you are superstitious, for you and I dreamed the same dream this morning at 6 o'clock."

. . . .

Six o'clock! Yes, the hands of the little clock on the mantelpiece stood wide apart, top and bottom.

"Well!" he thought, "that was the most vivid dream I ever had. Six o'clock. Too early to get up; guess I am good for a little more sleep. So the doctor dreamed the same dream that I dreamed! And just at 6 o'clock! Strange it should be so vivid! I never had a dream before where I could actually hear the voice of the person speaking to me. It was more like a vision; subconscious mental cerebration."

But now sleep had left him entirely, though the shadow of his dream was still heavy upon him. As he lay with half-closed eyes he went over in his mind again and again that strange vision, noting each time with growing wonder how perfect it was in every detail. It seemed not a dream but an event of life. The doctor did not seem to speak; he had spoken. With a rapid movement he threw off the bedclothes, walked to the door and tried it; it was locked. The doctor could not have been in the room. Suddenly a thought occurred to him. What if he should go into the dining-room and reënact that scene! What if the doctor should again say to him: "Now we know you are superstitious, for you and I dreamed the same dream this morning at 6 o'clock!" No, that might prove the power of thought transference between friends, but that was not superstition; that was a question of science. But his vision would be fulfilled. Bosh! He would not let it be fulfilled; he would avoid meeting the doctor, who always breakfasted at 7 o'clock; he would take his at 8.

He thought of going into the doctor's room and telling him of the whole strange affair, but decided that that would be construed into a confession of guilt, and he had no desire to be laughed at. So instead he took his bath and dressed, dismissing the whole matter from his mind as much as possible.

Shortly before 7 o'clock he was dressed and ready with a keen sense of desire for the morning meal to be had downstairs.

Should he wait a while or go down?

Turning this question over in his mind, he picked up his watch from the table where he had laid it the night before, and in doing so, brushed his hand against the little volume that he had tossed out of the way. The sight of the book recalled to him the curious fate of the poor victims of the tragedy, rushed to a hideous doom by an unseen irresistible power; led, as if their wills were fettered, to a death which they knew awaited them. With the thought, he began to feel that something akin was obliging him to hurry; it was nearly his friend's breakfast time; he must be there first as in the vision.

Then suddenly a great wave of sensation swept him from head to feet, vibrating through every nerve of his body; it was the great prayer of all time to the eternal mystery of the universe; the subjection of the power of thought to that of belief. He understood now that his dream was an insight into the future, and knowing that future he was as powerless to avoid it as was the sun from rising or setting. He could see now that he thought he had refrained from going into the doctor's room. No! he had not been able to go. He thought he was going to breakfast at 8 o'clock. Was he to be forced to eat at 7?

It lasted only a moment, and then with the reaction he found himself cursing gently and calling himself a fool; yes, a fool living in America in the twentieth century, with, thank God, a free will to come or go as he pleased. He would prove it by waiting until 8 o'clock. And he seated himself resolutely on the edge of the bed. In a moment he was satisfied that he could wait there as long as he wanted to, but he was hungry and determined that he was not going to be kept waiting any longer by all the visions in the universe. Instead, he would go into the doctor's room and go downstairs with him.

But the doctor had gone out on a visit while Jack was at his bath, and had not yet returned, so he hastened down the stairs with the secret hope that he might be able to finish breakfast before the doctor should appear. He seated himself at the table with a mingled sensation of amusement, anger and fear as he noted all the familiar details. Yes, everything was entirely natural, just as it should be. In the center of the table stood the usual bunch of flowers; his morning paper was arranged beside his plate; the waitress was asking what he desired to eat.

"To eat? Why, I will have two boiled eggs, some toast and some coffee."

Just then the door of the dining-room pushed softly open, and he saw the doctor cross the room. With a smiling "Good-morning," his friend took his accustomed seat on the opposite side of the table and leaned toward him.

"Well! young man," the doctor exclaimed, "how are you today? Any news this morning?"

Jack Manning, with the paper held before his face, answered very slowly: "There is a little bit of news:

"'We are very little changed
From the semi-apes who ranged India's prehistoric clime.'"

POWERFUL DROPS OF WATER.

A drop of water, even three to four drops, falling on the head seems a thing unworthy of attention; nevertheless in China a slow and continuous dropping of water on the head has been found to be a method of torture under which the most hardened criminal abjectly howls for mercy.

When a professor in the Sorbonne stated this to his class the other day, one of the students laughed incredulously, and said it would take a good deal of that sort of thing to affect him.

The professor assured him that even one quart of water dropped slowly onto his hand would be beyond his endurance. He agreed to experiment.

A quart measure filled with water was brought in, a microscopic hole was bored in the bottom, and the performance began, the professor counting.

During the first hundred drops the student made airy remarks. With the second hundred he began to look less cheerful, than gradually all his talk died away, and his face took on a haggard, tortured expression. With the third hundred the hand began to swell and look red. The pain increased to torture. Finally the skin broke.

At the four hundred and twentieth drop the skeptic acknowledged his doubts vanished and begged for mercy. He could bear no more.—[Tit-Bits.

THE FLORIDA KEY DWELLERS.

The people living on the Florida keys are known as "Chonchs," and are interesting in their way. They know their own country, but are lost if attempting to act as guides out of it. The clear water about the keys makes the use of the water glass common, and they are very expert with it. This water glass is simply a strong bucket, the bottom of which is made of glass. Sinking the bottom of this bucket a few inches under water, a Chonch will see fish and "Florida lobsters," or crayfish, at a considerable depth, and spear them with the grains. They also show skill with the casting net and understand diving for turtles. Near some of the keys are good sponge grounds, and with these and all kinds of fish, helped out with an occasional job of wrecking when some foolish vessel comes ashore, the Chonch makes an easy living.—[Travel Magazine.

A Visit to Ceylon.

THE OPHIR OF THE EAST AND ITS PLACES OF INTEREST.

By a Special Contributor.

ONE of the most monotonous portions of the voyage to the Orient via the Suez Canal is that between Aden and Colombo, when, for eight days, no land is sighted and only an occasional tramp steamer passed. Five hundred miles to the southwest of Colombo we pass the Island of Minicoy, whose tall lighthouse rears its head high above the tops of the cocoanut palms which fringe the water's edge. This is one of the Maldive group of coral islands, whose Sultan pays tribute to the government of Ceylon. Late the following evening we come abreast of Colombo, and, rounding the magnificent breakwater which protects the palm-encircled bay, we cast anchor in the calm waters of the harbor.

Long before the breakfast bugle has sounded our slumbers are disturbed by the diving boys and the scurrying of feet overhead, which proclaims the advent of Singhalese and Tamil hawkers. By the time our dressing is finished the noise made by these purveyors of cheap and worthless gems, which include imitation cat's eyes, sapphires and moonstones, is without parallel. Aden, with her Somali and Yemen Jew traders, was bad enough in all conscience, but the scene which presented itself as we stepped on deck was almost indescribable. So crowded was every portion and the jabbering so intense that it was a relief to jump into a catamaran and be rowed ashore. Even at the landing stage one is pestered by a legion of street hawkers and beggars, and when in despair we entered a rickshaw, tiny little Singhalese children followed at top speed beseeching us in most plaintive tones to spare them a few cents. When they thought we appeared reluctant to part with the coin they would pat their bare little stomachs in order to call attention to the fact that they were hungry and plead all the harder. Partly to get rid of them, but because they looked so winsome, a handful of coppers was thrown, when a general scramble ensued.

A most delightful morning may be spent by taking the train to Mount Lavinia, one of the breathing spots of Colombo. This is a lovely trip, and a truly delightful change after the monotony of the past few days. The train skirts the ocean part of the way, and hardly ever leaves the shade afforded by the forests of cocoanut palms which grow most luxuriantly down to the very water's edge. The hotel is perched on a rocky promontory, and is not only commodious but has fine spacious verandas overlooking the sea. After an excellent tiffin, which included the inevitable prawn curry, for which the hotel is famous, we steamed back to the city and engaged rooms at the Galle Face Hotel.

Colombo is a large city, having a population of some 160,000, comprised chiefly of Singhalese, Tamils and Mohammedans. It is electrically lighted, has a good car service, and contains many magnificent public buildings, such as the postoffice, Queen's house, museum, St. Thomas College and the Courthouse. The streets are well shaded, and the suburbs, particularly Colpetty, contain many very beautiful homes. The cinnamon gardens, just outside the city limits, are well worth a visit.

Ceylon is one of the great religious centers of Buddhism, having embraced that creed as far back as 300 B. C., when Mahinda, the son of King Dhammasoka, together with a large following, crossed over from the mainland and established his court. The island, which is some 250 miles long by about 160 in width, was well known to the ancients, and many people to this day suppose it to have been the Ophir spoken of in the Bible. It certainly is a wealthy island, as is evidenced by the countless numbers of precious stones which are displayed in the legion of jewelers' shops throughout the island. When nearing Colombo, even before land can be seen, the very atmosphere is perfumed with the scent of spice, which industry adds so materially to the financial welfare of the people.

At Anuradhapura, once the ancient capital, but now a city of ruins, may be seen the sacred Bo tree, to which thousands of devout Buddhists from all over the world make pilgrimages. This tree is an object of veneration, inasmuch as it is supposed to be a branch of that very same tree under which Gautama rested the day he became a Buddha. There are several other ruin cities hidden away in the jungles of the interior, which point to a prosperous past, but Anuradhapura, with a history dating back to more than 400 years before the advent of our Christ can boast an earlier civilization than that of many a country which now is in the ascendency.

The Singhalese are Buddhists, and numerically greatly in the majority. They are a polite race, and look most picturesque in their neat sarums. Both men and women wear tortoise-shell combs in their hair, and except for the fact that the latter are somewhat smaller in stature, it is a difficult matter at first glance to distinguish the sexes.

The humidity of the lowlands is oppressive and extremely trying to those coming from a temperate zone, but within a few hours by rail from Colombo, Newera Eliya may be reached, where at an altitude of over 6000 feet the climate is ideal. There are several mountains in the neighborhood of this lovely sanatorium, whose peaks just fall short of the 8000-foot mark, while Pidurutalagala rears her crest to an [illegible] higher than that, and is a landmark [illegible] The most interesting mountain, however, [illegible] 7350 feet, half way up whose wooded [illegible] tery. Within recent years these hills were [illegible] with thriving coffee estates, but owing to the [illegible] the coffee industry in 1870, due to a fungus [illegible] tacked the leaves, the planters have substituted [illegible] tea and cacao, which industries today employ [illegible] of Tamil laborers and represent a capital [illegible] than $60,000,000. The rainfall in certain districts [illegible] cessive; Kotmale, nestling at the base of the [illegible] mountains, receives as much as 170 inches [illegible] while Colombo averages only some 75 inches.

No settled occupation of the island seems [illegible] ken place until 543 B. C., when Vijaya [illegible] India with a large following and [illegible] ruler. For many generations he and his [illegible] flourished, and so affluent did they become [illegible] abars invaded the island and quickly [illegible] sources. A Portuguese expedition under [illegible] at Colombo in 1505 and negotiated terms [illegible] tives; but it was not until 1517 that they [illegible] established themselves in Ceylon. When war broke out between Holland and Great Britain the latter power sent an expedition against [illegible] in 1795 the [illegible] East Indies, and after a brief campaign the Dutch were expelled and Ceylon passed permanently into the hands of the British by the Treaty of Amiens.

One of the most delightful trips from Colombo is to Kandy, distant only some seventy-five miles by rail, situated at an altitude of some 1800 feet, commanding views of wooded dales, rolling uplands and a pretty artificial lake constructed in 1806 by the last of the Kandian Kings, and surrounded by towering hills. It is an ideal spot from which to visit the many Buddhist and Hindoo temples, the tombs of the Kandian kings and the palaces which once upheld the pomp and glory of an oriental court. A visit should certainly be paid to Dalada Maligawa Temple, which contains among other treasures, what is alleged to be one of Buddha's teeth. This relic is closely guarded by the priests, and it is a somewhat difficult matter to obtain permission to see it, but by a liberal backsheesh (tip) the priests may be prevailed upon to show you this supposedly ancient molar.

HOME CURES.

"In Bucks county, among the Pennsylvania Dutch, there are," said a doctor, "innumerable home cures. Some of them are pretty good, too.

"For instance, for toothache, a lump of alum held in the mouth for two or three days. This is warranted not only to stop a toothache, but to keep it from ever coming back.

"In the fall and winter they wrap their chests in brown paper up there in Bucks county, saying that this prevents colds.

"Every housewife keeps on the kitchen dresser, and every husband on his dressing table a small box of cobwebs. There is nothing better than cobwebs for a cut, especially for a razor cut acquired in shaving—it stops bleeding instanter.

"They soak ivy leaves in hot water in Bucks county, and after the water gets cold they squeeze in lemon juice. This palatable drink is given to consumptives, whom it is said to cure.

"Raw onions eaten and snuff sniffed they find good cold specific. For insomnia they make hop pillows, and for bruises they keep on hand dried puff balls, the powdery insides of which they sprinkle on the hurt."

SHOE-SHOP VERNACULAR.

"What is a skiver, what a hand stabber, what a crup shaver?"

The speaker, an etymologist, flourished a clipping. "This is from the 'Want' columns of a boot and shoe journal," he said. "It has opened up a new tongue to me. Listen to some of the strangely-worded wants:

'Wanted, an experienced calf caster.

'Wanted, competent crup shavers; none others need apply.

'Wanted, good man in rough stuff, also one used to [illegible] up.

'Wanted, leg cutter.

'Wanted, a good hand stabber, also a girl to finish [illegible]

'Wanted, a good skiver.

'Wanted, sharp lad, to punch and eyelet.

'[illegible] & Co. require two table curriers.

'[illegible] wanted; girl for socking, and an experienced man at the wicket.'"

QUEER NAMES.

"We Chinese," said the law student, helping himself to rice, "give our children queer names. Our girls, for instance, are not called Mabel, Jenny or Matilda, but Lovely Moon, Celestial Happiness, Spring Peach, or Cloud of Perfumes.

"Our boys get less delicious names. Boys are made for work and wisdom rather than for dancing and pleasure, and their names show this, as—Practical Industry, Complete Knowledge, Complete Virtue, Ancestral Piety, Filial Valor.

"To our slave girls we give still another set of names. Yes, these pathetic little slaves of ours, some girls, some [illegible], set to a hundred various tasks about the house—these lowly creatures have names like Not for Me, Joy [illegible], [illegible] Happiness, and Humble Devotion."

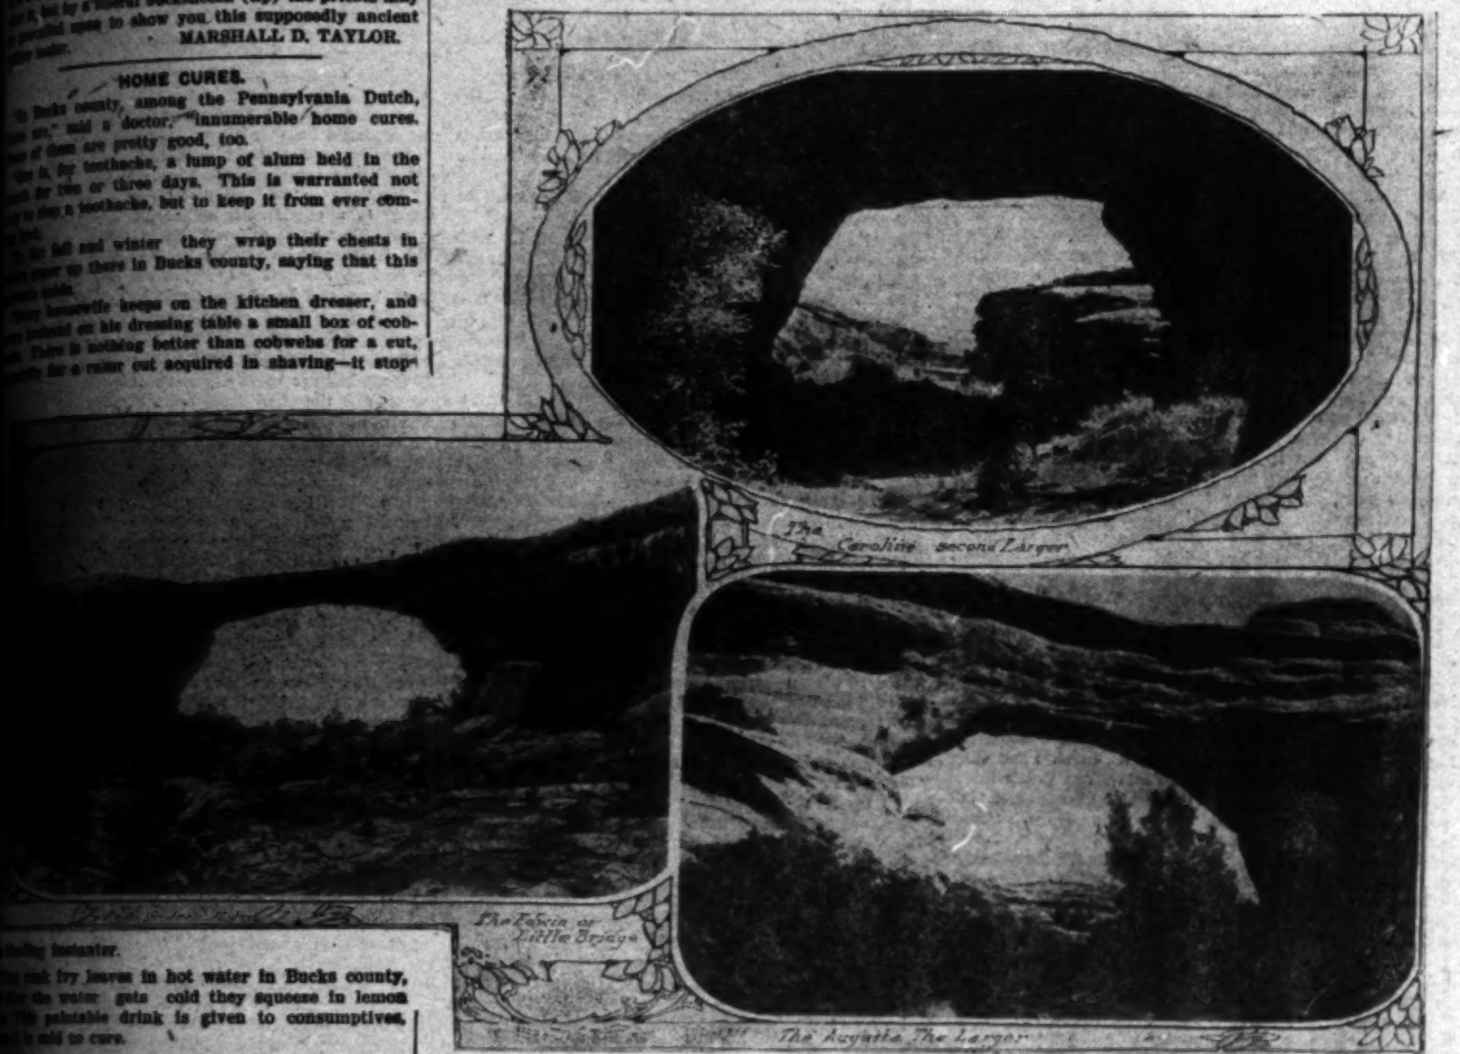
Utah's Natural Bridges.

THREE BUT LITTLE KNOWN WONDERS OF THE WORLD.

By a Special Contributor.

AT a point 500 miles directly to the southwest of Denver, the States of Colorado and Utah and the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona "corner." In other parts of the country two States or Territories angle, but nowhere else in the United States does it occur that the boundaries of four, or even three, States converge, forming a "corner" as in this instance.

Taking the stone monument that marks the spot as a pivotal point, within a radius of 100 miles, the tourist, the student, the artist, the writer, the explorer, the seeker after that which is old rather than that which is new, can find material to be found nowhere else in America.



The Caroline second Larger

The Edwin or Little Bridge

The Augusta The Larger

Cliff dwellings, cave dwellings, Indians dwelling in tepees and Indians dwelling in pueblos, animate and inanimate objects of surpassing interest, can be found in this magic circle. Within its circumference are located the inspiring Cañon of the Colorado, the vari-colored Grand Gulch of the San Juan, and the equally stupendous and more wonderful natural bridges (three in number) of Southern Utah.

These natural wonders are located about forty miles from Bluff, Utah, on the San Juan River, and can be reached either from Mancos or from Dolores, Colo., on the Rio Grande Southern Railroad, or from Thompson Springs, Utah, on the Salt Lake line of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad.

The Natural Bridge of Virginia, with its span of almost 90 feet, considered one of the wonders of the world, sinks into insignificance when compared with even the smallest of these monsters.

One of the bridges is located in Armstrong Cañon and the two others in White Cañon, but not more than ten miles apart. Being comparatively unknown and infrequently visited, their huge dimensions were never actually known until taken last summer by a party of scientists headed by Prof. Edgar L. Hewitt, of the Archeological Society of America, and Prof. Byron Cummings, of University of Utah at Salt Lake City.

"Edwin," the smallest, has a span of 194 feet, and at the highest point of elevation is 108 feet from the bottom. A roadway on top is thirty feet wide.

"Caroline," the second in size, is 186 feet from side to side and 98 feet in height. The archway is 107 feet thick and 208 feet high, directly over the arch. The floor of this bridge is 127 feet wide.

The great "Augusta" natural bridge has a span 268 feet wide at the bottom and 157 feet high. From creek bed to top of bridge is 222 feet; width of roadway on top 28 feet.

In the cañons and at the sides of all of the bridges are found many cliff-dweller ruins, and these locations for their homes, together with what is known about their abiding-places in other parts of this once densely-inhabited region, goes to prove that these ancient people sought out not only commanding and defensive positions, but localities distinctly remarkable for their great natural beauty.

SWITZERLAND OF ASIA.

Afghanistan is the Switzerland of Asia. It is bounded on the southeast by India and Baluchistan, on the west by Persia, and on the north by Asiatic Russia, while a strip of land, like an outheld sword, projects between India and Russia in the Pamirs and touches Chinese Turkestan to the northeastward. Physically it has been described as a star of valleys radiating around the great peaks of the Koh-i-Baba, and everywhere bounded by steep and rugged mountains. The three largest valleys are those of the Oxus, Helmand, and Kabul rivers, the latter being a main tributary of the Indus. Throughout its whole extent Afghanistan is a rough, mountainous country, but is broken up by elevated, flat bottom valleys. It is due to the recurrence of the elevated valleys that these Asiatic Highlanders are also a nation of horsemen, and their cavalry have at times played an important part in the rise and fall of other kingdoms. Horse racing is an important occupation, and horses are one of their most important exports.

The Afghans number somewhere between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000, and are a peculiar people, claiming descent from the lost tribes of Israel, calling themselves "Bani Israel," and tracing their lineage back through Sulaiman and Daud (Solomon and David) to Musa (Moses,) and on to Izac, Yacoob and Ibrahim.—[Detroit News Tribune.

COMBS MADE OF OLD SHOES.

A mountain of old boots and shoes, indescribably ugly, indescribably filthy, lay in the factory yard.

"We'll make combs out of them," said the chemist, "combs that will pass through the perfumed and lustrous locks of the most beautiful girls. Seems strange, doesn't it?"

"Very."

"Yet it's a fact. That is what becomes of all the world's old shoes; they are turned into combs. The leather is first cut into small pieces and immersed two days in a chloride of sulphur bath, then it is washed, dried and ground to powder, then it is mixed with glue or gum and pressed into comb moulds.

"It makes good enough combs, but I prefer the rubber ones myself. I don't like to put on my head what once may have been on the feet of an old tramp."

GETTING BACK.

"No, Mr. Winterbottom," said Maude Daryl, coldly; "I can never bring myself to marry a man who carries a horseshoe for luck."

"And yet," George Winterbottom muttered, "who can doubt the iron's efficacy after this?"

Chuckling convulsively, the young man passed out into the cold, and autumn night.

The Fall of Man.

BOB BECOMES VICTIM OF THE WILES OF A GIRL COUSIN.

By a Special Contributor.

"GEE!"

He'd been whistling! Bob looked guiltily toward the house, and stopped chopping wood to consider things. Had his mother heard? Why, every night since he could remember, he had begun to pout as soon as the sun hid behind the barn, for then his mother would call, "Robert," in that tone of voice which said, "Kindling and chores." And then every night since he could remember, he had slammed the door with a bang, and had gone to his woodcutting with a long, desolate face. When he stopped to think of kindling time, it seemed to him that he was ages old, already, and that a whole century must pass before he would be old enough to stop chopping wood and be a man.

But tonight he had forgotten everything. He hadn't remembered to slam the door, and he hadn't looked at his mother in his fierce "kindling" way, and he hadn't said "darnation" to the chopping block. He pulled his face down to its regulation frown, and started to work again.

In a minute, though, the frown cleared, and he was whistling a tune to the rhythm of the ax strokes. For his mind would not stay with the kindling, but went rambling off to a new and perplexing interest—girl. Not that he liked girls; he hated them. But that new cousin of his who had come to visit! Of course she wasn't fun; girls never were, except when you teased them; but she was different from any girls he had ever known. She had pretty hair that hung in curls, and it was dark, almost like Dolly's, the horse. She didn't have freckles, either. Now Sis did. Her face was almost covered with them, and her hair was "toffy." On week days it hung in two tight pigtails, but on Sundays she let it "go Galligar," with a ribbon on top. It was ugly that way, he thought, only that it was easier to pull, and Sis cried when you pulled it, so that made it fun. All the rest of the girls had toffy hair and freckles, too. Maggie, down the road, was the nicest girl he knew, but she didn't seem very nice any more. She always wore a white dress on Sundays, and had her hair curly, but Sis said "curling papers," and the curls didn't stay, either. Once when they were coming from church, it rained, and her hair came all undone, and hung in wet strings down her back. This cousin's hair looked as if it would stay curled for good, but maybe rain water would make the curls come out. There was some water in the cistern. He would try it some time and see.

And then her dress was so different! Sis wore calico dresses except Sundays, but this girl had a dress that looked black and red all at once, and rattled when she walked. It was awfully pretty. He liked to watch it.

But she was a girl, and girls were of no account! It would be lots of fun to tease her, though. He was tired teasing the other girls he knew. He wondered if she'd get mad if he "cut the pie" in drop-the-handkerchief, and what she'd do if he should sneak, and make her be "it" in hide-and-seek. He didn't believe she'd pout or cry like Sis, but she probably wouldn't play games at all—just hug her dolls, and be a mamma baby. Oh, he'd have lots of sport teasing her. He'd pull her hair when nobody looked, and put mice——"

"Oh, let me do it." It was the cousin!

"Nope."

"Please, Cousin Bob, I want to."

"Nope!"

"Why not?"

"You don't know enough, silly. You're a girl!"

"Why, girls can make kindling, can't they? I'd just love to try. Please let me."

She came closer and touched his arm. He drew away, but she smiled at him, and he didn't know what to say.

"You'd cut yourself. This here ax is heavy, and anyways it ain't fun splitting kindling."

"I wouldn't cut myself, and it looks awfully easy. Please, Cousin Bob!"

"Ma would be mad if I let you. You'd get your dress dirty, and maybe cut off your foot."

She looked thoughtfully at her red slippered foot for a moment, and turned to him.

"I wouldn't put it where I could cut it off. I'd keep it on the ground."

"It's all cut, and pa don't like a lot laying around. I've got to carry it in now."

He stooped to pick it up. If she'd only go away! He hated to get caught in this ugly work. Still he'd take a big armful and look great. He almost staggered under the weight of it, and walked proudly toward the house. Golly, but it was a lot to carry! She'd think he was awfully big, anyway.

And then it happened. He'd forgotten all about that old rock in the path, and the load was so high he couldn't see over.

"Darnation" was only half out, when he and the kindling landed in a hopeless heap beside the rock. And the girl cousin saw! She even came running to him.

"Oh, Cousin Bob, are you hurt much? I'll pick up the wood. And did you get full of splinters where you fell?"

Was there ever such luck!

"Of course not, silly! I wouldn't have fell if you hadn't made me."

"Why, Cousin Bob, I didn't make you fall. At least I didn't mean to."

"Well, you made me turn around. I was afraid you'd cut your head off with that ax, even if I did tell you not to. You want to let it alone, do you hear?"

He was standing up now, feeling quite as sorry as he looked; covered with dust, his face red with shame and anger. She came close, and started to brush off the dirt.

"I'm sorry, Cousin Bob, but I wasn't going to cut my head off. I won't touch the ax—only it looks as if it would be fun."

"Aw, well," he hurried to take the wood to the kitchen.

At supper, his hair was glistening with water—those pesky fuzzes in his hair had to be plastered down. He had on his coat—it was warm, too, and he hated coats. Even his hands and nails were quite clean. They had put him next to her, and he wished they hadn't. His knife slipped when he went to cut things, and his fork dropped all it picked up. Once as he was cutting a very tough piece of meat, his hand slipped, the meat flew half across the table, and his elbow hit the girl cousin just as she was lifting a glass of water. It spilled, of course, and ran down the front of her pretty red dress. She didn't say anything—only looked at her dress as if she felt very, very badly, and that made him more miserable than if she had scolded. Sis would have said lots of things. That would have made him mad, and he would have been glad to spoil her dress or anything, to get even. But this—somehow he couldn't eat much now, even if he had been hungry before. His face was so red it hurt, his coat rubbed his neck, and he was mad at everything.

It was over at last, the whole dreadful meal, and he crept to the kitchen where he could eat his meat off the bone, and get away from girls. My, how he hated them! But just as he was finishing a bone, and his hands were very greasy, there was a rustle of little skirts, and the girl was there!

"Why, Cousin Bob, didn't you get enough to eat at the table? Mamma don't let me eat afterward."

"No, of course I didn't, silly. How could I, with you a-crowding my elbows, so I couldn't cut my meat or nothing?"

"Did I really, Cousin Bob? I didn't mean to. Will you forgive me? I'm sorry."

Bob's mouth opened, and almost forgot to shut again. Then he grinned. "Gee, she's easy," he muttered to himself.

"I guess, then, mamma's right. She says if I'm naughty, I'll get punished whether she does it or not. It's naughty to crowd people at the table, mamma says. That's why my dress got spoiled, I guess. It looks awfully bad, though, and it's new."

Her voice broke, and Bob thought he almost saw tears in her eyes. If there had really been tears, he would have been cross. He hated cry babies. But this girl felt bad enough to cry, and didn't. He liked that.

"Gee! I'm sorry about your dress. It's a 'jim-slicker,' anyway."

"A what, Cousin Bob?"

He squirmed. "Why—why, it's nice."

She fingered it proudly. "Yes, it's quite 'spensive. It's just as nice as mamma's good silk dress."

"It rattles when you pinch it, don't it?" he came closer now, interested.

"It's nicer to go this way," and she rubbed one hand quickly up and down over the skirt.

"Gee whiz! It sounds most like birds, or something. Can't I try it?"

"Yes, only rub real quick."

Bone and all, he rubbed it. The noise came all right, but behind his hand was a black streak of grease, and she gave a cry.

"Why, you rubbed it with that bone, and it's spoiled for good! You're not nice, not one bit! And I hate you, so I do!" She ran from the room with a sob.

That night, Bob crept far under the bed covers, and tried to forget. But even in his sleep, he saw bones and red dresses, and heard a little girl say she hated him. Lots of girls hated him, but that was because he had teased them. He hadn't been trying to make her cross this time. If he had, it would have been different, and he wouldn't have cared. What a nuisance girls were, anyway! He hated them all, and this girl cousin, too. Only her dress was pretty, and he wished he hadn't spoiled it.

The next morning he crept sheepishly out of the house to feed the pigs. That was another job he hated, and didn't want to get caught at. She'd hate pigs, because they were so dirty, and maybe she'd hate him worse, too, if she saw him.

They came squealing and jumping to the trough, and he had just dumped the feed, when somebody touched him on the arm, and he dropped the bucket with a jerk. It fell on his toe, and it hurt. "Jehosophat!"

"Why, what did you call me, Cousin Bob?"

"Nothing."

"Oh, it's the pig you call that? I thought you looked at me. And Cousin Bob, I was rude last night when you spoiled my dress. Mamma said so, and she said I must 'pologize. I didn't mean to be naughty. I forgot."

"Aw, you needn't say nothin'. I guess I done it, and maybe I ought to say——"

"Then we're all 'pologized up, aren't we? I'm so glad! And those little piggies, Cousin Bob. Just look at them! Oh, please catch one for me. I'd just love to have one. Please!"

He looked at her in disgust. She wore a fresh pink dress and had big bows of pink ribbon on her hair. She jumped about from one foot to another in her excitement. Altogether, she was about the prettiest little girl he could imagine. And she wanted one of those dirty little pigs!

"Why, they're dirtier than—bones," he finished awkwardly.

"Oh, but this dress washes, and it doesn't matter. Look at their tails wiggle! Why, they're curled! Are they naturally curly, Cousin Bob? They're so tight curled, they look as if they'd hurt. And oh, please, Cousin Bob, please!"

"Why, no, crazy; they'd bite."

"Really, truly? I never saw little weensy piggies before, and I want one. Oh, please!"

She was on the fence now, and did not see a big pig nosing on the ground near her, till it raised its head with a great grunt to examine her f[illegible] she remained there, motionless with [illegible] half jumped and half fell to the safe [illegible]

It was funny, so funny that Bob rolled [illegible] on the grass with shrieks of laughter. [illegible] Girls were so silly!

She got up at last, her face red and [illegible] started toward the house, but she limped [illegible] badly. That frightened him. Was she really [illegible] would it last long? Why, they were going [illegible] through the meadows to grandfather's, and [illegible] stacks of apples that afternoon. Maybe [illegible]

She leaned against a tree farther on, and [illegible] tear fall down each cheek. She was holding [illegible]

"Say, are you hurt, honest Injun?" He [illegible] ward her, but she put the foot down again, and [illegible] for the house without answering.

"Wait a minute. I'll help you."

He caught up easily. She was going [illegible] but he didn't help her. He didn't know how, [illegible] place, and she looked so sober and so [illegible] afraid to try. It was awfully long, walking [illegible] barn to the house when nobody said anything. [illegible] gate he stopped.

"Say, I didn't mean to laugh, only—the pig [illegible] scared."

She looked at him for a minute, and her lips [illegible] but she didn't say anything. He stepped from [illegible] to another, and wished she would. At the house, [illegible] opened, and somebody came out.

"Mamma!" She seemed to forget her foot and [illegible] thing, in a quick rush to her mother. And [illegible] cried! He turned and went to the barn. She [illegible] hurt badly, and he was sorry. He always laughed [illegible] he had no business to. Maybe she couldn't play [illegible] long time, and he wanted to do lots of things.

They didn't get to grandfather's that day, nor [illegible] for the foot was swollen. But they sat in the [illegible] while her mamma told them stories, and it wasn't [illegible] as it might have been. After two days she was [illegible] again, and they had great sport running over [illegible] and discovering new playhouses. One day it [illegible] apple tree, and the next a haystack, but everything [illegible] fun, for the cousin had never seen the country [illegible] and liked any place he showed her.

Sometimes Sis went along, but not very often. [illegible] had better times when she didn't. When they [illegible] alone, he almost forgot that the cousin was [illegible] When he remembered, he didn't like her so [illegible] the most part, she was just a grand new playfellow [illegible] he had never found half so many interesting [illegible] do before she came.

They liked to go up the creek best of all, [illegible] at the rapids, where he had a water wheel. [illegible] went there. He wouldn't let her, for fear she [illegible] something; but this cousin never broke anything [illegible] only danced up and down with glee, when he [illegible] thing she liked, and that made him feel big [illegible]

It came at last near the time for her to leave. [illegible] were at the rapids, sitting on the rocks, when [illegible] membered something.

"Say, I heard Jim, the hired man, say you [illegible] when they left. Is that so?"

"I don't know, Cousin Bob."

"Well, if it's so, I'm going to kiss you before [illegible]

"Oh, but I'm afraid mamma wouldn't think [illegible] nice, Cousin Bob. Mamma's very 'ticular. I'll [illegible] though, if you want me to."

"Well, maybe. But wouldn't it be better for [illegible] to do it and ask her afterwards? Or, you wouldn't [illegible] to say anything about it, would you? I don't [illegible] ma everything. What's the use?"

"Oh, but you're not a girl! Mamma says if I [illegible] everything, I'll be a nicer lady, 'cause she was [illegible] girl once, and knows how it feels. Now, you [illegible] never was a little boy, I guess, so it doesn't [illegible] much difference."

"Well, but I wouldn't tell your mother, if I [illegible]

"But she'd know it anyway if she saw you [illegible] and maybe she'd scold right before everybody."

"Oh, I ain't a-going to kiss you before every[illegible]

"Why not, Cousin Bob? Where would you [illegible] then?"

"Oh, I dunno! Here, maybe, or behind the [illegible] some place. It wouldn't be nice before everybody."

The next day was their last. She was to leave [illegible] evening, and they went to the water wheel to [illegible] last fun. It wasn't very much fun, though, [illegible] was thinking of how he'd have to work now, [illegible] play any more, and she was thinking how dull [illegible] would be to go back to the city, and never [illegible] cousin any more. She was thinking of something [illegible] too; and he was remembering what Jim, the hired [illegible] told him. Jim knew everything, and when he [illegible] know anything he always asked Jim. Jim said [illegible] to kiss a girl good-by, and Jim knew, because [illegible] man.

She sat on the rock, and twirled her handkerchief [illegible] wondered if she should tell him what she had [illegible] hated to, and yet he ought to know!

"Say, Cousin Bob," she began timidly, "[illegible] mamma about it last night."

"About what?"

"Why, don't you know? What you asked [illegible] day."

"Oh, you did? Well what did you do that [illegible] bet she said no. It's just like mothers. [illegible] done, she couldn't do nothing. Before I'd [illegible] mother everything!"

"But listen, Cousin Bob! She didn't say [illegible] She said nobody but relations kissed girls [illegible] when I asked her what relations, she said [illegible] brothers. She didn't say cousins, though."

"Aw, but cousins is relations. Sure they [illegible]

"Well, I thought so, maybe, but I didn't ask [illegible] —well, 'cause I was afraid she'd say cousins [illegible] lations, and then——"

"Gee, I'm glad you didn't ask. Maybe she'[illegible] wasn't."

"We can play they are though, can't we?"

"Well."

"Well?"

She sat kicking the sides of her rock, and h[illegible] the sides of his.

"Well, when shall I do it? Now?"

"I don't know, Cousin Bob."

"I'll tell you what! I'll do it now, and ma[illegible] again before you leave. Shall I?"

"Well."

He stood up sheepishly. She sat still, and [illegible] water.

"Well, stand up, can't you?"

"Do I have to stand up, Cousin Bob?"

"Why, sure!"

He put his hands grimly behind his back, an[illegible] to get up courage. She fumbled with h[illegible] [illegible]iting.

"Gee," he sighed, when it was over. "I'm [illegible] even if it was fun."

"Yes, Cousin Bob."

They walked very far apart down the meado[illegible]

"I guess I better not kiss you again, though. [illegible] long to get ready, and somebody would see [illegible] I'd feel cheap to get caught, wouldn't y[illegible] say how often you was to kiss a girl, bu[illegible] will do. Don't you think so?"

"I guess so, Cousin Bob. And I do hope cou[illegible] [illegible]tions!" she finished with a sigh.

"Sure they are. If you don't think so, don't [illegible] and nobody'll know the difference."

"Well."

"Say, you like me, don't you?"

"Why, yes, Cousin Bob."

"Well, I like you. Most girls I don't. Sis m[illegible] and so do the other girls. I used to kind[illegible] down the road. But I don't any more. [illegible] up on curling papers for Sunday, Sis s[illegible] curls don't stay. Yours do, don't they?"

"Yes, they're natural."

"Well, I thought so, and I like you. Curl[illegible] and you're nice. But say, do you like th[illegible] of 'em, I mean?"

"Why, some, Cousin Bob."

"Well, you mustn't. If I don't like any girls [illegible] mustn't like any boys but me. See?"

"Yes, I guess so."

"Well, you won't then, will you? You better [illegible] do, I'll like Maggie again down the road."

"Then I won't, Cousin Bob."

"Honest Injun? Cross your heart and hope to [illegible]

He stood up sheepishly. She sat still, and looked at the water.

"Do I have to stand up, Cousin Bob?"

"Why, sure!"

He put his hands grimly behind his back, and pinched himself to get up courage. She fumbled with her fingers, smiling.

"Yes, Cousin Bob."

"I guess so, Cousin Bob. And I do hope cousins are relations," she finished with a sigh.

"Sure they are. If you don't think so, don't tell your mamma, and nobody'll know the difference."

"Well."

"Say, you like me, don't you?"

"Why, yes, Cousin Bob."

"Well, I like you. Most girls I don't. Sis makes me tired, and so do the other girls. I used to kind of like Maggie down the road. But I don't any more. Her hair she puts up on curling papers for Sunday, Sis says, and the curls don't stay. Yours do, don't they?"

"Oh, they're natural."

"Well, I thought so, and I like you. Curly hair's nice, and you're nice. But say, do you like the boys, any of 'em, I mean?"

"Why, some, Cousin Bob."

"Well, you mustn't. If I don't like any girls but you, you mustn't like any boys but me. See?"

"Oh, I guess so."

"Well, you won't then, will you? You better not. If you do, I'll like Maggie again down the road."

"Then I won't, Cousin Bob."

WITH THE BRAND OF CAIN.

A French scientist has made a remarkable proposal in regard to the punishment of murderers in France. He is of opinion that neither guillotining nor life imprisonment is an adequate or suitable punishment for murder. The guillotine, he points out, inflicts absolutely no suffering on the criminal, who is probably a man who has passed his life in inflicting suffering on others. As to life imprisonment, it entails a heavy expense to the country and generally reduces the prisoner to insanity.

He suggests, therefore, that such criminals shall be branded on the face with a red-hot iron and then released. The branding, he thinks, should be done in public, the letter "M," signifying meurtrier, the French word for murderer, being stamped as an ineradicable mark on the forehead of the criminal. He would thus carry about to the end of his days the mark of his crime, which is a constant warning to his kind.—[Montreal Herald.

The Way Out.

AN ATTEMPT TO GATHER ROSES RESULTS IN MATRIMONY.

From London Chronicle.

LITTLE Lucy Carmichael and I were fellow-students at the same dingy, old London Training College for Teachers. When she left, it was to go as assistant mistress at a big board school in the progressive North. At the same time I accepted an appointment in Canada; and thus it came about that, though we corresponded regularly, we had seen nothing of each other for four years or more. Then I returned to England to find to my infinite astonishment that Lucy had become Lady Daintree, and was but lately returned from her honeymoon.

I was rather doubtful of the propriety of calling on her, seeing to what a dizzy eminence in the social world she had risen; but relying on our old friendship, and on what I knew of her sterling character, I decided to risk it. And, as I had hoped, I found that she was not in the least changed—except, if that were possible, for the better.

Inevitably, our talk was chiefly of her husband.

"We became acquainted in the—really, you know—most unconventional way," said she.

"Do tell me about it," I urged her, breathlessly, as she paused.

And she did—to this effect.

She had gone out one morning, before breakfast, during her last summer vacation, to gather wild flowers. She wore an effective white muslin frock, with a blue sash, and a burnt-straw hat, trimmed with poppies. She surmised, demurely, that she looked far more charming and pretty thus arrayed than you would have deemed it possible for her to look, had you only seen her in her workaday garments of severe gray serge. Which seemed probable enough.

She strolled along, revelling in her untrammeled liberty, until she came upon a disused chalk pit on the edge of the road; and half-way down the steep side of the pit was a wild-rose bush, pink with fragrant blossom, and it tempted her. She thought, quite rightly, that a handful of the delicate blooms would add considerably to her general attractiveness, and gingerly she went after them. She began to struggle with the briars and brambles, and at last to get rather hot, and even a little cross as the thorns scratched and touzled her, while the bush itself refused to yield up its treasure, except grudgingly and unsatisfactorily, in the form of showers of falling petals.

And then a voice called out to her: "You will never do it that way."

The voice came from below. It was a man's voice. She looked down through a web of branches, and caught a glimpse of the man—or, rather, of a segment of his face under a shapeless, battered straw hat, tilted rakishly over one eye. He was smiling up at her with an expression of frank amusement on his sun-browned countenance.

"You should bend the twigs back," he shouted. "Wait a moment, and I'll show you how."

"I know perfectly well, thank you, how——"

She was beginning in her haughtiest tone, when the dead stump to which she had been clinging snapped off short in her hand, and she lost her balance. There was only one course open to her, then, if she were to keep her feet, and that was to yield to gravitation, and plunge pell-mell down the slope at full speed. And this course she took, with the result that she precipitated herself, breathless and dishevelled, into the outspread, welcoming arms of the odious person at the bottom of the hollow. Instantly she wrenched herself out of his embrace.

"How dare you, sir!" she cried, well-nigh weeping with mortification.

"I beg your pardon," he said gravely. "But it was necessary. You might have hurt yourself, if I hadn't——"

"If you had not been there I should have been perfectly safe," she flashed.

"Well, you're safe now," he pointed out.

Then they stood and confronted each other: she, flushed and angry; he, cool and suave.

She wondered how long he had been watching her. He had quiet, shrewd eyes, and a thin, dark face. She decided that he was one of the least handsome men she had ever met, and certainly the worst-dressed. His clothes were old and stained, and even ragged and frayed, here and there. His hat was nothing better than a broken, weatherbeaten ruin.

"Appearances are against me, I know," he observed, divining her unuttered thoughts, "and I regret it. If only I were as disreputable as I look you could, of course, reward me with the customary twopence for having saved your life; but, unhappily, I am quite respectable and solvent, really, and so——"

"Saved my life!" she repeated scornfully. "I was in no danger whatever—until you startled me."

"I suppose I am a bit startling," he remarked, reflectively.

She turned from him with a gesture of disdain, and gazed about her. On every hand the steep sides of the cup-like chalk pit rose abruptly to the upper world. The edges were torn and fretted with jagged fissures, and straggling, low growths of fern and furze, showing blackly against the sun-flushed sky. And gradually she was possessed of a dread foreboding that she would find it a most difficult task to scale those precipitous, crumbling heights unaided. The man stood regarding her with a flickering, whimsical, unsubduable smile.

"Yes, I am afraid I shall have to help you out," he said. "Those high-heeled shoes of yours——"

She withdrew them hastily into the shadow of her gown; but somehow the bitter retort that she yearned to utter would not evolve itself. She had never felt less equal to an occasion.

"I can manage it all right," she said, with a better show of confidence than she felt.

"In that case I won't intrude on you any longer," said he. "Good-morning."

He began to make the sharp ascent, and she watched him. Even he seemed to find it most difficult. Indeed, had he not been assisted by his walking-stick, which he dug deep into the chalk at each upward step, it looked as if he never would have been able to climb out at all. How, then, was she to climb out? Poor Lucy asked herself, despairfully.

"I'll not let him help me, though," she vowed; "for I think I never met such a detestable——"

He had gained the rim of the hollow at last, and stood there, looking down on her.

"Aren't you going to make a start?" he called out.

She vouchsafed no reply.

"I'll throw you my stick, anyhow," he said, in his unconscionable matter-of-course way. "You will find it helpful, perhaps. Look out."

"I do not require——" she returned freezingly.

But the stick was already whizzing through the air. It fell at her feet. She had rather hoped it would hit her; then he would have realized what a clumsy brute he was, and have been properly sorry and apologetic, and she would have had the advantage of him at once.

"I'll not use his stick, though," said Lucy.

But in the end she found she had to use it, the slippery, loose surface of the pit walls defying her to surmount them at any point whatsoever.

Nearly an hour she spent in abortive attempts to escape from her absurd predicament. She grew hot and damp and excessively cross; but it was not until she was nearly exhausted that she gave in. Stinging, scalding tears of chagrin trickled under her eyelids as she stooped and picked up the stick at last. And when the supreme moment arrived in which, utterly spent but exultant, she stood once more on level ground, her first act was to hurl the stick back into the pit again. But, alas, for the feminine aim that so often misses its object! The stick alighted on a tall bush only half-way down the declivity, where it reposed mockingly, conclusive, glaring evidence, not of her having been able to do without it, as she had meant it to be, but of her consuming pique under ignominious capitulation.

"Ah, why did you do that?"

It was the voice of the man, of course. She looked about for him immediately on climbing out, but it appeared he had been meanly hiding behind a tree.

"I was beginning to get a bit anxious about you," said he. "If my work had not engrossed me so I should have come to your assistance before this." Then she perceived that he still held a paint brush in his hand. He had not been hiding, then, for the pleasure of gloating over her discomfiture. Oddly enough, she was glad to know that.

"Thank you for your tardy solicitude," she retorted stiffly, and made a mock curtsey. Then, as she caught sight of one leg of an easel close by, she exclaimed impulsively, for she did a little sketching herself: "Oh, is that your picture? . . . But how fatuous. Of course, it is."

As if half-consciously, she had moved toward the easel.

"Of course it is fatuous, as you say," he rejoined. "But I wish you hadn't, all the same, because—well, because spoiling canvas amuses one. And, do you know," he said, smiling again, "I am one of those ridiculous persons who would far rather be an amusing failure than a dull success. I would, somehow. I am like that."

"It's very nice," she murmured. After all, he was not such an ogre. His smile was pleasant, and he had beautiful, white teeth.

"The picture, do you mean?" he queried. "Oh, but it isn't. And you know it."

"You are very rude," she said. "But, seemingly, you don't know it."

"Why am I rude?"

"You contradict me."

"It would have been ruder, surely, to have agreed with you when you were disparaging your own judgment."

There was a somewhat lengthy pause.

"Are you aware of the awful fact," she asked abruptly, "that you and I ought not to be speaking to each other like this?" And her cheeks dimpled, and her eyes were roguish.

"Perfectly aware," he answered. "Isn't it jolly!"

"We don't know each other."

"I rather question that statement," he said, solemnly. "I fancy we know each other far better than we should if some unintelligible third party had mumbled a formal introduction. But, if it really matters, my name is——" And he gave Lucy his surname, which at once became her secret.

"And I," said she, "am Miss Carmichael."

"And may I ask, Miss Carmichael, what you are doing in this back-of-the-world place?" he inquired.

Emanating from another sort of man this inquiry might have smacked of impertinence, but from him it seemed only in the nature of a friendly, conversational advance. So Lucy replied: "Oh, nothing at all at present."

"Your favorite occupation, perhaps? as it is mine," he said.

"But you paint."

"Say that I try to paint, just as you tried to gather dog roses."

"Ah, that reminds me. What were you doing in that pit?"

"Waiting for you," said he.

"But that is absurd!"

"On the contrary—you came. . . . But, seriously, are you staying here?"

"Not any longer, thank you," she answered, demurely. "Good-morning."

And she tripped away and left him.

"But—but you met again?" I cried, when Lucy had finished her story.

She smiled. "Well, obviously," she answered, playing with her new wedding ring.

HOW THE JEWELRY ROBBERY AT BEECHES WAS UNEARTHED.

From Tit-Bits.

I HAD just reached my office after lunch one miserably wet day last November, when a visitor was announced. "Mr. Engstrom" was inscribed on the card—a name quite unknown to me.

"Mr. De Warre?" said my visitor, a shrewd-looking, well-groomed man, who apparently had not yet touched 40.

"That is my name," I answered. "Please take a seat, and tell me what I can do for you."

"I am in great trouble," said Mr. Engstrom. "We had burglars at our house at Lyndhurst, in the New Forest, the night before last. They broke in while we were at dinner, and several thousand pounds' worth of jewels are gone from my wife's bedroom. But what distresses us most is that a valuable heirloom—a pearl necklace of great value, that has been in our family for 200 years—is among the plunder. The other jewelry we could bear to lose, but not this. To tell you the truth," he added, with a smile, "I must own to being a little superstitious, and there is a legend in our family that this necklace was a gift to an ancestress of mine by Charles II, and, whoever should lose it, his days would be very short and full of evil. It is said it was lost about the beginning of last century, and the legend came true. My wife is more superstitious than myself, and I am afraid, if it is not recovered, it may seriously affect her health. Of course, the police have been at work, but I have not very great confidence in them, and up to the present they have discovered nothing. If you can aid me I shall be very glad."

"I am willing to try, Mr. Engstrom, but perhaps you will give me some account of the affair?"

"I had better begin by giving you particulars of myself and family, I suppose?"

"Yes, if you please; it is hard to say what may, and what may not, throw light on the matter."

"I am," said Mr. Engstrom, "the descendant of an old landed family, who have lived in Hampshire for generations. We are not as wealthy as once we were, and I find employment for my time by being on the board of directors of several companies. I have only been married a short time—not quite a year—and we have been living very quietly. On Tuesday night, when the burglary occurred, there were only five of us at dinner. Besides my wife and myself were the rector and his wife and Capt. Olyer (the son of an old friend,) whom I lately met in the city and invited down. He has been with us over a week, and leaves to join his regiment on Saturday.

"We had just reached dessert, and Capt. Olyer was inquiring of the butler if Wisden (his man servant) had returned from London, when my wife's maid came in gasping: 'Oh, ma'am, your jewels is gone—robbers!' and sank fainting on the floor.

"'Good heavens! I exclaimed, and we sprang up.

"Let us search out of doors at once,' said the captain. 'Bring us a light, John,' he said to the butler, and rushed out. We followed him.

"It was quite dark, and we had not gone a dozen steps before he fell down. 'Look out!' he cried, 'the brutes have laid wires. They have caught one fool, at any rate,' he remarked, as he got up. I went back for the light, and sure enough there were wires round that side of the house.

"The captain was holding his nose. He was but little hurt, he said, for, luckily, he had fallen on the grass. At the captain's suggestion I summoned two men servants.

"'One of you ride to the station,' he said, 'and have any suspicious stranger stopped, and ask them to telegraph to the stations each way. And you,' to the other, 'go for the police, quick. Meanwhile, if you have a lantern, Mr. Engstrom, we will search the neighborhood.'

"I found a lantern, and we searched the grounds and the surrounding roads. We found nothing, save a ladder under one of the windows, and a small brooch which the thief or thieves had dropped. No suspicious-looking person had been seen in the village or at the station, and the two policemen who came could do nothing beyond looking wise. I called at the Police Station this morning, but they have no clue, nor is it likely they will have one. All I have learned from them is that they believe that two were engaged in the affair, from the footmarks."

"It will be too dark by the time we could reach Lyndhurst to investigate," I said, "but I will come on by the first train in the morning."

"The train from Waterloo reaches Lyndhurst at 10:15. If you come by that I will meet you at the station," said Mr. Engstrom. "It is about two miles to my house—the 'Beeches.'"

"I wish you to promise me one thing, not to mention to any one the object of my visit. Call me a fellow-director or anything you like."

I found Mr. Engstrom at the station the next morning with a dog-cart. I refused to talk on the object of my visit save to ask one question:

"Why did you keep such a valuable necklace at home, Mr. Engstrom?"

"I keep it in the safe deposit in Chancery Lane," he answered, "and only brought it home last Saturday because my wife wanted it at the county ball tomorrow night."

I had some lunch and a pleasant chat with my host and hostess, after which I asked permission to interview the servants.

Unless I was greatly at fault in the present instance, the servants had nothing to do with the robbery. They gave me all the information they could, and spoke with genuine sorrow of the loss their employers, whom they evidently respected highly, sustained.

"Are your visitors in?" I asked Mr. Engstrom.

"Capt. Olyer is rabbit-shooting with the rector, but he will be in to dinner."

"Oh, I merely wanted to have his account of what happened. Now, would you be so kind as to have the wires arranged round the house in the exact place the burglars left them?"

The gardener who had taken them up brought them again. It was fine but strong wire, fastened to the ground by small iron pegs.

"Are the wires in the exact place?"

"I put the pegs in the very holes, sir," replied the gardener. "You can see the holes yourself, sir."

"And now I should be glad to be left alone a little," I said. "I want to make some minute investigations."

My wish was complied with, and I went down on my hands and knees to examine.

I was well satisfied. In five minutes I had made an important discovery.

I next examined the window where the burglars had entered from the outside, and then entering the house I went upstairs, and, with the help of the maid, examined the bedroom. The window had been left half open, the maid said, as "master was so particular about fresh air." Next I inspected the footsteps, a matter of some difficulty, considering the number of people who had been there since. But, finally, I traced them across a flower bed into the shrubbery, where they were quite distinct. Only one person had passed there, and I came to the conclusion the sapient police had evolved two robbers from their inner consciousness. But what interested me more was that the palings which separated the shrubbery from a public byway had lately been tarred, and were not yet dry. The robber had climbed over the palings and, whoever he was, he must have carried away a little of the tar on his person. In fact, the marks of his fingers were quite distinct.

I felt tolerably satisfied, and having walked to the postoffice and sent a telegram, I strolled round the village till the reply came. It was then 4 o'clock, and as dinner was not until 6, I took a longer walk through the forest.

On getting back I had a pleasant half hour in the billiard-room with Mr. Engstrom.

Capt. Olyer returned just in time for dinner, and I was only introduced to him as we entered the dining-room. He was faultlessly got up, of well-made figure, and handsome features bearing large traces of dissipation. As for his speech, he had an invincible objection to the letter "r," and carefully avoided its use.

We had finished soup, when I begged a thousand pardons for leaving the table for a few minutes. My host looked a little surprised at my want of manners, and the captain surveyed me through his eyeglass as though I were a new kind of animal. I was only gone a few minutes, but it was time well spent.

When we reached dessert and Mrs. Engstrom had left the table, I led the conversation round to the burglary, and induced the captain to give his version. I waited till he had finished, and then, looking at him steadily, said:

"Now, isn't it rather a curious thing, Capt. Olyer, that you should fall over the wires when they were quite three feet away?"

Engstrom stared at me, and the captain did not answer till he had drunk a glass of wine.

"What do you mean, sir?" he asked, at last.

"I mean," I replied, still watching him keenly, "was it not a curious thing that you should be tripped up by blades of grass? . . . And is it not curious also," I went on, mercilessly, "that your servant, or rather your accomplice, should be standing under the bedroom window here at the same time that he was in London?"

The captain sat dazed and pale and motionless, though his hands trembled, and Mr. Engstrom gasped out: "Mr. De Warre, whatever are you suggesting?"

"I suggest," I answered, as steadily as before, "that the burglar is sitting before you."

"Sir," thundered Mr. Engstrom, pale with emotion, "you are forgetting yourself. To accuse my old friend's son of being a thief! Preposterous!"

"This is not your old friend's son, Mr. Engstrom. Capt. Olyer of the Thirty-eighth Hussars is at present with his regiment at Woolwich, and replied to me today. Here is the telegram:

"'Capt. Olyer to De Warre: Am here. What is the meaning of this inquiry?"

The pseudo-captain had risen, and looked round as if seeking means of escape.

"Sit down," cried Engstrom, "and if you want to save yourself from jail, make a full confession. De Warre, I beg your pardon."

"Don't trouble about that," I said; "of course, it was hard to credit it."

The poor wretch sat down again and stammered out his story. His name turned out to be Odgers, an ex-sergeant in the Hussars, expelled from the army in disgrace. His accomplice, who acted as his servant, had hidden the jewels in the wood, near the house, till they could safely be removed.

At breakfast time the next morning I had to relate how I had unearthed the conspiracy.

"First of all," I said, "the fact that the burglary occurred shortly after you had brought the jewelry from London convinced me that the thief was some one in the house. And when I had the wires relaid and found that the captain had fallen three feet away from them—a fact which I discovered from the impression made by his knees and the toes of his boots—I thought things were very suspicious against him. Upstairs I found that it was little trouble for him to slip into your wife's room, and throw the casket down as soon as she left there. I learned that he had been the last to appear at the dinner table, and the case was strength way station I discovered that a description of his 'servant,' had arrived the 5:30 train, and not by the 9:15, appear. The Cheese.

MARCEL PEROT, one of the chefs of the famous Ritz Hotel, in Paris, is in America to learn how to make cocktails, to stew snapper, to fry oysters, and to prepare canvasback duck.

M. Perot, discussing cheese in Baltimore, where he was studying the snapper question, said:

"The taste in cheese has grown more delicate on the continent. A cream cheese, raw, is now our favorite, whereas in the past we demanded cooked cheeses of the greatest harshness and strength. Why——"

The noted chef laughed.

"Why," he said, "when I was at the Petit Riche many years ago, a remarkable thing happened, a thing that indicates the sort of cheeses that in the past were eaten. A patron, seated at a corner table in the Petit Riche, called suddenly to the waiter:

"'Baptiste, take away this cheese!'

"Baptiste approached.

"'Pardon me, sir,' he said, in his polite way, 'but can I fetch you something else?'

"The patron made a gesture of impatience.

"'Take this away first, hang it,' he exclaimed.

"'Yes, sir; very good, sir,' said Baptiste. 'We have some fine Gorgonzola, or perhaps the Gruyère——'

"'Great Scott!' the other interrupted, 'if you don't take this stuff away at once, I'll send for the police.

"'I am very sorry, sir,' said Baptiste. 'Is there anything wrong with it?'

"'Wrong?' shouted the guest. 'Why, it's eating all my bread.'"

His Contribution.

STORIES have been told of buttons, tacks and various extraneous substances found in contribution boxes, but it is seldom that a church member strikes a blow so severe as was that delivered by Amos Budd of Potterville on one occasion.

It was at the close of a missionary sermon that Mr. Budd, whose wont it was to contribute 10 cents to each of the charities to the support of which the church subscribed, was seen to take a blue slip from his pocket and look at it keenly and affectionately.

When, after a slight but evident hesitation, he dropped the slip, carefully folded, into the box, Deacon Lane, who was passing it, could hardly refrain from an exclamation of joy.

"The Lord will bless you, Brother Budd," he said when the sermon was over, hurrying down the aisle to overtake the prosperous grocer.

"I hope so," returned Mr. Budd, dryly, "but I'm afraid you cal'late on that being a check that I dropped in the box. It wa'n't. 'Twas a receipted bill for kerosene the church owed me last year, and it had been overlooked. Of course it's jest the same as money, though, when you come to that."—[Youth's Companion.

Saw Himself as Others Saw Him.

ONE Sunday morning, some years ago, I stepped out into the back yard of my southern home. The "cook's boy," wearing a checked homespun shirt, was playing in the yard. He approached me and said:

"Mister Chollie, I never is had on a white shut in my life; can't you gimme one?"

I complied with this request by giving him a white shirt and a very high standing collar. With a grin and show of large white teeth he left me. That afternoon I saw the boy in the yard wearing his accustomed colored shirt. Responding to my interrogative look, he said:

"Why, doesn't she care for the jelly?" was the natural query.

"IT takes an artist to appreciate an artist," remarked Gus Rogers, of that famous team, "Rogers Brothers in Panama." "Which reminds me of the soldier who applied for leave of absence with a heartrending tale of a sick wife crying for him. The officer, familiar with the soldier's way, replied:

"'I am afraid you are not telling the truth. I have just received a letter from your wife urging me not to let you come home, because you get drunk, break the furniture, and mistreat her shamefully.'

"The private saluted and started to leave the room. He paused at the door, asking: 'Sor, may I spake to you, not as an officer, but as mon to mon?'

"'Yes; what is it?'

Caught Mother, Too.

A LITTLE girl went with her mother to see a baptizing which was being conducted at a lake a short distance from her home. She watched with great interest while the men cut a long hole in the ice, it being winter, and when the preacher took one of the candidates for baptism by the arm and led him down into the water and immersed him, the little watcher, thinking, no doubt, that they were all to be treated in like manner, turned and fled to the house. A short time after that her mother, who had been baptized, came up to the house dripping wet and was astonished by the following from the little one:

"Well, mamma, they caught you, didn't they?"—[Judge's Library.

Lord Wolseley's Dinner.

LORD WOLSELEY'S feeling for the welfare of his men once made him the hero of an episode in which undeniably he got the worst of it. The men were at dinner one day, and the orderlies were hurrying backward and forward with steaming pails of soup, when Lord Wolseley, passing by, stopped one of them and determined to see that the food provided was up to the standard he required. "Remove the lid from that pail," he said to the man. The man removed the lid. "Now let me taste that," he said.

"But plaze yer——"

"Let me taste it, I say," the commander-in-chief interrupted him. Before the man could say or do anything, Lord Wolseley got a spoon, dipped it into the pail and tasted it.

"Disgraceful!" he exclaimed. "Call that soup? Why, it tastes like nothing in the world so much as dish water."

"Plaze yer honor, that's exactly what it is," replied the man.—[Detroit News Tribune.

The fisherman replied that he did not.

"Well, I am a constable, as well as the county fish and game warden," and the M. O. B. exhibited a badge.

The angler looked up in astonishment, and then after a moment's thought, he exclaimed: "Say, do you know who I am?"

Not Overdone.

DR. A. F. W. INGRAM, the Bishop of London, said at a dinner in Washington:

"They say I overdo athletics, but I don't, really. Exercise keeps me fit. I don't overdo it any more than the Parliamentary candidate Juggins overdid his cordiality.

"Juggins was running for a slum district in Birmingham, and his cordiality among the slum voters excited a good deal of surprise. Two canvassers fell into talk about it.

"'It's a grand idea of Candidate Juggins's,' said the first. 'Instead of just shaking hands with a voter in the ordinary way, he rushes up and grabs the man's two hands, shaking them long and warmly.'

"'But isn't that rather overdoing it?' said the other canvasser.

"'Overdoing it? No, indeed. It may look like overdoing it, but Juggins knows his way about. As long as he holds both the fellow's hands, he knows his purse is safe.'"

The Farmer's Turnips.

A. BARTON HEPBURN, at the convention of the American Bankers' Association at Atlantic City, said of a certain argument:

"But that argument fails to cheer. On the contrary, it fills us with gloom and foreboding. It is like the cry, intended to be reassuring, that came to the farmer across the turnip field.

"A farmer, on a frosty autumn afternoon, went out into his turnip field and began to gather turnips. The early sun sank in the west, and, as the bluish dusk came on, the farmer perceived, at the other end of the field, two men who, laying down a bag, began to dig with frantic haste.

"The farmer watched the pair in some perplexity. What could they be doing? And he was just putting his hand to his cheek to shout and ask them their business, when one of them rose up and yelled, loudly and reassuringly:

"'Don't let us disturb you; we are only prigging a few ourselves.'"

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

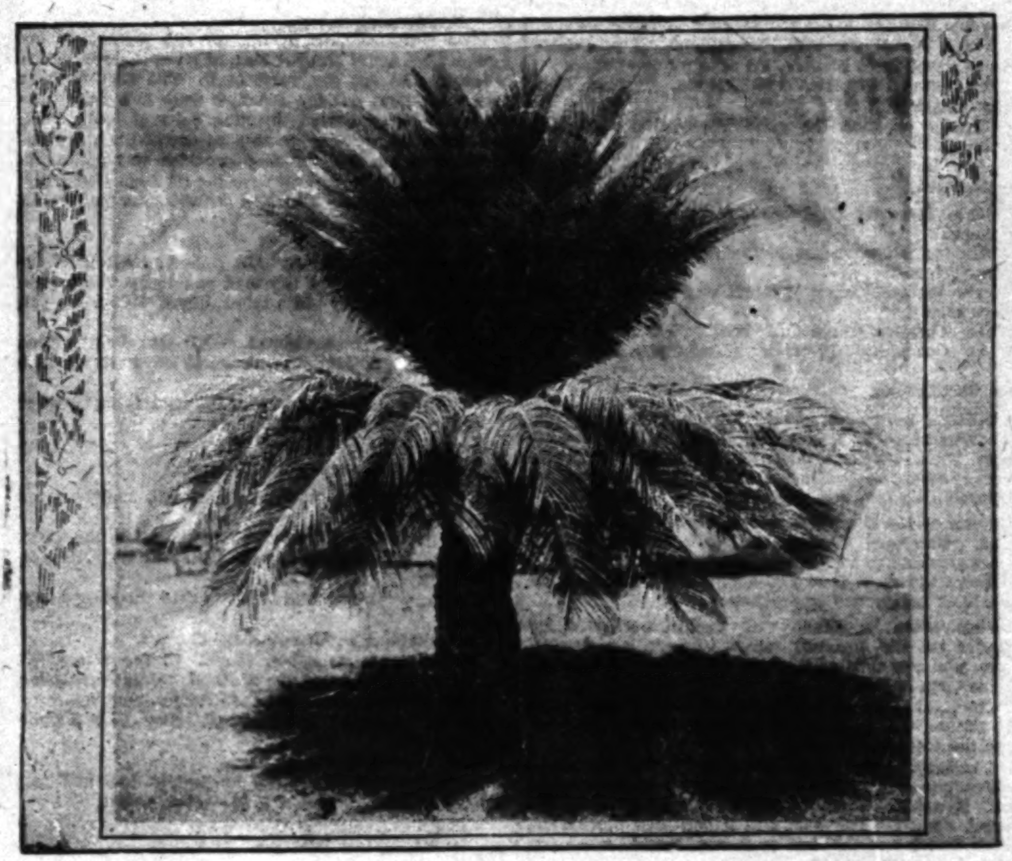
TYPES OF ROSES.

SOMETHING OF THEIR CHARACTERISTICS AND QUALITIES.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE noisettes are hybrids known to us by a few climbers of which Chromatella, Lamarque, Marechal Niel, Reve d'Or, and Solfaterre are the best. They are a very free-blooming sort, and flowering in clusters, and should be in all large collections. The Mosses are very little in evidence in Southern California, and seldom do well in any locality. Occasionally one gives fair satisfaction when planted on the north side of a building. The kinds are scarcely worthy of mention here, and generally are known by their names specifying the class, as: Pink Moss, Glory of Mosses, etc.

The Hybrid Teas are much stronger in growth than the full Teas, occupying a position midway between the Teas and the Hybrid Perpetuals, having the free-flowering habit of the former, combined with the rich colors of the latter. Examples are Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, La France (the first of its type—1867,) Caroline Testout. The Polyanthas are "cute little roses" of most exquisite form, the best-known of them being Cecil Bruner, "the button-hole rose," so familiar in Southern California. The climbing variety of this rose is much to be preferred to the bush form.



THE BUNYA-BUNYA.

The Bourbons and Bengals are classes not so popular at present as in years past. The former is extremely variable in type and generally of light colors in the flowers, while the latter, natives of China and often called Chinas, are crimson. They are small, quiet growers, very fragrant and the flowers are borne in great numbers. On account of their compact growth, they are ideal for hedges. One of the best-known among the bushes is Agrippina and James Sprunt is an excellent climbing sort, though sometimes provokingly deliberate in growth.

Every one is familiar with the good, old-fashioned Teas, the most free-blooming and most "cranky" of roses. Their luxuriance of bloom, delicate tints and fine forms make them popular with all. They do not grow so rampantly as the Hybrid Teas and should not be so freely pruned as that class. They also need considerably more care than most other sorts and cannot stand a stagnation of moisture about the roots. On the other hand, nearly all of them will thrive in a soil too light and sandy for the rampant Hybrid Perpetuals. Some of the best-known are: Bride, Bridesmaid, Duchess de Brabant, Laurette, Marie Van Houtte, Madam Lambard, Perle des Jardins, Papa Gontier, Reine Marie Henriette, Sofrano and Maman Cochet.

One well-known local rosarian was heard to remark: "If you want roses that you can see grow and that are there with the blooms in the usual rose season, get the Hybrid Perpetuals, or, as they are sometimes called, the Hybrid Remontants." This class is usually easily distinguished by luxuriance of foliage, vigor of growth and great size of blooms. They are not nearly so exacting in their requirements as nearly all other classes thriving with a minimum of care and, though called "perpetuals," are by no means perpetually in bloom. Their range of color is very great, and comprises all shades and tints found in the other classes. Being hardy and of robust habit, they may be heavily pruned and should receive a long rest during summer. Of all classes grown, they are preëminently the ones for the home owner who can bestow but little time or care on his garden. Some of the more common Hybrid Perpetuals are: General Jacqueminot, Magna Charta, Paul Neyron, Ulrich Brunner, Prince Camille de Rohan, and Xavier Olibo. Many other types like the Prairies, for instance, have been omitted because uncommon in Southern California.

Sea Coast for Floral Colors.

Owners of seacoast gardens are constantly bringing into the interior flowers of exceedingly rich colors, shades and tones impossible to rival away from coastal influences. It is a fact that colors are nowhere so vivid, rich and deep as in the beach gardens. One strange point about the matter is that the sea influences show plainer on annuals, plants that have passed their entire life on the ocean front, than on perennials grown inland and subsequently flowered near the sea; all of which goes to prove location, with its attendant soil and climatic conditions, is responsible for the results noted.

Plant More Bulbs.

Plant some more bulbs this month; no class of plants give better returns, and the time is now. Plant a full line of the Holland-grown sorts, of which we have a great variety. Roman hyacinths should be grown by the hundreds—they are such rich and dainty flowers for cutting for table decoration. In small vases with foliage from the same plants they are unsurpassed. For a more gorgeous display, nothing can rival the narcissi or daffodils. The range in colors is considerable, in form still greater, and with the jonquil branch of the family form a highly satisfactory collection, worthy of a place in the finest garden in the land.

Fine Year for Sago Palms.

The past year has been marked by some unusual growths in the sago palm, perhaps the most luxuriant for many years past. These plants make a far more luxuriant growth in the extreme Southeastern United States than they do with us—our climate as a rule is somewhat dry for its best development. In years of heavy rainfall followed by summer of warm yet cloudy days the sago reaches its best growth in California.

Our Geranium Hedges.

To a dweller of the land of promise (not of fulfillment) east of the Rocky Mountains who has coddled a sickly potted geranium through several winters, our gorgeous geranium hedges are indeed a revelation. One of our first-time visitors was last week overheard by the writer, really near a frenzy, admiring a long hedge of scarlet geraniums some four feet high—a solid mass of color—such as only our fair southland can produce. Because of their low cost and ease of growth they have really become somewhat monotonous to our permanent population, and we welcome the garden of less known plants.

SCHOOL GROUNDS.

[illegible] SHOULD BE TAUGHT THE METHODS OF PLANTING.

Too many of our school grounds remain unembellished, and even where a little planting has been attempted, shade has not been provided in sufficient [illegible] to make ideal playgrounds in warm weather. [illegible] neither shade or beauty is all for which we may [illegible], for all plant life has an educational value, and [illegible] proper advantage be taken of the planting it may be [illegible] fraught with great value to all concerned.

All children interested in plant life or who manifest a desire to be present should be allowed to see the plants put in the soil if the work is done by one who knows. If it cannot be performed outside of school hours it is [illegible] to skip a class or two that the children may learn something on which they receive no instruction in the regular course of study. Children, like many grown people, are apt to think that all that is necessary is to dig a hole, put the tree roots therein, cover them with soil and water so often as you feel inclined. Such a process is not planting any more than swallowing your food whole is eating. Improper planting is responsible for most of the failures resulting from tree planting and knowledge of the correct method will harm none and may leave a lasting impression with some.

The schoolhouse is often the very center of community life, and is the one piece of property in which all are, or should be, interested. Therefore what belongs to and surrounds all should be the most beautiful and interest-

[illegible] PALM—NEW AND OLD GROWTHS.

[illegible] here is the one spot where most of the character building is done and where the deepest and most lasting impressions are made. It being granted that we [illegible] to secure there the highest development of mind and character, is it not pertinent to ask if such development [illegible] possible in the average school with its bare and [illegible] surroundings. Nature study, forestry, botany [illegible] general agriculture is creeping into the curriculum of the common school, sometimes in disguise, but [illegible] under their proper names. There is no question in the mind of any thinking parent of the great [illegible] of a well-planted school yard and a garden and [illegible] beside is rapidly becoming a necessary adjunct.

Bunya-Bunya for Avenues.

[illegible] so much in need of an object lesson in Southern California in the proper planting of boulevards and avenues. We have nothing in the West in the shape of a [illegible] that is, or ever will be, called magnificent. An [illegible] with marginal parkways of twenty to thirty feet [illegible] a central one of from forty to sixty feet with a [illegible] on either side of the latter would make an impression on all beholders. We have plenty of suitable [illegible] for such plantations which cannot be planted on ordinary streets. One of the most suitable for such center [illegible] is the Bunya-Bunya (Araucaria Bidwillii,) from [illegible], a most beautiful tree of rather ponderous [illegible]. Planted at fifty or sixty feet apart and cared for [illegible], at a score of years of age we would have a [illegible] to cause the onlooker to both wonder and admire.

[illegible] City Blocks.

[illegible], of Hollywood, sends in the following item [illegible] from an article on San Francisco gardens, and [illegible] that we are as fundamentally wrong and that [illegible] attention should be paid to the "beautiful block" [illegible] in making the city beautiful.

[illegible] gardens either just grow, or they are a formless mass jumbled together without regard to arrangement or colors; solferino pinks, crimsons, and magentas are cheek by jowl with pure pinks, scarlets, and all varieties of purples. Where flowers bloom if you look at them and grow if you don't, it seems a waste in opportunities not to help nature make whole streets of tasteful combinations; but the people seem as indifferent to artistic grounds and careful selection in colors as they are to graft and morals. The only things that impress one with a high sense of duty and of being true to themselves, the public, and the State, are the flowers, God bless them! It's their duty and business to bloom, and bloom they do, winter and summer, in season and out, regardless of snow or rain, cold or heat."

A Tree Group for Streets.

While we have many trees of merit for street planting by far the finest group of closely-allied species is in the acacia family. Four trees that stand out prominently by reason of their excellence are: Acacias, decurrens, dealbata, mollissima and melanoxylon. All have been tested for a sufficient number of years to be accepted as standards though extensive planting was denied them some years ago, in the days of the white fly, because of their proving host plants for that pernicious insect. Of late years they have been rapidly growing in public favor and will doubtless so continue to the end of time for wherever introduced they have proven good street trees.

A National Flower Show.

The Society of American Florists have under way the making of a national flower show, to be held in Chicago, in the autumn of 1908. If such an event proves a certainty our State should make a small appropriation for aiding the movement to the end that California may have on hand a creditable exhibit of native plants and flowers, with cones, barks, woods, etc., showing all the horticultural wealth of California so far as native ornamental plant life is concerned. Should the State fail to make the necessary appropriation, the Southern California Horticultural Society should endeavor to raise sufficient funds so that our southland should be well represented. After the dates are permanently determined it would not be a difficult matter to cause some of our showiest natives to flower out of season in case such treatment became necessary.

Civic Improvement.

Civic improvement, in its broadest sense, contemplates a much wider range of work than is usually considered by workers for municipal betterment. Mr. Charles Mulford Robinson, who is soon to struggle with our shortcomings in this direction, gives us the following broad definition of the term:

"Civic improvement, as properly interpreted, means something more than making a city handsome or pretty. Such beautification as it involves has other purposes than merely to give a pleasing effect. Our cities are not designed only to be looked at. They are, primarily, places to live in and to do business in, and no civic improvement is worthy of the name unless it be based on these considerations. When based on them, we shall find it conferring more than a superficial benefit; we shall find it making the city a really better place in which to live, blessing the home life of all the citizens; and if not actually helping, at least offering no interference to business interests, while perhaps, by the attractive power of its charm, even bringing new business into town."

Wider Parkways Needed.

One of the most difficult questions to determine—one over which there is a great diversity of opinion among engineers and other city officials—is the proper proportion between the sidewalk and traveled roadway widths of any street. By sidewalk width, is meant the space from the gutter or curb line to the fence or street line, including in addition to the hardened portion of the walk, the grass strips on one or both sides of the walk.

The width of roadway should be only sufficient to accommodate the vehicular traffic which may be expected to use it. Many cities make a great mistake in laying out too wide roadways, especially upon residential streets. Such errors in judgment result in an additional burden upon the taxpayers for street-cleaning and sprinkling, and the abutting property owner gets in return additional dust, noise, street excavations and all accompanying discomforts. They are also deprived of that pleasure and restfulness which would be obtained by the use of such unnecessary roadway widths for additional sidewalk spaces with attractive greensward and additional opportunities for the growth of shrubs or graceful trees.

Our Native Bay or Laurel.

Among our native trees none are more beautiful than our native bay or laurel (umbellularia Californica) which frequents our foothill cañons. It is an evergreen of deep color and is well adapted to a variety of soils and situations though it best thrives in porous, well-drained soil with water not far from the surface. To the northward, more especially in Oregon it is extensively used for street planting and the example there set should be emulated through California, more especially on streets named Laurel, of which nearly every community has one. A considerable number of trees may be found in our gardens, but have been very sparingly used for street planting.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE LOS ANGELES SHOW.

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION NEXT MONTH.

By Henry W.. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IN less than a month the nineteenth annual poultry and pigeon exhibition of the Los Angeles County Poultry Association will take place in this town in the large and well-lighted rooms at 415-19 South Hill street. The premium list is ready for mailing, and the outlook fine for a really fine showing of good birds in all breeds and varieties. Judging will be by comparison in the hands of Messrs. Tyler, Berrar, Thomas, Browning, Jones, Nash, Hogue and Heartwell—certainly an array of talent calculated to expedite the placing of awards. The entrance fee is $1 per bird other than bantams, the latter being 50 cents per bird; exhibition pens, $2; ten-pullet pen, $5; pigeons, 50 cents per bird; pheasants, ostrich fowl, pea fowl and jungle fowl will be admitted free. The rules demand that all specimens be at the exhibition hall by 4 p.m. on December 4; entries close on the night of December 2 at 12 o'clock m.

In the list of awards there are no association cash premiums, honors consisting of ribbons, medals, trophies and a long list of special premiums. Chief among these must be mentioned the Chamber of Commerce cup, the Produce-Exchange cup, The Times annual trophy, the Riverside cup, besides many others aggregating nearly 100 in number. Besides these local and State offerings, all the leading national specialty clubs have offered honors covering their respective breeds.

The educational influence of a well-conducted poultry exhibition is of more than passing moment. Not only is it entertaining to the fancier and the visiting public, but it is a sort of annual clearance house for the disposition of stock and an exchange of ideas between breeders. Its greatest value, however, consists in demonstrating the superior value of standard-bred poultry over the mongrel and scrub bird of mixed blood. There is possibly no other portion of the State where so many people are being attracted to poultry as a means of livelihood, and there is no other town in the State where so many people are apt to visit a show as Los Angeles. In view of these two drawing facts, it behooves breeders to enter their birds freely. Good business always follows in the wake of a good show.

Birds in the Showroom.

We are often asked: "What about the care and feeding of poultry while in the exhibition hall?" That is simple, and need not give the exhibitor a moment's worry. It is the universal custom in this country for the several poultry associations to properly place the birds, give them the best of feed and care, and then at the close of the show, properly coop and return them to their owners. The entry fee is presumed to cover all the expenses of exhibiting and maintaining the birds during the exhibition, including judging, awards, etc. Of course where the show is large this is all done in a general way, and on a system previously mapped out by the superintendent. In view of this, it is best where practicable that when the exhibit is large that owners or personal attendants accompany and care for the birds, the management in such cases furnishing feed and every essential for the well-being and comfort of the birds. It pays, not only because the birds will "show up" better, but also for the reason that the owner will learn of new points, establish new trade connections and "do business" on the spot.

Scratchings from the Yards.

The South African Poultry Journal says that "It has been proved by repeated analysis that wet-fed birds lay eggs containing an excess of moisture." Indeed; then we presume their feathers will dry slow after being picked.

Poultry culture seems at low ebb in portions of the San Joaquin Valley, due possibly to the fact that grapes and other fruits have yielded unusual profits the past few years.

In some respects it seems singular that where a breed is bred in great numbers the really fine birds are not so overplenty after all. This fact goes to show that a few birds well handled will "throw" more quality than large numbers will when handled in the mass. It takes nearly one man's time to make a race horse. The same conditions apply to other lines of live stock.

The local show people are looking forward to a prosperous exhibition in this town this season. There are many new breeders since the last one, hence a good display of fine poultry is assured.

It is much better for the beginner that he grow into the poultry business, rather than that the business grow into him—the latter method is hard on the pocket-book.

Things Times Readers Want to Know.

L. Beaufort writes from this city as follows:

"(1.) I have three pullets and five hens. The hens are through molting and the pullets have been matured for about three months. Now, I have not received an egg for two months. Could you tell me the reason and suggest a remedy?

"(2.) What is the best way of curing roup in chickens which shows itself in the form of swelling and a fungus growth on the eyelids? Two of my fowls have gone blind this way."

1. It is hard to tell. Possibly your birds are shy layers by nature. If exposed to constant interruption and annoyance, or if fed scantily, especially in the matter of animal food. Try a good balanced egg food (poultry-supply houses carry it in stock) supplemented with a little ground green bone, say about an ounce per hen every other day. Feed only what they will eat up clean.

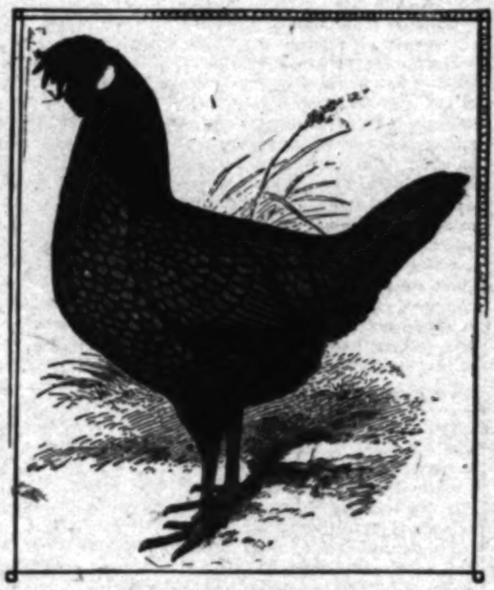
2. "Roup" is a rather elastic expression, meaning a variety of diseases affecting the head and throat of fowl. Experienced breeders do not try to "cure" severe cases of roup, as the disease is quite apt, even when checked, to leave the bird in a weakened condition. There are a number of remedies on the market for those who wish to try and save their birds. In our own case, roupy birds usually have the hatchet remedy applied.

John A. Langdon of this city writes as follows:

"My hens and cockerels have become affected with a disease that is new to me. They have warts or small boils start on the head which spread to the body. What is it? Is there a cure? I am using vaseline and carbolic acid."

Your birds are afflicted with chicken pox. Wash with carbolic soap suds; anoint with vaseline of fresh lard.

G. V. Klein sends the following:



STANDARD BRED BLUE ANDALUSIAN PULLET.

"I have a number of incubator-hatched chicks, one week old, half of which are affected with some disease that has caused me to lose from two to fifteen each day. The symptoms are these: They won't eat or drink of their own accord, are drowsy and droop all day long. If you can tell me what to do to prevent it, I would be grateful for the information. I have been feeding whole wheat, after they were two days old, but they do not seem to relish it. Would you kindly inform me what is a good food for young chicks in this climate, and do you advise giving red pepper to them for bowel troubles?"

Your chicks are suffering from diarrhoea, which causes the feathers to ruffle and smeared and gummed up with the discharges. Check by giving boiled milk to drink and dry food. Wheat alone is not all-sufficient for young chicks. Feed a well-balanced chick food to be had of the supply houses. This contains about the correct proportions of red pepper to maintain a healthy condition and a good growth.

B. M. Adams sends us a poser, from Nordhoff, that is beyond our knowledge of chicken anatomy:

"I am sending you what appears to me to be a very peculiar object, considering the place where I discovered it. I found it this morning when dressing a four-months-old Plymouth Rock male. I was on the point of taking out the bird's gizzard when I noticed it, and found it to be just above the gizzard and under the liver and in no way whatever connected with the internal organs or carcass of the bird. All the organs were in a healthy condition, and the bird itself apparently in perfect health, showing no sign of any sickness. It seems to me extraordinary that so large and heavy a body of 'foreign matter' would be 'at large' in the inside of the bird without any apparent ill effect."

This abnormal growth reached the writer in apparent good condition, Mr. Adams having carefully packed it in alcohol. It is about the size of an ordinary egg, with a filmy skin-like coating, and apparently filled with a transparent fluid. What it was doing above this bird's gizzard and under the liver, is beyond us. Can any of The Times readers who have had long experience in killing and dressing fowl cite a similar experience? And are there those among our chicken sharps who can explain the whys and wherefores of this bird's extra inward toggery?

A White Fake.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON'S INDISCRETION AND WHAT IT COST.

From New York Sun.

BEFORE she became a novelist, with breezy California girls for a heroine specialty, Gertrude Atherton served an apprenticeship as a writer of potboilers for newspapers and things. Recently she told some friends whom she met on an overland train a diverting story of a mess of difficulty she contrived to get into early in her career as a penwoman, through a bit of what she called "white faking."

"A magazine editor asked me to write an article about the girls who worked in the sweatshops of New York," she said. "I didn't know much about the sweatshop girls of New York, except that many of them wore very large, one-sided pompadours and that they would wear bedraggled feathers in their hats. But I didn't tell the magazine editor how little I knew about sweatshop girls. I was not throwing chances to write ordered articles over my shoulder, and if I had been ordered to write a treatise on the fourth dimension I certainly should have undertaken it at that time, albeit I never gained much of a mastery even over common fractions.

"So I sat down and wrote the article about the New York sweatshop girls. It was an exceedingly sympathetic article. It mentioned the hard, squalid life of the girls in the stuffy, unaired sweatshops, depicted how they were bulldozed by their cru-el masters, pictured the bare rooms in the miserable tenement-houses in which they lived when they weren't working, called attention to the pitiable pay they received for their work, dwelt impressively upon the temptations to which they were subjected, and so on.

"However, when I read it over, it struck me as being lacking in specific instances.

"Therefore—I grieve to confess it—I decided to employ a bit of poetic license, as it were, and to draw a little upon my imagination. I sketched in the purely fictitious account of one of the sweatshop girls, the sole support of her widowed mother, who fell ill with typhoid. I pictured the girl and her mother living together in a miserable room in an East Side tenement-house, told of the terrible extremities to which they were reduced by the girl's illness, described how the mother was obliged to carry out and pawn all of the scanty furniture except the one bed in order to buy medicines; how the sweatshop girl's beautiful hair fell out, so that when she recovered she found it impossible to obtain employment because she was quite bald and lacked the money wherewith to purchase a wig, and so on—oh, it was very sad and slow-musicky. It was one of the most touching tales you ever heard of, and I declare that as I wrote it I felt honestly and truly sorry for the girl myself.

"Well, the story was printed with pictures, and one of the pictures, drawn by an artist with a perfect genius for making dreary and heartbreaking pictures, showed the sick girl in the bare room, her patient mother bending over her and ministering devotedly unto her.

"Something like two months after the article was printed in the magazine I received a letter from a gentleman living up at Sitka, Alaska. He wrote me that he had just got hold of a copy of the magazine containing my article about the New York sweatshop girls, and he stated that my account of the girl who had fallen ill had touched him to the quick. He fulminated in his letter about a state of society that would permit such things to be. He inclosed a $20 bill, and begged me to turn it over to the poor girl in order that she and her mother might not lack the necessaries of life for a while at least.

"Well, I leave you to picture the sort of quandary that put me in. That $20 bill all but scorched my fingers, and I thought and thought about what I should do with it; but for the life of me I couldn't think of any way out. Finally, after tossing all night over it, I had an inspiration. I had told one white one in my story. Why not wiggle out of the scrape by telling another? So I sat down and wrote a letter to the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska. I told him that since my article had gone to press, a noble-hearted young fellow, well able to provide for the girl, had come forward and made her an offer of marriage, and that they were then about to be married. I thanked him for the generous spirit which had actuated him in sending the money, but I stated that in view of the approaching marriage the girl would not need it, and so I returned the $20 bill to him. I thought that would settle the matter, and I rather preened myself over the ingenuity of my idea. Of course I was rather conscience-stricken over the business, but I couldn't help but flatter myself just a little over the clever way I had got out of the mess. Vain hope!

"About two months later I received another letter from the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska. He reinclosed the $20 bill, saying that he had read with delight my letter announcing the unfortunate girl's approaching marriage and requesting me to purchase some suitable gift with the $20 to bestoy it upon the young woman at her marriage, with his best wishes. Another hard fence to take!

"But I was in the muddle over my ears, and there was nothing else to do but to scramble out the best way I knew. I devoted three or four days of miserable thought to finding a way out of the new complication before I had another inspiration. Then I wrote another letter to the gentleman at Sitka, Alaska.

"I told him that the girl and her fiancé had been compelled to elope in order to get married, owing to the opposition of his folks to his union with a sweatshop girl, and that I had been unable to find out where they went, although I had ascertained that they had left New York for good. I returned the $20 bill again, praising the sender of it for the kindliness which had prompted him, and so on.

"But it was the fateful $20 bill, sure enough. Two months later it came back to me. The gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska, sent me a very long letter, in which he told me all the circumstances of his life. He said that there wasn't much to do at Sitka, Alaska, except to read, but set forth the fact that he lived so far from civilization that he couldn't get hold of the kind of books he wanted. Therefore he returned the $20 to me, saying that he knew that in the goodness of my heart I would be willing to devote the money to purchasing $20 worth of books for him and having them shipped to Sitka, Alaska. He didn't say whether he wanted novels or biographical works or books of travel or history. Just books. There was no other way. I had to go out and spend an afternoon buying books for the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska.

"Just as soon as ever he received those books the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska, sat down and sent me a long, enthusiastic letter, saying that I had picked out just the kind of books he wanted. Then he went on to say that he had a number of little nieces living down in Alabama. The town in Alabama in which his little nieces lived didn't have much in the way of stores, he wrote, and, as Christmas was coming on, he would be enormously obliged if I would take the $20 bill which he enclosed and buy a number of little gifts in the New York stores for his Alabama nieces. He told me the names and ages of the nieces, and requested me to use my own judgment as to what I should purchase for them by way of gifts. I had to execute that commission, of course, and take valuable time to execute it, too.

For more than two years after that, I was obliged to act as a sort of New York agent for the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska. Any time he wanted anything in New York for himself or for his relatives living in the United States he would sit down and write me a laudatory letter and enclose the money. I resolutely performed every commission he asked me to perform. I had started the whole thing going by a white fake, but, white or not white, it was my duty to atone before heaven for the sin, and I atoned. After two years of it, however, I went to Europe and remained there for several months. When I returned to the States a large stack of letters from the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska, was waiting for me. The last one reproached me mildly for not answering his letters, and I didn't answer them. The affair taught me a lesson. I didn't allow my picturesque fancy to run away with me again in any way liable to cause me future trouble after that affair with the gentleman living at Sitka, Alaska."

WHAT IS THE SARGASSO SEA?

Columbus did not use the name Sargasso Sea. Oviedo, whose Historia contained the first general account of the discoveries in America, was the first to apply the Portuguese word Sargaco (seaweed) to that part of the ocean in which gulfweed is prevalent. The use of the noun sargasso or sargassum is now practically confined to this species of a large genus of seaweeds characterized by little air bladders, each on its own stalk.

The name Sargasso Sea is applied only to that part of the Atlantic in which the weed is found in greatest abundance. Our map follows Dr. Krummel's delineation of the general mass of floating vegetation, and distinguishes the smaller area which is the Sargasso Sea. The sea is roughly elliptical in shape, its great axis almost coinciding with the Tropic of Cancer, while the two foci are near long. 45 degrees to 70 degrees W. The only land masses in the sea are the Bermuda Islands, near which large collections of weed are often seen. The weed drift is thickest between 25 degrees and 32 degrees N. lat. and west of 40 degrees W. long.

The Sargasso Sea is about one-third as large as the continental United States; but outside this central ellipse, as the map shows, are others, larger in size, where the thinly scattered weed moves in the Gulf Stream or is driven by the prevailing winds. Dr. Krummel obtained these data by plotting on the map the relative frequency with which the seaweed has been met in the four seasons of the year between 20 degrees and 50 dgrees N.—[Cyrus C. FIELD NOTES.

Advertising Subterfuge.

FAULT has been found with this department a score of times since I have had charge, because interested parties were not permitted to blow their wares in the guise of horticultural news. I presume other departments of The Times have had similar criticisms. The introduction of these extravagant and otherwise questionable announcements as news is not admissible aside from the business end. It is not an effective avenue of publicity, as I will show by quoting one of these free ads., only changing the names. See what effect it has on your intelligence, and then you will understand. The following is the "news:" "Those who want to plant Mr. Early's trees should order now. His importations last year were the best ever brought to the Coast. Prof. Dunn, who is known and admired by every one in this valley who visited Milpitas this week, stated that the trees imported last season were the best he had seen in the State, and that he would hereafter recommend no other. Another proof that the Early trees are the best is that planters who last season ordered from other parties have now given Mr. Early their patronage. Here in Milpitas and at Calabasas last year ne sold 4500 trees. Only ten of these failed to grow, while those purchasing from other agents lost over 80 per cent. of the poor stuff for which they paid their hard-earned coin."

There is a lot more of the same kind, but this may remind some prospective purchasers of trees that a good nurseryman will not offend his patrons by such extravagant statements and unfair treatment of his fellow-nurserymen. The traffic in trees within the next six months will reach immense proportions throughout the State. I know of one grower who is now looking for 40,000 deciduous trees for his own planting. This extra demand will prove the opportunity of both honest and fraudulent propagators and dealers. Prospective planters should begin now to cast about for some good nurseryman, and not wait till the tail-end of the season and get left. One should know his nurseryman as intimately as he knows his banker or his grocer.

Doctors of Research.

OF the items decided upon for investigation by Prof. Wickson under the $9000 appropriation of the Adams fund, two are of peculiar interest to the fruit growers of Southern California, namely, those in charge of T. W. Hilyard and R. E. Smith. The former has been given the continuation of an investigation of chlorosis of citrus trees at Porterville and its relation to marly subsoil, including also effects upon deciduous trees, and experiments to prevent injury due to excess of lime. In the extreme southern part of the State defective coloring of orange leaves is so common as to scarcely attract attention, except from the investigating growers. We call this mottled-leaf "partial chlorosis" in the south. Whether it is due to lack of soil elements, to sub-strata of gravel and sand, or to disarranged physical condition of the soil it should be gone into deeply, as this disease or condition has something to do with keeping the orange output at the quarter-hundred-car mark. Old friends of Prof. Hilgard rejoice that he has again taken up his work after a long vacation. Prof. Loughridge will assist.

Prof. R. E. Smith will continue the investigation of pear blight and the peach blight. He has perhaps the most indigestible task set forth in the thirteen topics to be examined the coming year under the Adams fund. The pear-blight investigation is indirectly of great importance to Southern California growers, not that they are pear growers, but because the pear disease has a kindred in the walnut bacteriosis. Should Prof. Smith discover some new means of controlling the pear malady, which is barely possible through other avenues than the use of resistant stock, that discovery would throw some light upon other bacterial attack. It is a dozen-men job to follow out all the avenues open to Prof. Smith under the appropriation cited above, and the State appropriations for the regular work of the laboratory at Whittier and the station at Riverside of which he has charge. I would remind the fruit growers of the State that the law under which the pathological and experimental work at Whittier and Riverside was established throws some of the responsibility upon them. It provides that the growers may suggest lines of investigation, to be followed out by the laboratory if possible.

What Is a Trust?

IN view of the fact that certain fruit associations of California have been made parties to a suit in eastern courts charged with the limitation of trade renewed interest will be observed by the public in the acts and policies of our fruit organizations. The questions involved in this legal contest may be very broad and searching before the hearing is concluded, yet it seems that if it is possible to organize for coöperation, without violating the anti-trust laws, the fruit growers of this State are upon safe ground. That the orange and lemon producers may have the reminder of what the Cartwright Anti-trust Law has attempted in California the following extracts are taken from that enactment:

"A trust is a combination of capital, skill or acts by two or more persons, firms, partnerships, or corporations or associations of persons, or any two or more of them for either, any or all of the following purposes: (1) To create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce; (2) to limit or reduce the production, or increase or reduce the price of merchandise or of any commodity; (3) to prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transportation, sale or purchase of merchandise, produce or any commodity; (4) to fix any standard or figure, whereby its price to the public or consumer shall be in any manner controlled or established, any article or commodity of merchandise, produce or commerce intended for sale, barter, use or consumption in this State; (5) to make or enter into or execute or carry out any contracts, obligations or agreements of any kind or description, by which they shall bind or have bound themselves not to sell, dispose of or transport any article or any commodity, or any article of trade, use, merchandise, commerce or consumption below a common standard figure, or fixed value, or by which they shall agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure, or by which they shall in any manner establish or settle the price of any article, commodity or transportation between them or themselves and others, so as to directly or indirectly preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, or any purchasers or consumers in the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine or directly or indirectly unite any interests they may have connected with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity, that its price may be in any manner affected. Every such trust as is defined herein is declared to be unlawful, against public policy and void."

What Is Not a Trust?

MANY of the fruit associations have been organized long enough for the public to understand much about their policies and plans of operations. They have not gone into combination to do any of the following acts:

(1) To restrict trade or commerce. On the contrary, they have built up an immense traffic in fruit that would not have been possible without the lessening of the price of box material and supplies, the cheapening of packing expenses, the elimination of unnecessary selling expenses, the equalization of fruit distribution, the protection of their credits, the expediting of freight service and many other items relating to the handling their of products.

(2) To reduce production and increase prices. The average orange grower boasts every year of the immensity of the coming crop. His association makes no attempt to limit the acreage of new orchards or lessen the output of the old. If it increase the price, I believe it is in a legitimate way, and subject to the common laws of supply and demand. It has been made possible by coöperative effort to give the producer better prices and the consumer cheaper goods by the elimination of all unnecessary expenses and losses.

(3) To prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transportation and sale of a commodity. The tendency of the fruit-producers' organizations is to make competition in the manufacture of box stuff and other packing material. Failing somewhat in this, some of the associations have opened competative policies by engaging themselves in the production of packing supplies; they have held for competitive transportation for the benefit of themselves and their customers, and in self-protection have had to fight the car-line monopolies and have done much to control them not only for the fruit growers' assistance, but for other shipping interests with which the associations have no connections whatever.

(4) To fix prices to the consumer. The control of the selling price may be the charge upon which the eastern suit will hang a large portion of the weight against the associations. I do not say the exchanges would not fix prices upon citrus fruits if they could. That is a question of fact not germane. In the very nature of the case the fruit growers cannot control the supply; they do not deal in and monopolize a food necessity or illegitimately control their retail tradesmen. In fact, have no questionable relations with their retailers or their consumers. On the contrary, the sale of every car of fruit is either on order here, or in a fair barter and trade delivery. The associations think it better to run away from a poor market and find a better one than to try to starve their customers into high prices—both a good commercial idea and an imperative one in the case of a perishable product with no restrictions upon its production.

(5) To fix or graduate prices. I see nothing in the association plan in violation of the fifth commandment of the Cartwright Law, or contrary to the Federal laws under which the coming suit has been instituted. I see nothing in this plan but an intelligent way of fixing the asking price in California or immediately before the consumer. If the fruit combinations do anything more than would a goose-mother with her wares before fixing her live-stock prices the eastern lawyers will discover it. The alleged "combination" certainly protects its customers and the latter's by uniform grading, established sizing and continuity of service; it facilitates general trade by business-like distribution; it eliminates retail trade abuses wherever possible, does not cut out competition between its own members, is not against public policy, and I do not believe the courts will ever pronounce it unlawful and void.

What Is a Nectarine?

IN giving a list of fruits for home- a gentleman recently I was asked nectarine belongs. To the same fact, it is only a variety of the peach, of the same species. The peach was as Amygdalis persica until nearly it was placed in the genus Prunus mond, apricot, cherry, blackthorn The peach and nectarine originated for a long time considered of Persian dozens of varieties, yet the cultivation fruit has been so light in California alogued. It is an old idea that some of the of the nectarine have sprung directly of seedling peach pits. The characteristics are too divergent from those of the peach supposition reasonable. Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

says the dandelion as a bee plant is considered to be more and more important. It yields both pollen and honey at a time of year when they will do most good. They usually precede fruit bloom, and give the bees a stimulus that is very much needed just as they come out of winter quarters. While there is no such thing as dandelion honey on the market, and probably never will be, yet the little that is gathered, together with the pollen, goes to make brood at a time of the year when it counts.

we have no desire at all to sing the praises of a plant that may be regarded in some quarters as a pest, yet a great many valuable plants, as well as animals, have been condemned time and time again, only to find in the end that they were really friends. Sweet clover is an example of this; and in the bird line we will mention the crow, once regarded as a farmers' enemy, that is now considered a real friend. He is a scavenger and gatherer of injurious insects, while the ever-present sparrow, also regarded as a general pest, is not always a nuisance; indeed, good authorities seriously question whether it does not do more good than harm in destroying noxious insects, and acting as a scavenger of the streets. Shall we then be in haste to condemn a beautiful plant, beautiful if it were not so common?

bed of solid color phlox drummondi is very effective. Cannas entail considerable labor in the planting in the spring and removal to the house for protection in the autumn, but the phlox, being perfectly hardy, makes a permanent bed. Gardeners are now substituting them for the tender plants. After the tops are cut off in the fall a two or three-inch coating of stable manure insures strong growth the following season. If one happens to see a desirable shade all that is necessary is to make cuttings three inches long, plant in the open ground in a moist situation, and in three or four weeks plants will be procured.—[Town and Country importance of the invasion of new weed pests with seeds brought from other States is explained in Bulletin No. 88, just published by the Experiment Station. Seeds of dodder, Canada thistle, foxtail, sheep sorrel, and plantain were some of the impurities reported. The average germination of the alfalfa samples was 87 per cent. very gratifying to me to learn that at last there is capital that is not afraid to venture in a commercial plantation in Florida. There cannot be any if a practical field man is at the head and takes course in his work and is not hampered by red tape from headquarters. Camphor trees can be grown as cheap on thousands of acres of the lands of Florida, and the gum can be distilled and as cheap as in Formosa.

the method advised from the Texas man would that is, the mowing of the young trees a foot the ground. If this plan should be followed during the growing season the result would be the killing and the loss of the stock. The better system is to remove a portion of the tops at a time, whenever the trees are large enough to begin such removal, the trees are four years old, and such removal followed up three or even four times during season. Possibly True.

PROF. LEMSTROM'S observations of the effect of electricity in stimulating plant life led him to a suggestion as to the meaning of spines, thorns, needles, spikes and beards. He noticed that in the north the harvest was more abundant, and the annual wood rings of trees wider, in those years when there were most sun spots, therefore most auroral display, therefore most aërial electricity. Sharp points both collect and distribute this kind of electricity, and the plant would benefit by either. When electricity went from earth to air, running up the plant and off by the points, it would help the rising of the sap. When it went the other way, entering by the points and emerging by the roots, it would turn some of the soil nitrogen into nitric acid and nitrates. Thorns and so on may perhaps have other functions, keeping off animals, etc.; but this would doubtless be the most important. The electricity may take in part the place of sunlight, so that the plant can afford to do with smaller and fewer leaves. Corn, for instance, bears an immense quantity of fruit in comparison with its leaf surface.

Onion Growing.

THE best variety to plant depends on what kind of a market the grower has in which to dispose of them. If you think to market them in the early part of the summer, you must sow the seed or plant the sets early in the fall. August for this locality (San Gabriel.) For this season it is now too late, so that the grower would of necessity have to plan to sell the crop in the fall. The yellow Globe Danvers is a very valuable variety throughout California. Possibly the best onion for the main crop is the Australian Brown—if grown upon soil adapted to it. Good sandy loam that is well enriched will produce fine crops of this variety. It is the best keeper known.

Two methods are in vogue in onion raising. One is to sow the seed in a well-prepared seed bed, and when the plants are large enough transplant into the open field in rows twelve to fifteen inches apart and two and one-half inches apart in the rows. The other is to sow the seed in the open field at once.

Both methods have their advocates. For some unexplained reason transplanted onions will grow larger than when grown directly from the seed, and many hold that the labor of transplanting does not equal the cost of weeding and thinning the plants where the seed has been sown in the open field.

Pure ground bone would be a good fertilizer to use, putting it on the ground before planting, at the rate of 1000 pounds per acre. Mix it well into the soil by going back and forth several times with the cultivator. Where one row only is planted a strip fifteen or twenty inches wide would be sufficient on which to spread the bone dust. Sow the seed thinly and evenly, about February 1st. Be particular to have the rows straight if you want to make it easy to do the cultivating.

When the plants are three or four inches high, thin out so that what is left stands two and one-half to three inches apart in the row, and keep out all weeds. Irrigate as often as needed to keep the ground in moist condition; that is, never allow the ground to get so dry that the plants will suffer for want of moisture.

I want to add a word of caution to the novice about going into the business of onion growing on a large scale, until he has had experience, and particularly about expecting to get the prices next year that were obtained this year.

Some 8000 acres are devoted to the business in the rich alluvial lands in the Sacramento Valley, that met with destruction last year by floods, thus causing a great shortage in the supply. This may not occur again for many years.

The beginner almost always undertakes too much and fails. Begin in a small way until you learn the details of the work.—[Q. A. Lobingier.

Southern California Distanced.

I PUBLISHED a statement recently to the effect that Covina held the citrus belt for the highest returns from an acre of orange trees, the same referring to the returns received by T. F. Griswold for his late Valencia orange crop. That statement was made before I had visited Oroville, near Table Mountain, and I am another "Truthful James." Some of the Oroville orange groves have produced $80,000 per acre this season. The "fruit" did not go through a packing-house, but through the washing machines of one of the forty gold dredgers that are plowing their way into the orange groves of this historic mining region, uprooting thousands of trees and raising the "dust" from the soil once worked over and left unprofitable by Bret Harte's heroes of old. The dredging use of this soil is superior to all other uses at present, and forty of these great boats are at work in sight of the city, each floating in its pond of water filled by a supply pipe. This is the last time this gold-bearing stratum will ever be tickled into giving up its treasure, and it will never feel a farm implement again, for the dredger leaves hundreds of acres piled twenty feet high with nothing but bare boulders where a few months ago the land was teeming with crops of fine oranges.

The October shipment of oranges was beginning when I visited Oroville two weeks ago. One house was putting up a splendid lot of fruit for the Australian market. Smooth, fine-skinned and typical in shape, the fruit was starting on its long journey to ripen on the way, for it was not colored a little bit. For the last two or three years the orange trees not raised with a dredger have been profitable, and there will be a fine lot of them left when the washing machines are silent. Growers were rather despondent a few years ago, but now the orange business is having a decided boom, both at Oroville and the adjacent citrus sections. The trees are not troubled with black scale, and a smutted orange is not known. It is said the commercial groves are free from pests of all kinds except a rare infection of the yellow scale. With this uplift of the industry it is no wonder the growers are anxiously coöperating with the authorities in the extirpation of the white fly. The county of which Oroville is the capital has now a live Horticultural Commission, and its fruit interests will be protected in the future.

New Grape.

AN entirely new kind of grape is being developed at the government experimental station near Lodi, and Prof. H. C. Husmann is of the opinion that it will result in a grape that will excel the famous flame Tokay, which has given Lodi so much fame. The new variety is somewhat similar to the Tokay in texture and color, but is impervious to the rain, is much firmer and can be shipped longer distances without damage. It appears to be a cross between a Tokay and Farerra, and is of an improved flavor. If properly developed it is expected to become a most profitable variety.

Prof. Husmann is due to arrive in Lodi next week, and he intends to set out about thirty varieties of grapes, five different kinds to each variety, for experimental purposes. Already 130 varieties of grapes are being grown at the station, and it is believed that the vineyardists will receive great benefits from the experiments being made at the station. Additional apparatus is to be installed at the plant in the way of thermometers to record the temperature to make comparisons with grape-growing points in France, Spain, Italy and South Africa.—[San Francisco Chronicle, October 26.

WAITING FOR MR. FROHMAN.

"When I was a very young girl," said Miss Louise Closser, the actress, "I had a wild desire to go upon the stage, so I left school in Boston, came to New York, and went to Charles Frohman's office on Broadway.

" 'Is Mr. Frohman in?' I asked of the office boy.

" 'No, he is not,' was the reply.

" 'Well,' I thought, 'I'll wait until he comes.'

"The boy became absorbed in the book he was reading, and apparently was quite unconscious of my presence.

"Fifteen minutes passed; a half hour passed, and I grew weary of waiting. But I thought of the long distance I had come, and at the same time recalled an old axiom I had once learned: 'Reward comes through constancy of purpose.' I repeated this again and again, until an hour and a half slowly dragged itself out. Finally, I could endure the waiting no longer. With as much courage as I could command I addressed the office boy a second time.

" 'Will you kindly tell me when Mr. Frohman will be in?'

" 'In six weeks,' answered the boy. 'He's gone to Europe.'

"A few seasons ago," concluded Miss Closser, "when I was a member of Arnold Daly's 'Candida' company, I one day related to him my first experience when calling upon a manager. When I finished telling the story, Mr. Daly said:

" 'How long ago was that?'

" 'Twelve years ago!' I replied.

" 'Twelve years ago,' mused Mr. Daly. 'Yes, I remember, I was that office boy.' "—[Success Magazine.

A Los Angeles Physician on Diet.

CONSIDERING that it is only about fifty years since the study of food values was seriously taken up, it is not surprising to find that there exists such a wide difference of opinion on the subject. No man in the world can claim to have thoroughly settled the dietetic problem. Some have got so far as to establish a working hypothesis, while many are not even so far advanced as that.

It is in Germany that the most careful and comprehensive investigations of food values have been made. These have been supplemented, more recently, by several interesting series of experiments at Yale University, undertaken by Profs. Chittenden and Fisher. There was also an interesting experiment at the University of California, a few years ago, on a diet of fruit and nuts under the auspices of Prof. Jaffa.

The experiments at Yale have proved conclusively that people eat altogether too much, especially too much albuminous food; also that an immense amount of energy is wasted by our bodies in getting rid of a surplus of food, and that overeating causes a host of needless ailments, together with lessening efficiency and prospect of long life.

The decrease in the estimate of the amount of albumin needed in a daily ration has been most remarkable during the past twenty years. From the 118 grams of Voit, and the 120 grams of Atwater, we have come down to as little as 30 grams, or a fraction over one ounce, instead of 4¼ ounces. This has been a great victory for the non-flesh eaters, as the supposed necessity for a large amount of albumin in the food has been the mainstay of the flesh doctrine. Notwithstanding this, we constantly see writers on diet, both medical and "lay," solemnly quoting the antiquated figures of Voit, like the old Democrats who are still voting for Andrew Jackson.

The editor is always glad to see members of the regular medical profession interesting themselves in the subject of diet, because they are still to a great extent looked upon as arbiters of such subjects, and are therefore in a position to do much good—or harm. Even if, as is so frequently the case, they enunciate false ideas, the mere stirring up of the subject must eventually result in good, as in the end the truth must prevail, and the truth is what wise men seek.

A pamphlet was recently received entitled "Some Settled and Unsettled Points of Dietetics." It is a reprint from the California State Journal of Medicine, of a paper read, a year ago, before the Southern California Medical Society, by Broadman Reed, M.D., of Los Angeles. Dr. Reed shows how many ailments are due to auto-intoxication, from wrong eating and drinking, and how faulty our standard diet tables are, in regard to the amount of proteid needed. He refers to the figures above quoted, of Voit, which is printed "Tait," evidently a typographical error. At the same time, Dr. Reed seeks to justify the extra generous feeding of tuberculosis patients, while they are kept constantly in the open air, or of neurasthenics, while stimulated for a few weeks in the rest cure, by massage and electricity. The editor of this department regards this as dubious doctrine. Dr. Reed himself qualifies it as follows: "But even in these affections, crowding of the food beyond the usual amounts by no means agrees with all cases, and there has been of late a notable reaction against it, as a routine measure, in lung diseases. In none of the neurasthenics can it be safely continued beyond a very limited period."

The editor wi'l go further than this, and say that a prolonged fast, until the digestive organs have recovered their tone, will in many cases be found effective, as a means of curing tuberculosis.

In regard to the milk and rest cure, which was recently widely advertised in Los Angeles, Dr. Reed says:

"When the stomach is dilated the large quantities of milk given in the usual rest treatment are likely to aggravate, and the same result often follows forced feeding when there are certain complicating conditions, especially a marked deficiency of the gastric juice.

"I recall one striking case of this kind which occurred during my practice in Philadelphia. A thin, nervous little woman had lost flesh steadily during an unduly prolonged rest treatment in which food was forced upon her ad nauseam, but gained upward of twenty pounds on a limited diet while the proper attention was being devoted to the needs of her digestive organs."

It may be remarked here that dilation of the stomach—a common trouble among people who have eaten or drunk too freely for a long period—may be gradually cured by a system of exercising the muscles of the abdomen, something like that practiced by the oriental muscle dancers. These abdominal muscles are greatly neglected in most systems of exercise.

Referring to the modern idea of liberal feeding in pneumonia, Dr. Reed suggests that possibly this may account for the markedly increased mortality in pneumonia of late. Undoubtedly, as the editor has frequently stated, the forcing of food—and drugs—into sick stomachs kills thousands for every one who dies of disease. In other words, if sick people could only be kept away from doctors and fool relatives, there would be vastly more recoveries.

Here is another quotation:

"There are several gastro-intestinal affections as to the proper diet of which authorities differ. This is notably true of those characterized by an excessive secretion of hydrochloric acid, hyperchlorhydria, gastroxynsis, Reichmann's disease and acid gastric catarrh."

In regard to this, Pawlow, the Russian scientist, has shown that "free fats" interfere with the formation of hydrochloric acid. Therefore, where there is an excess of such acid, a moderate amount of olive oil may be taken with advantage. A baked potato should also be eaten largely.

In regard to the starch question, Dr. Reed holds that starch and sugar, together making up the carbohydrate class, must, in any proper diet, compose at least three-fifths of the total nourishment. By no means. In an ideal dietary cane sugar is avoided altogether, as an injurious food, and very little starch is consumed. Such a dietary is one of fruits, nuts, salad plants and vegetables. It should be added that there is quite a difference in starches, as any one may see on examining the granules of starchy foods under a microscope. A mealy baked potato will digest readily, where soggy white bread, or hot cakes, will cause fermentation, acidity and other kinds of trouble. Dr. Reed recognizes this difference when he says:

"As to potatoes, these are rather less fermentable than bread, especially hot or fresh yeast bread, containing less starch and none of yeast germs which tend to produce flatulence. Indeed, I have usually found baked or boiled and mashed white potatoes to agree better with the average flatulent dyspeptic than any other vegetable."

Starch and cane sugar are a combination that readily cause fermentation. In fact cane sugar is a general disturber of the peace, and should be avoided by all who value their health. Dr. Reed's conclusion that "starch must in the long run form a chief part of the diet, if the nutrition is to be maintained" the editor regards as radically wrong. Starch not being digested in the stomach, but in the duodenum, causes an unnecessary strain on the vitality to dispose of it. The editor agrees with Dr. Alexander Haig, of London, that starch is not a natural food for man. Starchy foods are responsible for more sickness than meat.

In regard to fruits, that most important of all foods in the natural dietary, Dr. Reed does not write with much enthusiasm. He says:

"Then the old saying that 'one man's meat is another man's poison,' which has much of truth in it, is disputed by some writers on hygiene, and this leads to the question as to whether fruit should agree with everybody. There certainly are many persons who have either inherited or acquired such a sensitive condition of their gastro-intestinal mucous membranes that the more acid fruits—and sometimes any of them—taken raw especially, always irritate, causing griping pain, much gas and frequently diarrhoea.

"It is probable, nevertheless, that the fruits, though having small nutritive value along with laxative properties which, in so far, place them rather in the category of medicine than pure foods, are entirely wholesome for the majority of people when taken in moderation."

As the editor has frequently shown, when people cannot eat sub-acid fruits it is not on account of anything the matter with the fruit but on account of something the matter with the stomach. To elucidate this the editor cannot do better than quote the following statement of Dr. Tilden in the October "Stuffed Club." "The irritation of the stomach that some individuals experience on using any of the pronounced acid fruits is due to the sensitive condition from food poisoning of the lining of the stomach. There is also a chronic hyperacidity of the stomach where fruit irritates."

In other words, people gorge themselves on rich animal foods, and then blame the innocent fruit, like the old farmer who had been living on pork three times a day during "hog-killing time, and then one night before going to bed ate an apple, which gave him terrible cramps in the stomach, whereupon he vowed that he would never eat another apple.

Like so many other writers on diet Dr. Reed does not apparently fully realize the immense importance of the organic salts in food, which abound specially in fruits, salad plants and vegetables.

In concluding his paper Dr. Reed refers to the "stimulating beverages and condiments, whose relation to a normal dietary has never yet been entirely settled." The editor does not understand how there can possibly be any doubt, in the mind of a candid investigator, as to the position which "stimulating beverages and 'condiments" hold in a natural dietary.

A LONG BEACH correspondent writes to inquire whether the editor can tell her what is "Hodgkin's decease" (sic.) No, the editor wasn't even aware that Mr. Hodgkin was dead. Probably, however, the correspondent refers to "Hodgkin's disease," which has also been given by the learned medicos the crack-jaw appellation of "lymphademona."

This ailment is described in medical encyclopedias as "a form of anemia, characterized by a hyperplacia of the lymphatic glands, usually a hypertrophic condition of

D. C., says the California Fruit Grower. He has ... removing from the green persimmon its ... astringent quality, so that it will be possible from now on to so prepare the fruit actually on the farm that it may be shipped, marketed and eaten while still firm, and what is now termed 'green.' The marketing of this fine fruit has always been very seriously affected by the fact that it is not, in its natural state, fit to be eaten until it has become so ripe as to be on the verge of decay, and so not strictly wholesome, and certainly of no use for extensive shipping. This difficulty is now removed.

"Mr. Roeding has been working on this idea for the past two or three years, but actually produced the fruit in marketable quantities only a few days ago and had 1000 pounds of it shipped East by the Earl Fruit Company of this city, thus putting it into the regular channels of trade. He has also sent some of it in packages to Washington, to be inspected by the authorities there. The shipping was done in twenty-pound boxes, and the boxes were sent out in refrigerator cars.

"The process by which the astringent quality is removed from the fruit is simple enough, and is borrowed from a widespread practice in Japan. It is simply to place the fruit in tubs, from which saki, or Japanese 'rice beer,' has been lately removed. The tubs are hermetically sealed, and the fruit left in them from eight to ten days. When it is then removed, it is found to have altogether lost the unpleasant quality which draws one's mouth into a pucker with the first bite. The fruit may be eaten from the hand, like an apple. It seems that the fumes of the saki coming from the wood effect the change. For this purpose saki tubs of the regular Japanese make are used.

"The process is widely used in Japan, where the persimmon is a very valuable product. Some interest was taken in it by the Department of Agriculture of the United States, and Mr. Roeding is conducting, or has just brought to a successful close, the first experiments of this kind in this country."

A Great Joke.

A HUGE joke was played by some frisky Duluth "kids," on Halloween, the subject of the joke being an Austrian. They attached a piece of hay wire to an electric-light wire, and strung it in front of an Austrian boarding-house. The first man who stepped on it dropped dead. Wasn't that "bully" fun?

What can you expect from youngsters who are taught, every Sunday, that the impudence and violence and mutilation of the "Katzenjammer kids" are delightful qualities?

Aërated bread was introduced in London, when the editor was a boy, over forty years ago. He does not know the method of manufacture. If made with pure air it should be an ideal bread. Not many bakeries have pure air.

The editor has heard that hog fat is used in aërated bread sold in Los Angeles. This of course would make it objectionable to clean feeders. He doesn't know whether the statement is true. The correspondent could doubtless find out by "nosing" around a little.

"Clabber" Milk.

THE following dispatch from Berlin was recently published in The Times:

"German medical circles are discussing the investigations made by Dr. Ludwig Reinhardt, the noted Austrian hygienist, of the theory that curdled sour milk, prepared under certain conditions, is not only a sovereign cure for digestive maladies, but a veritable elixir of life.

"Prof. Hermann Strauss of the University of Berlin, and Prof. Metchnikoff, the noted French bacteriologist, who attended the recent hygienic congress here, are among those who deem the subject of importance. Prof. Metchnikoff's investigations along this same line are well known.

"Dr. Reinhardt declares that the use of milk which, after being slowly heated to a certain temperature, is allowed to become thick and sour, will prolong life materially, if taken regularly."

It is scarcely necessary to remind intelligent readers of the Care of the Body that there is no such thing as a "sovereign cure" for digestive maladies, or any other maladies, or that there is no "elixir of life," except to live right.

The following communication has been received from Dr. Carl Schultz of Los Angeles:

"Seeing in the Care of the Body department of September 1 an article on sour milk, I may be able to throw some light upon this subject, having prescribed the thick milk, in my thirty years of practice, as a food and a remedy, with good success, in liver and kidney diseases, especially Bright's disease. The clabber milk is more easily digested than fresh milk, because the first stage of digestion, the coagulation of the albumen, is already accomplished. It also acts favorably on the bowels in constipation. The preparation of the milk is of the utmost importance. Many people put the milk on the back of the stove to sour it quickly. This is wrong, because the heat interrupts the natural process of chemical changes and makes the milk indigestible. The best way is to put the fresh milk in bowls and have an even temperature in the room, which must be free from draughts. The bowls must not be moved or shaken. In summer, the milk will be thick in twenty-four hours, and not very sour. The clabber milk should never be eaten with sweet milk or sugar,

Care of the Body.

as many people do. Of course it is not a cure-all. It is a valuable accessory to other natural methods."

To the above suggestion as to preparation, the editor would add that the milk should be exposed in a place where the air is as free from germs as possible. Otherwise, milk being an ideal culture medium, it is likely, in twenty-four hours, to absorb a larger number of microbes than can be "negotiated" by any stomach much less powerful than that of an ostrich. Indeed, one of the main drawbacks to all milk products is that they so readily absorb impurities.

The article referred to by Dr. Schultz was published in the Care of the Body on September 1. In it, reference was made to the fact that curdled milk is now famed as a remedial agent in the Pasteur Institute, in Paris. The late Dr. Trall was quoted as saying that in his opinion the lactic acid found in sour milk is like vinegar, a product of destructive decomposition, instead of organic formation, and hence is in no sense an aliment. A farmer and dairyman was quoted, from "Physical Culture," as saying that no farmer around his locality would drink sour milk, any more than he would eat sour fruit, or any article that has commenced to decay. He said that the effect of sour milk fed to hogs was to intoxicate them. The cause of its being intoxicating he believed to be that the sugar in it turns to alcohol, as it does in the process of making liquors. This correspondent pertinently added: "I don't consider that the few old people that may be hunted out who drink sour milk furnish any evidence that they may give this beverage credit for their long lives, as the three oldest men that I know in this locality have been downright bums, and used tobacco all their lives, or since they were old enough to do so."

The coagulation of the albumen in milk is one of the objections raised against cooking or sterilizing milk, as it makes the milk hard for the stomach to digest. This coagulation in cooking is, however, a different process from the coagulation that takes place when milk becomes sour. This is brought out in the following two communications, addressed to the editor. The first is from Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, as follows:

"About curdled milk. The advantage is simply this: When milk is curdled before it is eaten the process of mastication breaks it up into minute particles, so that it is tolerated by the stomach; whereas milk swallowed in the ordinary state, when coming in contact with the gastric juice in the stomach, forms large tough curds, which dissolve slowly. This is especially true if a small amount of milk is taken in cases in which there is an excess of gastric acid. In such cases the taking of a larger amount of milk will result in smaller and softer curds. If barley water, or cereals of any sort are mixed with the milk, as in the form of porridge, the curds formed are more pliable.

"It is not the coagulation of albumen that renders it difficult of digestion, but it is the hardening of albumin which results from high temperature, when it is exposed to boiling or roasting heat. Raw albumin is more easily digested than cooked albumin."

The second letter is from Dr. W. R. C. Latson, editor of Health Culture:

"The fact is there are two forms of coagulation. One results from the action of heat, and this denaturalizes the proteid. 'When you cook the proteid you kill it,' may be said of most forms of proteid. In milk, for instance, there are four albumins, caseinogen, lactoglobulin, lactoprotein and lactalbumin. Caseinogen and lactoprotein not coagulable by heat; lactalbumin and lactoglobumin are coagulated at a temperature of 77 degrees C. (170.6 degrees F.) Thus, it will be seen that to raise the temperature of milk to the boiling point (212 degrees F.) is to denaturalize it—to kill it from a food standpoint. This is why the babies fed on boiled milk persist in dying with such alacrity and unanimity.

"Now, the coagulation which occurs during normal gastric digestion is a very different process. Taking again, for instance, the albumins of milk, we find that the salts, the acids, the rennin and the gastric juice which the milk meets in the stomach act in various ways to so change the milk as to cause its conversion ultimately to 'peptone' in which state only it can be absorbed through the walls of the stomach.

"The caseinogen, which forms about 80 per cent. of the milk, is promptly coagulated by the rennin and becomes what is called casein. Later the casein curdles, and then goes through a number of other chemical transformations ending as an 'amphopeptone' capable of passing through the walls of the stomach directly into the blood. Other proteid ingredients of milk are acted upon by the acids, the pepsin and the salts found both in the stomach and in the milk itself.

"It will be understood, then, that coagulation of the milk is the first act of its digestion, and that in this act acids are an essential factor. I may add that the acids of fruit, mainly malic, citric, oxalic and tartaric, so far from obstructing or complicating this process, actually facilitate it.

"So you see there are two kinds of proteid coagulation—temperature coagulation and enzyme coagulation. The former denaturalizes, kills; the latter digests, peptonizes."

The Minister's Whisky.

THERE was no fire in the smoking-car, and everybody was blue and tremulous with cold.

"My feet fairly ache," said a clergyman.

Then a drummer, winking at his neighbors, pulled out a flask of whisky.

"Here's the best thing going for cold feet, friend," he said.

And the clergyman extended his hand for the bottle eagerly.

"You bet it is," said he.

He poured a huge drink into the glass, lifted it toward the drummer with a "Here's looking at you, sir," and then, slipping off his boots, emptied the whisky into them.

"In two minutes my ice-cold feet," he said, "will be in a warm glow. Whisky, poured into the boots, warms the feet like a hot stove."

Buzzard Feasts.

ELEVEN employes of a Los Angeles business house were recently poisoned, after lunching on corned beef, put up in Chicago, and the lives of several were for a time despaired of. After the disclosures of "The Jungle," any one who eats packing-house products must be placed in the same class as those who use "perfectly safe" gasoline stoves.

Again a banquet of buzzard meat proved a death feast for four Italian railroad section hands, in Kentucky.

Thousands are killed every year by eating the flesh of hogs, fed on slaughter-house refuse, although the cause is not recognized, and hundreds of thousands thereby have their blood so poisoned that they become an easy prey to disease.

Marriage of Relations.

AN ARIZONA young woman writes to inquire about the advisability of her marrying a cousin. She says her parson told her it would be "damning both body and soul" to enter into such a marriage, and that the children from such a marriage would be degenerates.

The correspondent says she has read The Times magazine faithfully, to see if she could find any advice on the subject. She may have read it faithfully, but not very carefully, for it is only a few weeks—or months, at the most—since the editor replied to a similar inquiry.

If all the progeny of cousins should turn out to be degenerates there would be a great many more degenerates in the world than there are.

As the editor said, in answering the previous inquiry, there is no objection to the marriage of cousins provided they have not both a tendency to the same disease, and are not too much alike in disposition. For instance, they should not each be phlegmatic, or, on the other hand, nervous, or these traits will be exaggerated in the children.

Again repeating what the editor previously said, it would not be well for the children of such a marriage to again marry into the same family. Stock-breeders know that in this way the breed soon "runs out."

Sentiment and Marriage.

THE National Purity Federation will hold a congress at Battle Creek, Mich., opening October 31, and closing November 6. It is announced that the Federation has resolved to teach better methods of scientific and spiritual marriage. "Less sentiment" is to be the cry.

In the opinion of the editor, it is not less sentiment, but better sentiment, that is needed.

The Latest "Breakfast Foods."

HEALTH authorities in Pennsylvania are investigating a charge that corn stalks are used in some of the patent "breakfast foods." Some time ago the editor suggested that alfalfa might be worked up into a paltable "breakfast food." Ground alfalfa has been manufactured for some time in Fresno, for cattle. Recently, a statement was published to the effect that a food of this kind was actually being placed on the market. Doubtless it would be more appetizing than some of the much-advertised "health foods."

The hygienic food business has become almost as big a graft as the drug business.

Consumption Not Caused by Microbes.

DR. J. J. LAWRENCE, editor of the Medical Brief, "exclusively for and in the interest of the medical profession," wrote recently in that magazine, as follows:

"A correspondent asks if, in our opinion, consumption is caused by a microbe, and is tuberculin a cure for it. In reply, I will say, in the opinion of the editor, consumption is not caused by a microbe, but is a house disease. It is a fact that nearly all menagerie animals die of consumption, and no wild animal not confined ever dies of consumption. In regard to tuberculin, it is a fake and never was of any value in consumption, and is played out, as the editor predicted. It is one of the foreign fads that was taken up by so-called scientific men."

Sure! It's taken the doctors a long time, however, to realize this, hasn't it? Even now, many of them don't seem to have "tumbled."

Woman's Work.

REFERRING to a recent statement by the editor of the Care of the Body regarding the large number of women who are entering the literary field, a correspondent—herself a "literary feller"—writes:

"That was rather a jolt you gave us nine women Sunday. Literature, however poor, is the product of leisure—the overworked modern man hasn't the time for it, and it is left for the fortunate women with husbands to support them, to so earn a little pocket money for chewin' gum. She gets all sorts of knocks on lack of domesticity, but many of them miss their mark. Most married women have some leisure to employ as they please. Isn't some such employment of it more likely to make her a companion, and equal of her husband and her children—a broader, and better wife and mother, than if she employs that bit of leisure in gossip or scandal with a neighbor, or even working harmless, impos-

[illegible] and Body.

[illegible] to the leading article in the Care of the [illegible] of October 27, "Influence of Mental Attitudes," [illegible] Hoyt, of Chillicothe, O., and to the editor's [illegible] thereon, a correspondent claims that the ar- [illegible] "clear case of rape of Thompson Joy Hudson's [illegible] Mental Medicine," a book that was reviewed here [illegible] years ago. Most writers on this subject have [illegible] followed Hudson's lead. As the editor has [illegible] said, Hudson claims too much, in calling his [illegible] the dual mind a "law." It is, in the opinion [illegible] editor, simply a clever and plausible theory.

[illegible] correspondent also intimates that the editor is in- [illegible] belittle the influence of the mind over the di- [illegible] functions, and that if you only think right, you [illegible] nearly eat what you please. [illegible] in Los Angeles was recently announced of a [illegible] young athlete, who went hence at the [illegible] He had for two years held the South- [illegible] inter-collegiate records for the shot-put [illegible] Time and again, in field meets, he [illegible] the weights farther than any other competitor, [illegible] the plaudits of his school. The strain, con- [illegible] his severe efforts, taxed his powers of endurance to the limit. His health broke down, he left college, in order to regain his strength, but continued to fail. After leaving school, he held a commercial position, but was obliged to resign, after a short service.

This is only another of the numerous incidents illustrating the fact, frequently stated here, that it is a great mistake to confound muscular strength with health. All this physical-culture business, that has been such a profitable thing to correspondence schools, during the past few years, is a dangerous mistake. Great muscles are developed at the expense of the general vitality, and it is a notorious fact that phenomenal athletes seldom live long.

If you have set your mind upon great strength, then go for it, but know that you do so at the expense of your health, and of your expectation of long life. As Prof. Warman says, physical training might in most cases be more correctly designated as "physical straining."

A Philistine's Good Sense.

ELBERT HUBBARD may perhaps be something of a "poseur"—we all have our little weaknesses—but he writes many good things. Hubbard and his wife recently lectured in Los Angeles. He was quoted as saying

"I am 51 years of age and I have never taken a dose of medicine of any sort, and I never expect to. I believe that all might have the same sort of physical condition if they would only live naturally and rationally and evenly."

Good, sensible talk, this.

A Cold is a Fever.

A CORRESPONDENT draws attention to the folly of the old saying: "Stuff a cold and starve a fever."

As the editor has so frequently said, a "cold" is a fever, and is so called in other countries, except Germany, whence we get the misleading word.

Circumcision.

AMONG other forms of surgery, circumcision has become quite a fad. In a Los Angeles county town a young man recently submitted to the operation before marriage, his asserted object being to diminish the ardor of his passion. It did not work. If he had studied the Jews, he might have saved himself trouble.

As previously stated, circumcision, like other surgical operations, is only indicated in abnormal cases, and it is never necessary if proper precautions are taken at birth.

Beef "Tea" and Urine.

LAST week under the heading "Milk versus Beef Tea," the following appeared:

"On the other hand, beef 'tea' is now recognized by intelligent physicians as just about equivalent in value to wine, being composed of excrementitious matter from the animal, plus water, so that a cupful of milk contains more nourishment than a gallon of beef 'tea.' It is merely a harmful fever-provoking stimulant. Yet for fifty years this has been fed to fever patients—and still is."

What the editor wrote was not "wine," but "urine." Quite a difference.

CUTTING MAHOGANY

OBSTACLES IN THE WAY OF LUMBERING IN THE FORESTS OF HONDURAS.

[New York Sun:] "There are vast tracts of pine timber land in Honduras, the timber on which will some day become of great commercial value," said R. H. Ormsby, a representative of the Belize State and Produce Company, an English corporation holding concessions in Honduras. "Mahogany furnishes the material for profitable lumber operations at present.

"The methods of getting out mahogany in the Honduras forests are primitive. The climate of the country is tropical and the forests low-lying and swampy. Only eight weeks in a year are available for moving the cut from the camps; and its movement being done solely by oxen, its rapidity may be imagined.

"Mahogany is abundant, but the difficulty of lumbering it and getting it moved is a great handicap. I have been investigating the methods of handling timber in the southern yellow-pine districts, and if we can adapt them to the woods of Honduras the problem of more profitable management of the mahogany industry in Honduras will have been solved.

"The system of labor with which we have to contend down there is peculiar, too. Laborers are hired for one year, under contract which calls for three months' wages to be paid to them in advance.

"The men go to the woods and remain there until Christmas. Then they all leave work and return to their homes to celebrate. They bring several months' wages with them, and do not go back to work until they have spent it all. Their money gone, the men return to the forests.

"This refers only to the common laborers. The lumbering of mahogany requires the service of expert woodsmen, who are paid according to the tasks they accomplish.

"Mahogany trees do not grow in clusters, but are scattered throughout the forests and are hidden in dense growths of underbrush, vines and creepers. It requires a skillful woodsman to find them.

"He seeks the highest ground in a forest, climbs to the top of the tallest tree and surveys the surrounding country. The mahogany tree has a peculiar foliage, and the practiced eye of the woodsman soon picks them out.

"Following the timber looker, as he would be called in American forest work, comes the axman, and then the sawyer and hewer. A large mahogany tree will take two men a day to fell it.

"The trees have large spurs which project from the trunk at its base, and scaffolds must be erected so the tree can be cut through above them. This leaves a stump from ten to fifteen feet long, which contains the finest of the lumber, but which under the methods of lumbering that prevail must be allowed to go to waste.

"The day will perhaps come when these stumps will be grubbed out just as the stumps of American black walnut are being grubbed now, the relics of wasteful days of cutting when that timber was plentiful, and now worth many times more than the trunks that were cut from them.

"The mahogany hunter has nothing to do with the felling or removing of the tree. His duty is simply to locate it. Often he may earn as much as $1000 in a month, as he is paid by the tree, but then again he may prospect for weeks without detecting an available tree.

"Mahogany commands a big price in the markets to which it is exported, but it is not only because of its superior quality and beauty for the purpose to which it is put that it is so costly. To the difficulties and expense of getting it from its native forests and in shape for marketing, a large portion of its high valuation is due."

ROYALTY IN TRAINING.

THE KAISER'S SON DISCARDS UNIFORM AND ENTERS PRUSSIAN HOME OFFICE.

[London Mail:] Germany's future ruler, the Crown Prince Frederick William, today began at the Prussian Home Office one year's strenuous career as an apprentice in the science of local government. Discarding the dashing uniform of a major of the Cuirassier Guards, the slim, agile young man who is some day to sway the destitinies of Germany donned mufti and plunged eagerly into the unromantic routine of civilian administration.

While it is officially announced that his Imperial Highness takes up his new work at his own desire, the innovation is known to be part and parcel of the Kaiser's personal scheme for giving his heir a unique and exhaustive training for the duties of kaisership. The Crown Prince's entrance to the Home Office follows a preparatory course in local government which his Imperial Highness went through last year at the borough presidency of Potsdam, in consequence of an Imperial cabinet order in which the Kaiser declared: "It is my will that my son, in accordance with his wish and the traditions of my house, shall be initiated into a knowledge of civil government."

Through a similar cabinet order, dated October 7, the Kaiser gave his official assent to his son's joining the staff of the Home Office for the period of one year, with a corresponding release from military duties. It is the first instance on record in which a German Prince has ever been separated for so long a period from soldiership.

The Prince will work at the Home Office in Unter den Linden according to an exhaustive programme devised by the Home Secretary, Herr Von Moltke, and approved by the Kaiser. It provides practical participation in important administrative affairs, together with conferences and trips of inspection to various parts of the kingdom, while the leading scientific authorities and practical men of affairs will appear before the imperial civil servant from time to time and illuminate the various phases of his official career.
